To work fearlessly, to follow earnestly after truth, to rest with a childlike confidence in God's guidance, to leave one's lot willingly and heartily to Him,---this is my sermon to myself. If we could live more in sight of heaven, we should care less for the turmoil of earth.

SOCIETY NOTES

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Mitchell, who are still at Manchester, will leave for the South about the middle of this month, where they will spend the balance of the winter at Fernandina, one of the delightful island resorts off the Florida coast. The Andrew Carnegie, 2nds, left Manchester for their winter home at Fernandina before the holidays.

Greeley S. Curtis of Salem, of the firm of Burgess Co. & Curtiss, builders of aeroplanes, was seriously injured at the plant in Marblehead Thursday of last week. Mr. Curtis, with the superintendent of the plant, was standing on the runway, tuning up the propeller of one of the new government aeroplanes to try out a new engine, when he slipped and the propeller struck him in the left leg, causing a common fracture and injuries to his face and body. A physician was called, and after an examination Mr. Curtis was taken to his home in Salem in the police ambulance.

Miss Helen Frick, who is dividing her time this winter between New York and Pittsburg, with an occasional week-end visit to Pride's Crossing, is to give a theatre party of 200 of her friends in Pittsburg next Monday night, Jan. 6.

Francis I. Amory and family, who have been spending the fall at their Beverly Cove residence, where they went in late September after spending the summer in Europe, have gone to Boston for the rest of the winter.

The most important society event of the week in Boston, and one which counts for so much with subscribers, will be the first of the two assemblies, to be held tonight in the ballroom of the Copley-Plaza.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Bradley of Boston and Pride's were in New York over New Year's.

Mr. and Mrs. Gardiner M. Lane have had their Manchester home open during part of the holiday season.

SOCIETY NOTES

Mr. and Mrs. Francis M. Whitehouse left Manchester Tuesday for a ten days' trip to Washington and New York.

H. M. Sears of Pride's, has purchased the sonder boat Ellen of C. P. Curtis. This transaction would signify that Mr. Sears will use the Ellen in connection with the international matches next season, and, therefore, not place an order for a new boat. Mr. Curtis is to have a sonder from designs of W. Starling Burgess.

Mr. and Mrs. Prescott Bigelow went to Chicago to spend New Year's with their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. David Nevins Bigelow. Miss Elizabeth Bigelow went to Chicago to spend Christmas. She will return to Boston with her parents.

The Boston Herald printed the following item Monday afternoon, which is substantially true: "Miss Clarina Hanks, Misses Anna Hamlin and Miss Leslie Richardson, Hub society girls, figured in a life-saving at Manchester Sunday. While bob-sleighing through the woods between Manchester and Hamilton, accompanied by Richard Burnester and Terence Johnston, Harvard students, they came upon a man who had fallen in the snow and was nearly dead from exposure. After trying in vain to revive the man, the girls and boys lifted him into the sleigh and galloped their horse all the way to the village. In lieu of a better place, they took the man to police station. All the police officers were out, so the man was left, still unconscious, on the floor of the police station house. When Chief of Police Converse came in from a drive, several hours later, the man was pretty well thawed out and showed signs of life. When the man was unable to tell how he got into the station house the chief put him out into the street. When last seen he was leaving the village in the direction of Beverly. Later the girls returned to see how their patient was doing. When they learned the chief had put him out, they were very indignant."

SOCIETY NOTES

Dr. J. H. Lancashire, who has been in Boston, at the Copley-Plaza, over the holidays, with members of his family, motored to Manchester Tuesday, prior to starting the next day for his home in Detroit.

Rev. Sherrard Billings has decided not to sever his connection with Groton School, with which he has been connected for a number of years, for he has declined a call to fill the rectorship of St. John's church, Beverly Farms.

Mrs. George von L. Meyer will be greatly missed as a hostess in Washington after the change in administrations has taken place in March. It is understood that the Meyers will return to Boston, where they will probably occupy their house on Beacon street, now rented to Hon. Robert Bacon, next winter. They will also spend much of the time at their estate in Hamilton. Mr. Meyer and his son, George von L. Meyer, Jr., spent Christmas in North Carolina, where they went on their annual shooting trip. Mrs. Meyer has been one of the most charming hostesses Washington has ever known and it is generally believed that she has entertained more distinguished foreigners at her home than any other Washington hostess. The Meyers have a large acquaintance abroad, as Mr. Meyer has served as ambassador to Rome and St. Petersburg. The two daughters are among the most charming of the group of North Shore girls who winter in Washington.

Prof. and Mrs. Barrett Wendell have decided that the wedding of their daughter, Miss Edith Wendell, and Charles Osborne at Trinity Church, Boston, on Jan. 18, and the breakfast to follow at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Barrett Wendell, Jr., (Barbara Higginson) which was arranged on a scale so small that they were reluctantly compelled to omit from the list of invitations many friends whom they wished to ask, is to go on as if the sadness following Mme. Wendell's death in New York had not clouded it.

Real Estate and Improvements ... Up and Down the North Shore ...

A new bungalow is being built on the Kimball estate, Smith's Point, Manchester for Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Harris of Salem. A. M. Killam of Manchester is the contractor. The building is located off Proctor street, but a short distance from the road, with a circular drive leading past the front entrance. As one comes up the main drive, and enters upon the long spacious piazza he finds a beautifully constructed door, through which one passes into the main reception hall. The hall is very large and contains a large fire place of faced red brick. Leading from this is the living room with its alcoves and spacious windows. Off from the living room through an open hallway, one finds himself in a good sized dining room with plenty of light and closet space. From this the kitchen, pantry and back closets are to be found with set-tubs and trays of soapstone in a most accessible place.

Leaving the lower floor one can reach the second floor by going up a back stairway or by a large open stairway leading from the front reception hall. On this floor are to be found three large sleeping rooms. Each room has three or more mediums sized closets.

The servants part has a separate bath room as has the owner's section of the house.

The finish throughout the house is of North Carolina pine, and is of the old Colonial style with the raised headers and low plinth blocks. The floors are of maple. The exterior of the house is of grey shingles and the roof is broken by three large dormers with a large overhanging roof on the rear making the back kitchen and pantry. The house will be ready for occupancy in a few weeks as the work on the interior is about completed.

Francis Andrews, who is a Freshman at the Massachusetts Agricultural College, spent part of his vacation in town a guest at the Albert Maslins, Lincoln street. He is also visiting his aunt in Beverly.

Operations were started this week upon the building of a large addition to the summer residence of Allen Curtis of Boston, at Beverly Farms. A Boston carpenter, in connection with Connolly Bros., is doing the work.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE.

The principal happening of the week at the Boston Opera House will be the first performance this season of "Pelleas et Melisande," set down for Wednesday evening, Jan. 8th. This fascinating work by Claude Debussy, the most modern of modernists in operatic composition, created a profound impression last year, not alone through its musical and dramatic values, but also because of the rarely beautiful series of pictures which formed the background for the narrative.

The production, designed in the first place by Mr. Urban, will undergo no change and the cast will be largely the original one, with a single notable exception,—Mme. Louise Edvina will be the Melisande.

Another French opera, but this time an old favorite,—"Carmen"—will have its first hearing on Saturday night. Although as usual the prices will be on the popular scale, the title role will be assumed by Mme. Gay, the most famous Carmen of the day and a much more than competent coterie of artists will assist her.

That on Monday evening, Mme. Tetrassini will sing in opera in Boston for the last time this season will be a matter of regret to the many who find her the supreme joy of opera. "Traviata" will be the bill and as Violetta, Mme. Tetrassini again will entrance her hearers with delight as she did on Christmas night. In Giovanni Zenatello as Alfredo, there will be a tenor of an eminence equal to that of the prima donna and Mr. Polese will sing the grateful music written for the ungrateful part of the father. The orchestra will be under Mr. Moranzone.

The fourth subscription performance of "Louise" will be sung on Friday night, with the cast of Saturday afternoon,—that of the premiere, with the exception of a new Julien in the person of Mr. Zenatello, instead of Mr. Clement.

On Saturday afternoon, "La Boheme" which has been one of the season's most popular offerings, will be given what is likely to be its last presentation.

One of the brilliant entertainments of last week in Washington was the costume ball Mrs. William F. Draper of Manchester, gave at her home on Farragut square, Thursday night, for her only daughter, Miss Margaret Preston Draper. The decorations were of the 18th century atmosphere, even to the quaint boquets on each of the supper tables. Mrs. Draper wore an empire gown of white satin with broad stripes of black velvet, and her daughter, representing a court lady of the time of Louis XV., was in pink and blue taffeta with white lace, both with powdered hair. Miss Helen Taft represented a colonial dame in pompadour taffeta and lace, and her brother, Robert Taft, a gentleman of the same period in brown brocaded velvet combined with golden brown satin and white lace. Miss Esther Slater, who is making her annual visit in Washington, Miss Julia and Miss Alys Meyer, Mr. and Mrs. James F. Curtis (Laura Merriam), Mr. and Mrs. Preston Gibson and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Leiter were others among the 200 guests. Before the ball there were numerous dinners.

"Apple Trees," the West Manchester estate of Mr. and Mrs. S. V. R. Crosby has been open for a week for festivities of the holiday season. The family remained over New Year's day.

NOT QUITE TRUTHFUL.

Most of us have seen fake advertising and perhaps marvelled at the audacity of the writers. Wonder has been expressed by us that the government did not stop it, but did it ever occur to you that the United States is also an offender in that respect?

We refer to the vari-colored posters seen in public places advertising the life of "ease and luxury" to be found in the United States Marine Corps. On these posters we see illustrated a life of care-free abandon, with apparently little real work, the nearest approach to it being to look serious occasionally when on parade.

But the life of the average enlisted man in the Marine Corps is quite another story. He finds quite all the work he desires, and if he joins the service with the lithograph posters in his mind, he is due to have the illusion shattered somewhat. Isn't this fake advertising?

Mary Garden says the Boston police, whatever they know about art, look pretty on the corners. The same to her.—Boston Herald.

MANCHESTER

George R. Dean of Smith's Express Co. is having a vacation.

Rev. Mr. Harrison and wife of the Province of Quebec are in Manchester for a prolonged visit with their daughter, Mrs. R. T. Glendenning.

Members of Allen Post and associates are invited to attend the installation of officers of the Sons of Veterans in Town hall next Tuesday evening at 7.30 o'clock.

Charles Hooper has been spending the last ten days at Glen Cove, L. I., and New York city, visiting at the former place, a former classmate and fraternity brother at Andover, Maxwell Bowdoin, who has been a frequent visitor here.

The joint installation of officers of Allen Post and Allen W.R.C. will be held this evening in the Town hall at 7 o'clock. Prior to the exercises a supper will be served from 5 to 7, to which, as well as to the exercises, the S. of V. and associates are invited.

THE MANCHESTER ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION ORGANIZES.

The Manchester Athletic Association organized last evening at a meeting held at the Town hall. There were a large number of young men and boys present and several women of the Resolutions Committee recently formed here, were especially invited to attend. The nomination committee made their report and election of officers.

The boys elected for their president, Frederick L. Smith, whose efforts in behalf of the association have been untiring and to whose influence and work the founding of the organization is largely due. Gordon Northrup was elected vice-president; Thomas Marsh, recording secretary; Frank L. Floyd, financial secretary and Louis Hutchinson, treasurer. George S. Sinnicks, George L. Knight, William Hooper, and Chester L. Crafts were elected for the board of directors, leaving two more members to be elected at a later date. The constitution, which had been previously framed, was read and accepted and will be presented for signature Saturday. The membership committee has done very commendable work and reports 150 names of men and boys interested, 125 of whom will join the association.

During the evening Mrs. Hattie Baker was called upon to speak in behalf of the Parent-Teacher association but replied that she could speak only for herself at that time. Mrs. Baker expressed her entire approval of the association as set forth in its constitution and in the enthusiasm of the young men and in their good work. Action will be taken immediately toward taking a lease of the old Catholic church on Friend's Court, now owned by Lewis Killam, and toward making necessary improvements and additions.

SOCIETY NOTES

Miss Gladys Munn of Washington has been a holiday guest of her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Boardman, at West Manchester.

Michael Kehoe has procured the contract to erect the new building to be built on Magnolia beach.

THAT BOY OF YOURS.

"The child grew and waxed strong and increased in wisdom and in stature and in favor with God and Man; and the grace of God was upon him."

How would you weigh your Boy—
By avoirdupois?
Nay, but by Troy weight,
By the celestial scales.
Naught else avails
To rightly estimate
Your Boy.

Weigh him as you weigh gold—
How much of precious metal does he hold?
Not only in the scale
Of Harvard or of Yale,
But in life's sturdy school
Where Conscience hath firm rule
And noble impulse governs all Endeavor great and small,
Although a Boy.

Weigh him as you weigh gold!
With conscience free and bold
And independent thought, with open eyes, Teach him to recognize Evil in whatever guise;
Yet so inwrought with good, still by the bad uncaught;
A brave and honest lad,
Your Boy.

Thus weighed and wanting not,
Happy shall be his lot,
A joy and pride to you,
For thus alone he can Give to the world and Heaven too, Assurance of a Man.

An incident which will show the vast difference in the Xmas spirit as manifested in different individuals was witnessed by a friend recently in a city not far away. It was a rainy day and the Salvation lassie who was collecting money for the benefit of the poor had entered a door-way of ample size where she did not obstruct the passage way. The owner of the store came out and requested that she move on as she was hiding the window display. This request was in a voice meant to be pleasant.

Not long afterwards my friend was passing a shoe store the doorway of which was narrow and in which another Salvation army woman was standing. The proprietor, evidently in a hurry came out of the door-way and as he did so happened to glance at the woman's feet upon which were no rubbers, and in a gruff voice said, "Come in and get a pair of rubbers." I did not find out whether she accepted his kind offer, but the incident shows that the kindness manifested, came from a very different spirit than that of the other store keeper.

PROLOGUE.

An irate British lord and his beautiful but petulant lady; the Hon. Penelope Drake, youngest and most cherished sister of his lordship; Randolph Shaw, a handsome and athletic young American, and a French count are the leading characters in this amusing and highly entertaining romance by McCutcheon, the prince of American story tellers. It captures the interest from the very first paragraph, and there is not a dull line in it from start to finish.

CHAPTER I.

In Which a Young Man Trespasses.

"HIS just an infernal dude, your lordship, and I'll throw him in the river if he says a word too much."

"He has already said too much, Tompkins, confound him, don't you know."

"Then I'm to throw him in whether he says anything or not, sir?"

"Have you seen him?"

"No, your lordship, but James has. James says he wears a red coat and"—

"Never mind, Tompkins. He has no right to fish on this side of that log. The insufferable ass may own the land on the opposite side, but, confound his impertinence, I own it on this side."

This concluding assertion of the usually placid but now irate Lord Bazelhurst was not quite as momentous as it sounded. As a matter of fact, the title to the land was vested entirely in his young American wife, his sole possession, according to report, being a title much less substantial but a great deal more picturesque than the large, much handled piece of paper down in the safety deposit vault—lying close and crumpled among a million sordid, homely little slips called coupons.

It requires no great stretch of imagination to understand that Lord Bazelhurst had an undesirable neighbor. That neighbor was young Mr. Shaw—

Randolph Shaw, heir to the Randolph fortune. It may be fair to state that Mr. Shaw also considered himself to be possessed of an odious neighbor. In other words, although neither had seen the other, there was a feud between the owners of the two estates that had all the earmarks of an ancient romance.

Lady Bazelhurst was the daughter of a New York millionaire. She was young, beautiful and arrogant. Nature gave her youth and beauty. Marriage gave her the remaining quality. Was she not Lady Bazelhurst? What odds if Lord Bazelhurst happened to be a middle aged, addepleted ass? So much the better. Bazelhurst castle and the Bazelhurst estates (heavily encumbered before her father came to the rescue) were among the oldest and most coveted in the English market. Her mother noted, with unctuous joy, that the present Lady Bazelhurst in babyhood had extreme difficulty in mastering the eighth letter of the alphabet, certainly a most flattering sign of natal superiority, notwithstanding the fact that her father was plain old John Banks (deceased), formerly of Jersey City, more latterly of Wall street and St. Thomas'.

Bazelhurst was a great catch, but Banks was a good name to conjure with, so he capitulated with a willingness that savored somewhat of suspended animation, so fearful was he that he might do something to disturb the dream before it came true. That was two years ago. With exquisite irony Lady Bazelhurst decided to have a country place in America. Her agents discovered a glorious section of woodland in the Adirondacks teeming with trout streams, game haunts, unparalleled scenery. Her ladyship instructed them to buy without delay. It was just here that young Mr. Shaw came into prominence.

His grandfather had left him a fortune, and he was looking about for ways in which to spend a portion of it. College, travel and society having palled on him, he hied himself into the big hills west of Lake Champlain, searching for beauty, solitude and life as he imagined it should be lived. He found and bought 500 acres of the most beautiful bit of wilderness in the mountains.

The same streams coursed through his hills and dales that ran through those of Lady Bazelhurst, the only distinction being that his portion was the more desirable. When her ladyship's agents came leisurely up to close their deal they discovered that Mr. Shaw had snatched up this choice 500 acres of the original tract intended for their client. At least a thousand acres were left for the young lady, but she was petulant enough to covet all of it.

Overtures were made to Mr. Shaw, but he would not sell. He was preparing to erect a handsome country place, and he did not want to alter his plans. Courteously at first, then somewhat scathingly, he declined to discuss the proposition with her agents. After two months of pressure of the most tiresome persistency he lost his temper and sent a message to his inquisitors that suddenly terminated all negotiations. Afterward when he learned that their client was a lady he wrote a conditional note of apology, but if he expected a response he was disappointed. A year went by, and now with the beginning of this narrative two newly completed country homes glowered at each other from separate hillsides, one envious and spiteful, the other defiant and a bit satirical.

Bazelhurst Villa looks across the valley and sees Shaw's cottage commanding the most beautiful view in the hills; the very eaves of his ladyship's house seem to have wrinkled into a constant scowl of annoyance. Shaw's long, low cottage seems to smile back with tantalizing security, serene in its more lofty altitude, in its more gorgeous raiment of nature. The brooks laugh with the glitter of trout, the trees chuckle with the flight of birds, the hillsides frolic in their abundance of game, but the acres are growling like dogs of war. "Love thy neighbor as thyself" is not printed on the boards that line the borders of the two estates. In bold black letters the signboards laconically say: "No trespassing on these grounds. Keep off!"

"Yes, I fancy you'd better put him off the place if he comes down here again to fish, Tompkins," said his lordship, in conclusion. Then he touched whip to his horse and bobbed off through the shady lane in a most painfully upright fashion, his thin legs sticking straight out, his breath coming in agonized little jerks with each succeeding return of his person to the saddle.

"By Jove, Evelyn, it's most annoying about that confounded Shaw chap," he remarked to his wife as he mounted the broad steps leading to the gallery half an hour later, walking with the primness which suggests pain. Lady Bazelhurst looked up from her book, her fine aristocratic young face clouding with ready belligerence.

"What has he done, Cecil dear?"

"Been fishing on our property again, that's all. Tompkins says he laughed at him when he told him to get off. I say, do you know, I think I'll have to adopt rough methods with that chap. Hang it all, what right has he to catch our fish?"

"Oh, how I hate that man!" exclaimed her ladyship petulantly.

"But I've given Thompson final instructions."

"And what are they?"

"To throw him in the river next time."

"Oh, if he only could!" rapturously.

"Could? My dear, Tompkins is an American. He can handle these chaps in their own way. At any rate, I told Tompkins if his nerve failed him at the last minute to come and notify me. I'll attend to this confounded popinjay!"

"Good for you, Cecil!" called out another young woman from the broad hammock in which she had been dawdling with half alert ears through the foregoing conversation. "Spoken like a true Briton. What is this popinjay like?"

"Hullo, sister! Hang it all, what's he like? He's like an ass, that's all. I've never seen him, but if I'm ever called upon to—but you don't care to listen to details. You remember the big log that lies out in the river up at the bend? Well, it marks the property line. One-half of its stump belongs to the Shaw man, the other half to me—to us, Evelyn. He shan't fish below that log—no, sir!" His lordship glared fiercely through his monocle in the direction of the faraway log, his watery blue eyes blinking as malevolently as possible, his long, aristocratic nose wrinkling at its base in fine disdain. His five feet four of stature quivered with illy subdued emotion, but whether it was rage or the sudden recollection of the dog trot through the woods it is beyond me to suggest.

"But suppose our fish venture into his waters, Cecil. What then? Isn't that trespass?" demanded the Hon. Penelope Drake, youngest and most cherished sister of his lordship.

"Now, don't be silly, Pen," cried her sister-in-law. "Of course we can't regulate the fish."

"But I dare say his fish will come below the log, so what's the odds?" said his lordship quickly. "A trout's a lawless brute at best."

"Is he big?" asked the Hon. Penelope lazily.

"They vary, my dear girl."

"I mean Mr. Shaw."

"Oh, I thought you meant the—but I don't know. What difference does that make? Big or little, he has to stay off my grounds." Was it a look of pride that his tall young wife bestowed upon him as he drew himself proudly erect, or was it akin to pity? At any rate, her gay young American head was inches above his own when she arose and suggested that they go inside and prepare for the housing of the guests who were to come over from the evening train.

"The drag has gone over to the station, Cecil, and it should be here by 7 o'clock."

"Confound his impudence, I'll show him," grumbled his lordship as he followed her, stiff legged, toward the door.

"What's up, Cecil, with your legs?" called his sister. "Are you getting old?" This suggestion always irritated him.

"Old? Silly question. You know how old I am. No; it's that beastly American horse. Evelyn, I told you they have no decent horses in this beastly country. They jiggle the life out of one"—but he was obliged to unbend himself perceptibly in order to keep pace with her as she hurried through the door.

The Hon. Penelope allowed her indolent gaze to follow them. A perplexed pucker finally developed on her fair brow and her thought was almost expressed aloud: "By Jove, I wonder if she really loves him." Penelope was very pretty and very bright. She was visiting America for the first time, and she was learning rapidly. "Cecil's a good sort, you know, even"—but she was loyal enough to send her thoughts into other channels.

Nightfall brought half a dozen guests to Bazelhurst Villa. They were fashionable to the point where ennui is the chief characteristic, and they came only for bridge and sleep. There was a duke among them and also a French count, besides the bored New Yorkers; they wanted brandy and soda as soon as they got into the house, and they went to bed early because it was so much easier to sleep lying down than sitting up.

All were up by noon the next day, more bored than ever, fondly praying that nothing might happen before bedtime. The duke was making desultory love to Mrs. De Peyton and Mrs. De Peyton was leading him aimlessly toward the shadier and more secluded nooks in the park surrounding the villa. Penelope, fresh and full of the purpose of life, was off alone for a long stroll. By this means she avoided the attentions of the duke, who wanted to marry her; those of the count, who also said he wanted to marry her, but couldn't because his wife would not consent; those of one New Yorker, who liked her because she was English, and the pallid chatter of the women who bored her with their conjugal cynicisms.

"What the deuce is this coming down the road?" queried the duke, returning from the secluded nook at luncheon time.

"Some one has been hurt," exclaimed his companion. Others were looking down the leafy road from the gallery.

"By Jove, it's Penelope, don't you know?" ejaculated the duke, dropping his monocle and blinding his eye as if to rest it for the time being.

"But she's not hurt. She's helping to support one of those men."

"Hey!" shouted his lordship from the gallery as Penelope and two dilapidated male companions abruptly started to cut across the park in the direction of the stables. "What's up?" Penelope waved her hand aimlessly, but did not change her course. Whereupon the entire house party sallied forth in more or less trepidation to intercept the strange party.

"Who are these men?" demanded Lady Bazelhurst as they came up to the fast breathing young Englishwoman.

"Don't bother me, please. We must get him to bed at once. He'll have pneumonia," replied Penelope.

Both men were dripping wet, and the one in the middle limped painfully, probably because both eyes were swollen tight and his nose was bleeding. Penelope's face was beaming with excitement and interest.

"Who are you?" demanded his lordship.

"Who are you?" demanded his lordship, planting himself in front of the shivering twain.

"Tompkins," murmured the blind one feebly, tears starting from the blue slits and rolling down his cheeks.

"James, sir," answered the other, touching his damp forelock.

"Are they drunk?" asked Mrs. De Peyton, with fresh enthusiasm

BOOK NOTES

New Volumes Added to Manchester Public Library

Those who have read that very interesting little book "American Shrines in England," by Alfred T. Storey, will be glad to know that another work on the same subject, but treating it in a much more extensive manner, has just been added to the Town library. "The American Pilgrim's Way in England" is a beautifully illustrated work. Of the one hundred and twenty illustrations in the book, some forty are in color. This work describes the homes, and tells of the early environment of many of the founders of our nation. By means of the illustrations, and the descriptive text, much information is conveyed to the reader in a very attractive form.

"Christmas" by Zona Gale, author of "Friendship Village," makes very appropriate reading for this season of the year. A little town out West, on account of its poverty, decided not to have any Christmas celebration. They called a Town meeting and so voted. As Christmas drew near, however, the spirit of the time made itself felt and many regretted the step they had taken. The arrival on Christmas eve of an orphan boy from another town so appealed to their sympathy that they decided to keep Christmas in the good old way. The story is a very pretty one, and is well worth reading.

"The Just Alike Twins" by Lazelle T. Wolley is a very good children's story. The description of Millicent and Marjorie, two little orphans, their joys and their sorrows, how they were lost and found, parted and at last got the same mother, is very prettily told.

A novel by E. V. Lucas, author of "A Wanderer in Florence," "A Life of Charles Lamb," and many other works—has just been added to the library. The man who tells the story in "London Lavender" is a middle-aged man who has started out on a walking tour. On one of these tours he comes across a very attractive inn. Instead of going back to London to spend the night as usual, he decides to spend it at this hostelry. He does not get back to London for several years. How he came to go back and what he did all those years make the story of "London Lavender." A number of the characters made familiar to us by his "Over Bemertons" appear again in this his latest novel.

We are glad to have another novel by Victor L. Whitechurch, author of those charming stories of middle-class English life—"The Canon in Residence," "Concerning Himself," and "Off the Main Road." This story has to do with the new rector, sent by the Bishop to take up the duties of the Vicar while away. "Left in Charge" makes very pleasant reading and is a worthy successor to the "Canon in Residence."

Kathleen Norris author of that sweet little story called "Mother" his written a novel, "The Rich Mrs. Burgoyne." The scene of the story is a small town in California. The coming of Sidney Burgoyne with two children to the town has a very beneficial influence on its social life. The same philosophy of life and motherhood that rang so true in "Mother" may be found in this novel. It is perhaps too much to hope that everything would turn out in real life as it does in "The Rich Mrs. Burgoyne," but the reading of this story may help us to take saner views of life.

Mrs. Carroll Watson Rankin has written a number of books for girls known as the "Dandelion Series." She is a Western woman and has been a writer for the Youth's Companion, St. Nickolas, The Bookman, and other magazines for a number of years. Two more of the series "The Adopting of Rose Marie" and "The Girls of Gardenville" have been added to the library. Most every girl who reads stories has heard of "The Little Colonel" books by Annie Fellows Johnston. She also lives in the West, her home being in Texas. The "Little Colonel" series at the library is now complete to date as among the new books this week will be found "Mary Ware's Promised Land" the last of the series.

Mary Johnston, author of "The Long Roll," a story about the Civil War, has written another novel on the same subject, "Cease Firing." She pictures very vividly the battles of Chickamauga, Kennesaw Mountain, Missionary Ridge, The Wilderness, and Gettysburg. She writes from the standpoint of the South. After reading "The Long Roll" and "Cease Firing" most anyone would agree with the statement of General Sherman that "war is hell."

Charles Farrar Browne—known to the American public of a generation ago as "Artemus Ward"—was an American humorist. He was very popular in his day. Present day readers know very little about his stories, so Clifton Johnson in "Artemus Ward's Best Stories" has done a distinct service to American literature in making this collection. The book has an introduction by Wm. Dean Howells. There are a great many good stories in this book. Those interested in Woman's Suffrage should read "Woman's Rights." His letter to his wife from Boston is very amusing. In his well known definition of Harvard College may be found—"This celebrated institution of learnin' is pleasantly situated in the Bar-room of Parker's, in Skool Street, and has poopils from all over the country."

We are glad to have another novel from the pen of Joseph C. Lincoln. This last story, "The Rise of Roscoe Paine" has to do with the struggle between a New York millionaire and some prominent citizens of Denboro on Cape Cod. It is one of his best, being full of the humor and homely philosophy of his Cape Cod characters.

"The Story of the Renaissance" by William Henry Hudson is a volume of some two hundred and sixty pages. It is probably the best short work on the Renaissance that is to be found in English today. An immense amount of information is to be found in this book and is given to the reader in a very charming manner. A complete list of the works put into the library is given below.

THE PROMISE OF THE FUTURE.

"It seems as though the world ought to be better, when we consider all the things that are being done for people," mused a man who was commenting on the fact that the present period in the world's activities seemed to be one of universal crime, unrest and disagreement. And to an extent we must admit our own ideas on this subject are quite apt to coincide with those of the speaker, who appeared to be neither an alarmist or a pessimist.

Truly, when we think of the great progress which has been made in the last quarter century in inventions, and the victories of science in kindred ways, we wonder that the same degree of progress has not been made along the lines of social betterment. For it seems that the world will generally have to plead guilty to the indictment of being lax in its duties to its fellow-men.

There are so many standards of right and wrong that all of us, even though we are an infinitesimal and comparatively insignificant unit in the daily life of this great universe, expect each other to live up to the little set of rules that we have formulated for our neighbor. So it is that on a larger scale of our "big brothers," the foreign countries, are misunderstanding each other just as much as we are. As the stage is set for the year 1913 and the curtain is drawn for our inspection we are apprehensive of the future, with all our assurance that the new year has a better harvest for us this twelve-month than it did during the last calendar year.

The time-worn plea of the man who is in error is that he "is not appreciated;" the obvious fact is that men are not understanding each other to the fullest extent. They are doing great and wonderful things for the common good which benefit each and every man to an extent, but the so-called factions which dominate the business and social affairs of the world are composed of such a conglomerate mass that improvements and betterments in the lives of the whole people are not assimilated by them in a way that will prove beneficial.

We are too prone to believe only what our finite minds can grasp. If a discussion of a theory or even a proven principle is not within the reach of we mortals; if it "goes over our heads," it is considered "bosh," and not fit for our consideration.

One of the mistakes that some of us make is to measure the enjoyment of others by our own; we do not understand how our neighbor can be interested in a certain movement or topic. And then we wonder why the world is not getting better, and instead apparently getting worse.

In this glorious age we have much to amuse us, plenty of opportunity for recreation. Shorter hours and higher wages is the rule of these years, yet how we differ in the enjoyment of these advantages. We have for one thing, the theatre to amuse us. But there is hardly any communal enjoyment of it in this country. We have the endowed opera, but the real and artistic appreciation of it is restricted to a surprisingly few persons. Only the man who has actually lived and dreamed in the realms of the opera has any artistic appreciation of it.

The manner in which our tastes differ in regard to our enjoyment of the theatre and the opera is perhaps a fit illustration of our conception of life in general. The endowed theatre is not considered a necessity in this country, although in the European centers it is an established institution. In like manner are certain conditions of society in different communities found to have a varying importance. In the United States labor seems to be virtually killing itself by its demands. The very epidemic of strikes and misunderstandings between capital and labor is undermining the stability of our business institutions.

In the same way is our idea of social obligation to each other dwindling and differing so much that all semblance of uniformity of opinion and tastes is disappearing.

It may be that there are many charitable movements that might be well replaced by preventative measures. Instead of having to aid our fellow-man in many cases we might do all possible to prevent his being placed in a condition not conducive to mutual happiness and prosperity. If in this way we help everybody, whenever, however, and wherever we can, we will be taking a great step toward mutual progress.

Whether it seems that, in the opinion of our philosophising friend, "the world ought to be better," or that the human race is really making strides for the common good, is an enigma, but most of us are quite willing to cast our lot with the present age and hope for the best.

THE PARCEL POST.

With the opening of the new year came a gift from Uncle Sam in the shape of the parcel post, a new department of the United States Postal Service. The innovation is certain to cause great changes in the department and in the administration of business.

With one ton of paving blocks waiting in a western office to be mailed as samples to all parts of the country and a half ton of prunes in one pound packages waiting mailing in California, striking examples of the magnitude of this new task on the postal authorities are shown.

Many people are rather sceptical as to how the new system is going to result, but it should be a wonderful aid to the small business firm whose parcels do not accumulate in large enough quantities to allow it to share in the freight rates charged by the express companies and railroads. It should indeed prove a new era and opportunity for the small business, for it will make each and every one a mail-order house, giving direct-to-the-consumer service from the small house as well as from those doing business on a larger scale.

Everything considered, the parcel post is about the most acceptable gift that the country could receive, and is one of the few measures which succeeded in getting through Congress that will directly aid the people as a whole. The public are also realizing how excessive some parcels rates have been, and will be quick to see the advantage of the government's innovation.

THE CHRISTMAS LOST.

Many visitors to the shrine of John Greenleaf Whittier will miss the old relics in the historic building cared for so sacredly for many years at Amesbury. On a morning when it would have been a delight to sit in a warm corner of the old home and read "Snow Bound" again, a fire began its ruthless work and lurid flames greedily consumed cherished mementoes.

Fortunately some of the manuscripts, although damaged by water and smoke, were protected by glass cases. The passing generation little realize the value of the relics of its famous men, but the newer generations who know "of" these men who have gone cherish the little things made famous by their associations.

The loss of many of Whittier's manuscripts was one that cannot be measured in terms of money, and the only consolation of the fire is that the building has been saved and some of the historic mementoes are in a remediable condition.

NEW YEAR'S COURAGE.

The following resolution which appears on the calendar of a church is worthy of emulation and would prove a great boon to human life if it were fully or only partially realized. Let these be your guide-posts during the next twelve months: "I will not worry. I will not be afraid. I will not give way to anger. I will not yield to envy, jealousy or hatred. I will be kind to every man, woman and child with whom I come in contact. I will be cheerful and hopeful. I will trust and bravely face the future."

There is a strange correlation in the coincidence that the very day that the cat in the State Prison thwarted Jesse Pomeroy's attempt to escape, a scientist at a convention read a paper on "Discrimination in Sound by the Domestic Cat." We cannot say what the author proved, but the prison guard knows where he had help.

Manchester voted wisely Monday night in buying the "Power House Hill" property. That hill, with its magnificent growth of centuries-old pine, is one of the most beautiful hills along the whole North Shore. It is one of the town's best assets. To cut off the trees would be to do irreparable damage to the town. The town now owns it for ever. True, we may have paid a thousand or two more than an individual could buy it for; but what of that. $8,200 is nothing compared to a deforested hill in Manchester's center. The town sold another piece of property for summer residence purposes, for $8500. The treasury is today $300 richer in actual dollars than a week ago.

As reviewer and purchaser of books Dr. Glendenning is rendering a valuable service to our town in his work for the public library. This is indeed a task for a broad mind, as too great care cannot be exercised in the choice of books that will be read in the homes. The library of any town is actually an extension university work. It is a good thing to give publicity to the additions to the library that the public may know what the books are.

One of the most striking statements of Congressman Gardner in his address at Beverly Farms was that concerning the supply of iron. It is conservatively estimated that the present supply of iron ore is sufficient to last one hundred years. What the nation can do without iron is a problem too great to solve with haste. Public education cannot begin too early that the present supply may be conserved and used to its greatest advantage and economy.

The effort which is now being made in financial circles to separate commercial and investment banking is fortunately gaining headway. For years the leaders in financial affairs have seen the wisdom of endeavoring to draw a line between commercial and investment paper or notes. If the question can be solved many of the delays incident to commercial banking and the risk in investment banking will be avoided.

The innovation Rev. Albert G. Warner introduced in taking his entire choir to Beverly Farms to sing at a service at the invitation of the Beverly Farms church is a splendid illustration of what the spirit of co-operation can do in churches.

John N. Willys of Pride's is doing a great work for public roads and it is to be hoped that the Federal Aid Good Road Association which he is organizing will do effective work in enlisting the National government interests in the construction and maintenance of more good roads.

The Indianapolis dynamite verdict was a triumph for justice. Unionism has its place, but it must not resort to violence. Instead of a detriment to honest union endeavors it will tend to benefit organized labor by compelling ethical standards which in the end must be a great help to unionism.

The reduction in the size of the state appropriation for the destruction of gypsy and brown tail moths is not indicative of a cessation of fight but economy in the administration of funds. The new gasoline sprayers are good ground coverers and money savers.

The logical candidate for the water board in Beverly is John L. Saltonstall and it will be a serious blunder if the city fails to avail itself of the experience which Mr. Saltonstall has gained in his study of the problem.

If the old belief be true, that the weather of the twelve days following Christmas forecasts the weather for the corresponding months of the coming year, 1913, will prove a mild and favorable year.

Better to have a resolution and break it than never to have made it at all.

If you take tar out of tariff what will be left but an uncertainty?

Take Mann from Manchester, there will be another man just here.

THOSE 24-CENT EGGS

The suspicion of the State Board of Health that some of the storage eggs being sold in Boston in the 24-cent campaign have seen better days is putting a brake on the sales at the various stands. While the movement of the campaigners is undoubtedly a worthy and deserving one, the methods of the co-called reformers who are conducting the sales of the eggs should be carefully looked into, or eggs unfit for use will be unloaded on the susceptible public. Another campaign is now being planned by Boston women in an effort to lower prices on commodities other than eggs.

PRETTY HOME WEDDING.

At a quiet home wedding at the residence of the bride on Norwood avenue, Manchester, Marion Cunningham Allen and Chester Larcom Standley, son of Selectman and Mrs. Horace Standley of Manchester, were married on the morning of New Year's day. The single ring service was read by the Rev. Clarence Strong Pond of Beverly Farms.

Only the sister and mother of the bride were present at the ceremony. The bride was attired in a becoming traveling suit. After the marriage Mr. and Mrs. Standley left for Wheeling, W. Va., where Mr. Standley is located as superintendent of the technical department of that district of the Western Union Telegraph Co. Mr. and Mrs. Standley carry with them the very best wishes of their host of friends in town.

Powder House Hill and Its Place in Manchester's History

One hundred years ago when England was making the practice of impressing sea men from our merchantmen into the British naval service, and was claiming the right of search of neutral vessels for the purpose of arresting deserters, the United States threw off her dormant feelings, and became involved in the great conflict known as the war of 1812.

On September first 1808, the citizens of Manchester met and prepared a document setting forth the loyalty of the town, and had it sent to Congress.

As the memorial did not bring any relief, another petition was adopted on Feb. 8, 1809, and was sent this time to the legislature, asking that some action be taken by the general court to afford redress. The resolutions adopted at this time may be found on file at the Selectmen's office.

On July 19, 1812, William Tuck, Esquire, was sent to Ipswich as a delegate to the county convention where the alarming situation of the country was discussed. At about this time the first warlike measures were taken by this town. First came the appointment of a Committee of Safety. The committee serving were Major Henry Story, John Allen, Andrew Marsters, William Tuck and Samuel Forster. This committee was instructed to have placed a watch along the coast and flag-staffs provided with flags for signals and alarms.

Breast works was then thrown up on Norton's Point, which up to within a few years was visible and a power house was built on what is now known as Powder House Hill. This power house was erected under the supervision of the Committee on Safety. They procured the services of Nathaniel Colby, then a young man, to deliver at the top of the hill bricks of good quality with which to build the powder house.

At this time Ebenezer Tappan kept a store on Central street in the building now owned by the Andrew Brown heirs. It was from this store that the powder was bought to fill the powder house after its construction.

Not one of our oldest citizens can remember ever hearing that the powder was ever taken out of the house during the war, but was removed some few years ago.

The buying of Powder House Hill brings to mind the days when the powder house was built, and this property coming into the hands of our town makes it more valuable for its old historic reminiscences.

The new officers of Magnolia lodge of Odd Fellows for 1913 are: Thomas Wiggins, noble grand; Geo. Matheson, vice grand; F. Clifford Rand, rec. secy.; Henry T. Bingham, fin. secy.; Edward A. Lane, treasurer. The installation will be next Thursday.

The burning question—coal.

WHY DON'T MEN GO TO CHURCH?

One of the most interesting meetings of the Baptist Brotherhood at Manchester was held last Monday evening. Rev. J. B. Palmer of Salem gave a very plain talk on "The Church." What is the matter with the church today? he said. Why don't men go to church today? This is the reason friends, because of "triviality,"—the church is simply trifling on its job. We are not aware of the great work that we are capable of doing. We are like China, a big sleeping giant. The church will never remain strong if it allows anything to go on that drags down the lives of our young men.

If the church is simply existing it will soon be a dead thing. If it is contented to go on as it did twenty-five years ago it will not succeed.

Now men, I am going to talk to you. The remark is made that the church should keep out of politics. The church should keep out politics, but the men of the church should not. We should be concerned. We should be concerned in the church. The preacher cannot do all the work. Why, we don't seem to care. We shirk our responsibility, and we say, "Oh, there are so many other things." We don't seem to take time to do any work for the church. We forget that we are stewards and that at some time not far off we will have to give an account of ourselves to God. We also forget the reality of Jesus Christ, and if we do not, we seem to be perfectly satisfied with the way things are going. Let us make up to the reality of our duties, and then our churches will be prosperous, our men will attend the services, and the people as a whole will come to know that there is more in this world than baseball, money, stocks and bonds.

At the close of the talk the secretary's report was read and accepted, as was the report of the treasurer. A collation was served, after which music and a social hour followed. The next meeting will be held on Monday evening, January 13th.

HIS MOTHER-IN-LAW

By Mrs. Margaret L. Rust

22 Bridge Street, Manchester-by-the-Sea

Reprinted from Boston Morning Post of Dec. 30, 1912.—"The Post's Original Short Story."

"Mary, when I married you, seems to me, I married your mother, too; but I'm getting tired of this sort of thing and I don't intend to stand it any longer;" and John Morton slammed the front door after him as he started for his office.

When he reached home in the evening it was very evident he was in no better mood than when he left in the morning. Supper over, he took up the paper and sat down in his arm chair in a corner of the sitting room.

"Why, John what is the matter," said Mary, "you have hardly spoken a word to me all the evening."

"Matter? Didn't I tell you this morning I don't want your mother here any longer. A mother-in-law is all right when she has a nice home in the country or at the sea-side where a fellow can take his wife and family and spend a vacation each year; but if she is poor and he has to support her, that's a horse of another color."

"John dear, you are tired, and perhaps you're not feeling well. You surely don't mean my dear mother must leave our home? Father died when I was quite young and poor mother worked so hard to give me the comforts in life that other children have. Oh, it would break her heart. I'm her only child, John; she has no other home. Where can she go?"

"That's none of my business."

The next day was a sad one for poor Mary. Her mother was quite feeble, and how could she tell her she could no longer live with them. Then the children would miss "Grammy" so much, especially little Jack, who was not strong.

"Mary dear," said her mother the following morning, "Mrs. Leicester has asked me to visit her for a while and perhaps the change will do me good. She is all alone since her son went to Australia. I don't just like to leave you and the children, but I shall not be far away and you can come and see me."

Mrs. Nelson was quite busy the next day putting her things together and packing her trunk.

Monday morning she was all ready to start on her journey. It was late when she arrived at 9 C street, the home of her friend.

A bright fire was burning in the grate and tea was on the table.

"Why, Mollie Nelson! How do you do? Here you are at last! Guess I've been to the door looking out for you 40 times," said Sallie Leicester. "Well, it does my heart good to see your face once more; make yourself at home, Mollie, and after tea we'll talk of old times."

"You remember my son Henry? He's doing well out in Australia, and in one of his letters he speaks of a dear friend who has a sister living somewhere in the town. His name is Joe Harrington."

"Joe Harrington did you say? Why, that must be brother Joe. He went out there some 30 years ago and it's all of 20 years since I heard from him."

"Well," said Sallie, "I hope it is; we'll try and find out when I write, but say, how're the folks at home?"

"Oh, Mary has a hard life with John. I'm sorry for her, poor girl, I heard him telling her a few days ago he didn't want me around any longer. You see old people are in the way sometimes."

"Mollie, I hope you will stay with me. I haven't over much of this world's goods, but you're welcome to a share of it."

So the two old friends were happy.

In due time a letter was received from Henry Leicester saying his friend Joe Harrington had died leaving a fortune of $200,000, with $50,000 divided between his old friend Henry Leicester and his mother and the residue, $150,000, to his sister, Mrs. Mollie Nelson, to will as she thought best.

For some years the two old friends lived happily together. Henry returned from Australia and told how his friend had made a fortune in sheep raising and how he had often talked of his sister.

In the meantime, things had not gone very smoothly with John and Mary. The dear old mother had been a great help in the house and with the children.

Many times now the supper would be late and John would notice how tired Mary looked.

One evening on his return from town, he found her in tears. She had received a letter saying her mother had died. A few days later a lawyer called on Mrs. Morton informing her

JOHN EDWARD MURRAY.

The body of John Edward Murray of Roxbury was brought to Manchester yesterday for burial. Mr. Murray was born in Manchester in 1832. He learned his trade with Vernard & Wheaton as a cabinet maker.

After spending some years in town he went to Beverly where he resided a number of years, moving later to Roxbury. When the war of the rebellion broke out he enlisted in Co. E, 8th Reg't. and served his country nine months.

He was always known to be cheerful, kind and thoughtful to all. During the remaining years of his life he was at the Danvers hospital and there became known to those at the hospital as Old Uncle John.

Mr. Murray was subject to illturns and bright's disease which caused his death in his 80th year. He is survived by a widow, Mrs. Sarah Hastings Murray of Roxbury, a brother, James Murray of Beverly and Miss Lydia Murray of this town. His body was put to rest in his brother's lot at Rose-dale cemetery Rev. Mr. Tillingast of Beverly officiating.

The total assets are $2206, and there are $1622 in the bank, with an additional $441 in the widows' fund. The tribe members presented past sachem Henry A. Moulton with a beautiful past sachem's jewel. A collation was served.

READ THIS WEEK'S SERIAL STORY

THE FIRST INSTALLMENT OF "COWARDICE COURT," BY GEORGE B. McCUTCHEON APPEARS IN THIS ISSUE

With the new year the Breeze is going to give its readers a wider range of news features, and anticipates changes in the paper which will make it even more pleasing to its many readers than formerly. In this week's issue we are starting a serial story by the famous author, George Barr McCutcheon, whose facile pen has turned out "Graustark," "Beverly of Graustark," "Truxton King," "Jane Cable," "The Man from Brodney's" and other notable novels. His latest work, which appears in this issue of The Review, is called "Cowardice Court."

The story of the handsome young American, Randolph Shaw, a French Count, a British Lord who could not keep his temper, and the charming "woman in the case," is one that will set you thinking and will prove to be one of the most entrancing stories you have read. The scene of action, laid in the Adirondack Mountains, affords a wide and entrancing field of description by this gifted writer, and

A PROGRESSIVE NEWSPAPER

Springfield Republican

MASSACHUSETTS

HONESTLY DEVOTED TO THE SERVICE OF THE PEOPLE

Independent of Selfish Political, Personal or Financial Influences

COURAGEOUS, ENTERPRISING, INTERESTING

ESTABLISHED IN 1824 BY SAMUEL BOWLES.

DAILY (morning) $8; SUNDAY $2; WEEKLY $1 a Year.

The Springfield Republican stands for political progress and social justice. It has stood for these causes consistently and strongly during the 88 years of its career. It stands also for honesty in all of the relations of life, personal, political, commercial, industrial, national and inter-national. It considers that honesty is an essential basis of real political progress and social justice. It refuses to follow popular leaders who lack this fundamental virtue, however captivating and eloquent.

The Republican has a profound faith in democratic institutions, but it recognizes clearly that the safeguard of a progressive democracy is universal education, developing an enlightened electorate, which may deal justly with the difficult problems that modern civilization presents. It looks forward, through the agency of such an electorate, to an increasing restraint of the aggrandizing activities of powerful individuals and groups, to the end that there may be a juster distribution of the fruits of labor and a fuller realization of the ideal of the commonwealth.

The Republican seeks to embody its principles in its own service to the people as a newspaper. It strives ever to deal with its public honesty in its presentation of the news of the day. It tells no tales to promote its sales. It aims to educate, to enlighten and uplift its readers; and yet to interest and entertain them by honest methods. Its editorial page is one of the strongest, keenest, broadest, in the country. It deals with all the subjects that concern humanity in the spirit of helpfulness, of healthier, happier living.

The Republican gives a news service that is real, not flashy. It commands the best agencies for its general news, often supplemented by special correspondence. It covers its home territory with remarkable thoroughness, and it liberal treatment to literature and to the arts, sciences and industries. The Sunday edition gives large and expert attention to all of the healthy outdoor sports. It gives day Republican is especially rich in delightful literary and other diverting features and departments.

WENHAM

Since Salem and Beverly have been drinking Wenham lake dry, they force Wenham people to dig deep for water. Of course all wells within a mile of the lake are lowered with the declining level of the lake. Mr. George W. Wilson had to go down 117 feet before he found sufficient moisture. Mr. Kavanagh is still drilling. Well-boring affords a valuable geological test, showing what the underlying stratum is. Mr. Wilson's home stands up 47 ft. of earth, beneath which is a ledge extending at least 70 feet. Water was found 70 feet down in the ledge.

MANCHESTER CLUB ENTERTAINMENT COURSE.

The first of the series of six entertainments in the Manchester Town hall under the auspices of the Manchester club, Wednesday evening, proved quite successful. About 125 people were present. The Huff Concert Co., of Boston, composed of an instrumental quartet, and a baritone singer, assisted by Miss Marion Hestha Clarke, reader, was the attraction of the evening. A program of fourteen numbers was presented, and every number was encored. On the whole the program was one of high class and was thoroughly appreciated. The selections by the quartet were well rendered, and Miss Clarke's reading called orth meritorious applause. Mr. Sykes, the soloist, has a voice of rare merit. The program presented was as follows:

Manchester Buys "Powder House Hill" for $8200; and Sells "Old Burying Ground Lot" for $8500

At a special town meeting in Manchester Monday night, lasting twenty minutes, the town voted to sell a lot of land at Manchester Cove, known as a portion of "the old burying ground lot," and containing 2 9-100 acres, for $8500, and to buy "Power House Hill," in the center of the village, containing 12 3-10 acres, for $8,200. Hardly a dissenting vote was registered. Everything moved along in smooth shape, with no argument. About 125 voters were present.

The meeting was called to order at 7.35 by Town Clerk A. S. Jewett. After reading the warrant the first article of the warrant was taken up: election of moderator. Raymond C. Allen was unanimously chosen.

Article 2. Chairman E. S. Knight of the board of selectmen handed the following offer to the moderator, received from a Boston real estate broker:

"I am authorized by a client of this office to offer for the land belonging to the town of Manchester and located on the northwesterly side of Magnolia avenue and adjoining the estate of Walter J. Mitchell and the property of the David G. Allen heirs, $2500 per acre, and I am informed by your town engineer that there are approximately three acres. If I am successful in purchasing this property from the town for my client he proposes to purchase the David G. Allen property which I now hold an option on, and erect a summer residence for his own occupancy.

"On account of certain conditions attached to the above proposition it is absolutely necessary for me to know your decision immediately. Therefore if you will give the matter your immediate attention and notify me the result, you will more than oblige."

Mr. Knight then offered a motion, which he said was the recommendation of the board of selectmen, that the town sell this land for $8500.

G. S. Sinnicks asked if the board knew the party would pay $8500, when they offered only $2500 an acre, which was less than $7500 for the lot.

Mr. Knight did not know. The motion was carried by a very decided majority.

Article 3. Mr. Knight offered a motion that the town purchase of Lenora F. Gorman a lot of land containing 12 3-10 acres, situated off Friend street, known as Power House Hill lot, and that $8200 be appropriated for the same. Mr. Knight said he considered this a fair price for the property. He knew that years ago this same property could not be bought for several times the amount now asked. The hill, with a thick growth of pine, was one of the most beautiful sights in the town. There was a movement on foot to erect a saw mill on the hill and cut off the trees. It would mean much to the town to have this done. He thought it a good investment for the town to buy the property.

Frank P. Knight understood the property could be bought within a short time for $5000. The project looked a little to him like a hold-up. At the same time, he added, it sometimes pays to be held up. He agreed with the selectmen that it is important the town get the hill and save the trees, though he did think the figure mentioned, of $3500 for the lumber on the hill, a mighty big figure.

The motion was put and carried by a very decided majority.

The meeting was dissolved at 7.55.

EMPIRE THEATRE, SALEM.

RAYMOND HITCHCOCK IN "THE RED WIDOW"

Raymond Hitchcock should be and undoubtedly is very proud of the reception which has been accorded to him in his new musical play "The Red Widow." From every point it is said to be as novel and as picturesque a play as has been produced on "The Great White Way" in recent years.

It is described as being extremely funny, with London and St. Petersburg as its locale. In the memory of the writer, it is the first time that an American musical comedy writer has taken Russia into his confidence.

There are several scenes of Russian history. Anna Varvara, the desperate Nihilist, and her accomplice Tantul Popova have been introduced into the play with telling effect. Basil Romanoff, a Captain in the Imperial Guards who fell in love with Anna Varvara and caused her to give up her anarchistic endeavors against the life of the Czar is also a conspicuous character. Throughout the play there are many startling surprises, which give Mr. Hitchcock opportunity to show how easy it is to fool the secret police and the Nihilists. The comedian has been surrounded by a large supporting company and will appear at the Empire Theatre, Salem, directly after his coming Boston engagement.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

Public taste has raised John Drew to the position, quite unassailable, as the chief American exponent of polite comedy. Every season one of the social as well as dramatic events of the cities in which Mr. Drew appears, after leaving the Empire Theatre, New York, where he delights his Metropolitan public, is his presentation in a new comedy. He will be seen at the Hollis Street Theatre, two weeks beginning Jan. 6th in "The Perplexed Husband" by Alfred Sutro, a four-act play which duplicated its London success in New York.

Mr. Sutro, whose last success in America was "The Walls of Jericho," came over from England to personally stage his latest serio-comic play. The distinguished dramatist has created a strictly modern comedy, and his characters are live men and women who say and do things that are natural though unusual. As is his custom Mr. Drew is supported by one of those unique and perfect casts which delight his well-wishers.

In "A Perplexed Husband" Mr. Drew is a conventional husband who has good reasons for being worried. The supporting cast includes Mary Boland, Hudert Druce, Margaret Watson, Nina Sevensing, Alice John, Walter Soldering and others.

What we can do today depends on what we did yesterday.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

The event of the season in Boston vaudeville will be the appearance of Ethel Barrymore, the famous legitimate comedienne, at B. F. Keith's Theatre the week of January 6th. In many respects Miss Barrymore is the most notable capture ever made for vaudeville. Miss Barrymore, with Mme. Sarah Bernhardt as an opposing attraction, broke all records in the Windy City. For her vaudeville tour Miss Barrymore has elected to appear in J. H. Barrie's one-act comedy, "The Ten-Pound Look," one of the cleverest playlets ever turned out by the famous Scotch author of "The Little Minister" and "Peter Pan." Miss Barrymore's engagement will be positively limited to one week only. She will be surrounded by one of the strongest and best vaudeville bills ever put together. Ed F. Reynard, the ventriloquist with a production, will present his famous "Seth Dusenberry and Jawn Johnson in "A Morning in Hicksville," combining ventriloquial skill with some remarkable scenic and mechanical effects.

THE RAMBLER

The latest eccentricity to appear in the theatrical world is a musical version of what is called America's greatest play, "Uncle Tom's Cabin." In the play's new dress Uncle Tom is required to "take a back seat," and a bevy of charming (white) topsies occupies the center of the stage the greater part of the time. Critics and theatre-managers all over the country are watching with much interest the fate of the production in this new form, many believing that the piece would live, no matter how it might be presented. The average troupe of would-be actors which usually plays the small cities with Uncle Tom is nothing but an aggregation of vaudeville artists, and poor ones at that. But still there has never been an "Uncle Tom's Cabin" company stranded on the road, and that is certainly more than many of the so-called big productions can say. Apparently there is a resemblance between this play and Tennyson's "Brook."

Friends of a North Shore young man who is interested in amateur theatricals are enjoying many good laughs at his expense as a result of his latest attempt to win histrionic honors. Many of the young man's friends attended a performance of an amateur show recently in which he took the leading part. At any rate, his part called for some pretty demonstrative work in the art of "putting the soft stuff" across the footlights, and in the "big" scene, where the gay Lothario was making ardent love to the lady of his choice, his male friends in the front row were all ready to try to make him laugh and "queer" the show. But they needn't have made such extensive plans, for they were saved the trouble of a forced laugh when the young man in whom they were interested made his entrance.

Let us explain here that earlier in the act in question the young man was attired in one form of evening dress—pajamas—and as the part called for a rather quick change from this unconventional garb to a business suit, the embryo Warfield simply donned his trousers over the pajamas. All would have been well, had he not been required to seat himself on a divan and tell his lady-love how much he—but you know all about that—. When THE young lady of the play was snugly ensconced in the arms of her better-half-to-be the critics in the front row had more difficulty than ever in keeping straight faces, for lo, and behold! our youthful suitor had forgotten to roll up his pajamas when he had adjusted his outer garb, and the picture which he presented on the stage was certainly the proverbial scream we read about. It is impossible to picture the chagrin of the abashed couple when nothing but laughs greeted their heroic attempts to show the audience how well they liked each other. The young man was not aware of his appearance, and to gain courage, made another hitch in his trousers, which only revealed more of his "full evening." It nearly spoiled the show, but it was good comedy.

CONG. GARDNER ON NATIONAL RESOURCES.

Congressman Augustus P. Gardner of Hamilton gave an exceedingly interesting and instructive talk on "The conservation of our national resources" at the Second Baptist church at Beverly Farms last Friday evening.

There was a large attendance and keen interest was manifested in the talk which developed interesting facts and figures as to what the government was doing to conserve its resources. Congressman Gardner told how the movement was started for the saving of the forest lands, how the project had been developed through the years through the forestry service and how today timber men were beginning to realize the value of the work. He spoke of the reclamation work of the government, told of the Imperial Valley and other projects where thousands and thousands of acres of arid lands had been made fertile. He devoted some time to the coal and iron resources of the country and told of what was being done to save these properties for the people. Rev. Clarence Strong Pond, pastor of the church presided and most happily introduced Congressman Gardner. Following the lecture there was a reception. Mayor-elect Herman A. MacDonald headed the reception committee.

The annual meeting and election of officers of the Beverly Farms Firemen Home Benefit association took place last evening. The old board was re-elected. This association is purely a local affair, whose members are active or past members of the Fire Department. The association has done much good in the payment of benefits to sick members.

The third of the free course of lectures and entertainments which are being held in the Beverly Farms school house will be given next Friday evening, Jan. 10th. Rev. N. R. Walsh, rector of St. Margaret's church, will give an illustrated lecture on Rome. The opportunity to hear this educational and interesting lecture will no doubt be taken advantage of by many. John West orchestra will furnish the music.

The adult class in dancing instructed by Miss Jane M. Watson has made arrangements to continue their social gatherings for another term.

The past week has been a very busy one for mayor-elect MacDonald, who, besides being busy preparing his inaugural address and looking after many details for Inauguration Day next Monday, has many other duties to look after. Receiving and giving courteous attention to the no end of visitors who call on him is in itself quite a task.

Mrs. and Mrs. John R. McDonough of Albany, N. Y., have been among this week's visitors at the Farms.

James W. Wright who has been the provisionally appointed driver at the Farms Fire Department concluded his duties as spare driver with the coming of the new year. Wm. H. Brown of Beverly, who has just been appointed spare driver under Civil Service rules, commenced his duties Wednesday by filling in on driver Mackesley's day off.

Joseph C. Stanwood, the Vine street plumber, is the latest Beverly Farms man to become the owner of an automobile. He will use it chiefly in connection with his business.

Preston W. R. Corps, No. 93, will probably hold their installation of officers on Wednesday evening, Jan. 15th. The work will be done by Mrs. Wadsworth, the Dept. Patriotic instructor.

The adult members of Miss Jane M. Watson's class for sociability and dancing watched the old year out and the new year in, at Marshall's hall. Flags were used for the decoration and a member of the class added an artistic drawing representing 1912 and 1913. Supper was served at 10.30 o'clock and just before midnight a circle was formed and to the accompaniment of music and bells "Auld Lang Syne" was sung. Thus was the new year ushered in by the party. A pleasing event during the evening was the presentation by Mrs. J. M. Publicover on behalf of the members of a silk umbrella to Miss Watson and a silver pin to Mrs. W. F. Low, the pianist.

Benj. F. Hawkins, who a year ago was elected for one year to fill out the unexpired term on the Park Commission, will be a candidate for reelection at Monday's meeting of the new city government. Willard B. Publicover has also been mentioned for this berth.

Deputy Chief Ranger Heapy and staff of Beverly installed the new officers of St. Margaret's Court of Foresters Wednesday evening. After the business meeting a collation was served and a couple of hours were devoted in social way.

Mrs. Mary A. Larcom is reported to be quite ill.

Past Commander Eben Day was installing officer for the new officers of Preston Post 188 Wednesday evening. After the official business the Post members and invited guests enjoyed a smoke talk, a feature of which was an excellent clam chowder.

Many Beverly Farms people are looking forward with interest to the inaugural ball to be held in Beverly City hall next Monday evening.

Sidney Larcom was the first Beverly Farms person to make use of the new parcel post and Louis A. Shaw was the second.

Plans for the Inaugural program have been arranged by the new city officials as follows: On Monday noon, at City hall, Mayor-elect MacDonald will make his inaugural address, Rev. C. S. Pond will offer the prayer and the Beverly Farms band will give several selections, then will follow practically the same program as in other years, except adopting the rules pertaining to committees. The board will lunch with the mayor at 2 o'clock.

Miss Bessie Williams left today for Farmington, Me., where she will be the guest of her uncle and aunt Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Cohoon, formerly of Beverly.

The Beverly Farms Athletic club has just been reorganized and quite a number of new members admitted. They will elect officers for the coming year, at the meeting next Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Wilder moved to Lynn yesterday. They have been living in the Jas. Fanning house on High street. Mr. Wilder has a position with the Riker Janes Co. in that city.

The Ladies Sewing circle of the local Baptist church was entertained last evening by Mrs. Wm. R. Brooks at her home on Hart street.

Miss Alice R. Smith of Meriden, Conn., has been among the visitors at Beverly Farms the past week.

GOVERNOR FOSS AND PARDONS

It would seem that almost any crime might be committed in Massachusetts if a man has the traditional influence and the necessary cash to go after a pardon, once he is convicted and sent to prison. The Governor and his council are the objects of severe criticism at present, and rightly so, for their action in the Shea case did not seem to have the element of a square deal to it.

Governor Foss has been very reticent about commenting on the pardon, while the members of the council are equally firm in their declaration that the evidence presented by Shea's friends was sufficient to admit of his discharge from prison after serving but a few months of his sentence of several years. District Attorney Pelletier believes that the pardon is a decided reflection on both his department and upon the judgment of the judge and jury who decided against Shea.

It might be a good plan if public hearings were called by the Governor in the event of his intention to discuss the pardoning of any convicted criminal. Then the evidence of both sides would probably be given due consideration and fair play would result.

SOCIETY NOTES

The most brilliant gathering of Boston society thus far this winter was that of last Friday night when the first of the two assemblies was held at the Copley-Plaza. The ballroom was simply but effectively decorated with garlands of southern smilax here and there. The favors were most attractive. One each side was a tall basket filled with wands, those in one being tipped with red and pink roses, and in the other clusters of artificial ferns tied with green tulle. There were also other pretty favors. The cotillon, which was danced before supper, was led by Mrs. Bryce J. Allan and S. Hooper Hooper. In the receiving line were Mrs. Wm. Appleton, Mrs. Edward D. Brandegee, Mrs. A. P. Gardner, Mrs. Oliver Ames, Mrs. Gordon Abbott, Mrs. Rodolphe L. Agassiz and Mrs. S.V. R. Crosby. Mrs. Francis L. Higginson gave one of the largest dinners that night, one for 80 guests, at the Chilton club. To tell who was at the assembly would be to print a list of Boston's "400" and their families and guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Amory Eliot and their debutante daughter Miss Rosamond Eliot, who have been spending the winter thus far at Manchester, moved to Boston late last week and will spend the balance of the cold weather at the Copley-Plaza. Miss Eliot has not been taking part in the early festivities of the winter because of the death of Mrs. Eliot's mother.

Dr. and Mrs. Charles Allen Porter have cards out for an at home Friday of next week, the 17th, from 5 until 7, at their home on Beacon street, Boston, to meet Dr. and Mrs. Harvey Cushing.

Cong. and Mrs. A. P. Gardner are to give another dinner dance in honor of Miss Constance Gardner on Jan. 24, at the Winsor house on Marlborough street, Boston, which they have taken for the winter.

Mrs. S. Parker Bremer is to give a small dance on the last night in January, at the South Natick Inn, for Miss Charlotte Baylies.

SOCIETY NOTES

President and Mrs. Taft will give a dinner at the White House on Saturday in honor of Mrs. Grover Cleveland who is in Washington as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. John Hays Hammond of the Fresh Water Cove summer colony. This is the first time Mrs. Cleveland has been in the White House since she left it at the close of her husband's term as President. With Mrs. Cleveland will be her fiancé, Professor J. T. Preston and her daughter, Miss Esther Cleveland, both of whom will be guests of Mr. and Mrs. Hammond. President and Mrs. Taft will greet Mrs. Cleveland and her party in the Blue room, standing on the same famous national eagle rug on which the beautiful Frances Folsom and Grover Cleveland stood to be married. When Miss Esther Cleveland was last in the White House, she was just beginning to walk and talk. The entire two weeks which Mrs. Cleveland plans to spend in Washington are to be made weeks of rejoicing at her return to the city in which she was once queen. Her friends are planning for many entertainments in her honor. A brilliant luncheon is to be given by Mrs. Levi Z. Leiter of the Beverly Farms colony, Mrs. Henry F. Dimock will give a large musicale and Mrs. John Hays Hammond will give a reception and musicale.

Mrs. Rodolphe Agassiz is to give a dinner next Friday evening, the 17th, for Miss Margary Lee. The same night Mr. and Mrs. John S. Ames will give a costume party for their niece, Miss Olivia Ames.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Mitchell closed their Manchester residence this week and went south for the balance of the winter.

Mrs. Wm. F. Draper and Miss Margaret Preston Draper, after a brilliant short season in Washington sailed from New York this week for their annual cruise to Mediterranean ports. They are accompanied by Oliver H. Lane of Hopedale. The party will disembark at Alexandria, Egypt. Mrs. Draper and daughter plan to spend next summer at Manchester as usual.

SOCIETY NOTES

Miss Helen Clay Frick was hostess Monday night at the biggest theatre party even given by an individual in Pittsburg when 200 debutantes, escorts and chaperons filled all the boxes and some of the parquet at the Alvin and witnessed "When Bunty Pulls the Strings." The house was a veritable bower of blossoms. The usual Monday night handful was a multitude that filled every seat. Others clamored at the box office after all the standing room was old. The theatre party was the attraction. The Sewickly Valley contingent came up in a special train on the Pennsylvania. A procession of taxi-cabs was at the depot to carry the party to the theatre. After the show Miss Frick gave a dinner and dance at the Pittsburg club.

Mrs. E. Preble Motley of Pride's is to entertain at dinner Friday night at the Chilton club, Boston, the guests going on to the Hunnewell ball. On Tuesday night of next week Mr. and Mrs. Guy Norman are to have a dinner dance at the house on Beacon Hill they are occupying for the winter. Miss Norman is to be given a dance by Mr. and Mrs. Bryce Allan two days later at their home on Beacon street, Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard D. Ahl closed their house at Hamilton this week and have gone to Palm Beach, where they have a cottage for the season.

Mrs. E. C. Wheeler, Jr., who summers on the North Shore, was chosen president of the Women's Golf association of Boston yesterday at the annual meeting at 256 Commonwealth avenue. Miss Harriot S. Curtis was elected vice-president.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Leland of West Manchester were of those sailing on the Adriatic. They will leave the steamer at Algiers. They will return home after Easter.

Stedman Hanks has joined his mother and sister at West Manchester, having resigned his position at the court of St. James since the death of the late Ambassador Reid.

Real Estate and Improvements ... Up and Down the North Shore ...

Work has been started upon the casino at Magnolia beach for the North Shore Swimming club. The work is in charge of Michael Kehoe of Magnolia. The main building is to be 93x58 ft. with two wings or piers 14 feet wide and 58 feet long running on each side of the swimming pool. Simpson Bros. of Boston, have the contract for putting in the swimming pool, which is to be one of the best of its kind in this part of the country. It will be 30x70 feet, and the water will be pumped direct from the ocean by an electric motor in the pump room of the building. The most approved methods of drainage, that is, by a gate valve, will be used. A six-foot cement walk will surround the pool. Also on the ground floor will be four shower baths, 170 dressing rooms, a kitchen, laundry, lockers and attendants' room.

Aside from the advantages of the swimming pool the building will be attractive and a distinct addition to Magnolia. It is to be shingled and a 14 foot piazza is to be built around all sides. The lounging room on the first floor will be the largest apartment, measuring 28x40 feet. A fire place at each end will add materially to its attractiveness and comfort. Two tea rooms, each with a fire place, are on the same floor. A den and a serving room complete the rooms on this floor.

The work is well under way and the swimming pool will be put in about the first of April. The building is to be erected upon the site of the hotel pavilion, which was torn down this fall. The casino with the new pavilion which the Oceanside is to build before summer will go far toward making Magnolia beach one of the most popular spots along the North Shore.

Mrs. Harlan Preston sold her house on Brook street, Manchester, at auction last Saturday. Michael Gorman of this town was the auctioneer and Michael Kelliher, also of Manchester, was the purchaser. Mrs. Preston plans to lease or buy a boarding house in Beverly, where her son is employed at the shop of the United Shoe Machinery Co. The property brought $3,300.

At B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

One of the biggest novelties of the season will be presented at B. F. Keith's Theatre next week, in "At the Movies," a spectacular comedy of life in the moving picture theatres, by Hamish McLaurin. This comedy is presented by a large cast of character actors, all the types one finds any day, being depicted with a rare fidelity to life. The piece is in three scenes, showing the exterior of the theatre with the crowd bustling about and preparing to enter to see the show; the rear of the theatre, and finally, the interior of the theatre itself. In this last scene is introduced a burlesque film taken especially for this production, and entitled, "For Loves' Own Sweet Sake," which is a screamingly funny travesty on the impossible and absurdly ridiculous love stories that form the principal attraction in the picture theatres. Other big features of a splendid bill will be Tim McMahon and Edith Chapelle, who have not appeared at this house in years, in their latest comedy sketch, "How Hubby Missed The Train;" Linden Beckwith, the magnetic mistress of melody; Four Cliftons, muscular marvels from the Olympia, Paris; Rosa Cruch, and George Welch, liveliest of singers and dancers; Bowman Brothers, the blue grass minstrel boys; Burr and Hope, in "A Lady, A Lover, and A Lamp;" Merlin and his pack of cards; Jed and Ethel Dooley, comedy cycling marvels; and Pathe's Weekly.

MRS. FISKE COMING TO THE HOLLIS

On January 20 Mrs. Fiske, on whose shoulders rests so gracefully the mantle of American stage leadership, is to begin an engagement of two weeks only, with Wednesday and Saturday matinees, at the Hollis Street Theatre. It has been two years since Mrs. Fiske was last seen in Boston and this added to the fact that she brings this time one of the greatest successes of her brilliant career, "The High Road," by Edward Sheldon, should make the engagement as memorial as was that of her revival of "Becky Sharp," in which her last local appearances were made.

"The High Road" is just closing a most successful engagement in New York where it has been voted one of the most vigorous and interesting American plays produced in many years. Mrs. Fiske herself has probably never before received such unanimous and enthusiastic encomiums, her characterization of Mary Page being acclaimed as one of the greatest and most appealing contributions known to the stage of her time.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE

John Drew, the leading American exponent of light comedy types, may always be expected in one of the brilliant comedies that gladden his public. He is playing a two weeks' engagement at the Hollis Street Theatre in "The Perplexed Husband" by Alfred Sutro. This four-act comedy created a great sensation in London when it was first produced this year because of its satirical attack upon woman suffrage and the amusing situations that arise when "the new woman" is confronted with that almost unknown being, "the new man."

The story has to do with a London tea merchant, a conventional representative of the upper class business man, who returns home after a trip to find his home has been turned topsy-turvy. During his absence, his wife, has become acquainted with two advanced thinkers, a woman who is jealously fighting for the rights of her sex, and a man proclaimed "the master," who would rather lecture than work.

Under their influence the wife falls in with a new set of ideas. No longer will she be a parasite. She will break the shackles of her sex and from now on be firm in her determination to "live her own life." As a first step she does not meet her husband upon his arrival, and moves her personal belongings to a distant part of the house. The amazement and consternation of the husband, as portrayed by Mr. Drew is most amusing. The supporting cast includes Mary Boland, Hubert Druce, Margaret Watson, Nina Sevensing, Alice John, Walter Soldering and others.

"THE GARDEN OF ALLAH."

The biggest thing scenically ever attempted upon a stage is what is said about "The Garden of Allah," which will be seen at the Boston Theatre on Monday, January 13th, for the first time in this city. The play is a dramatization of the novel of the same name by Robert Hichens. The locale is the desert of Sahara and its environs to the north. The story briefly told deals with a Trappist monk who becomes wearied of the monastery and yields to his natural impulses. He wanders off into Morocco and its environs, and at a dance hall in Biskra meets and falls in love with a wanderer like himself—but one of the female persuasion who confesses she is a gypsy. He constitutes himself her protector, which eventually leads to love and marriage. Their adventures in the desert and the discovery by the wife that her husband is a monk who has broken his vow to the church—her renunciation and his return to the monastery, form a story of absorbing interest.

The pictures of the Orient, its camels, horses and other animals of the desert, its melange of Eastern peoples and Occidentals, its vision of the desert and its luxuriant gardens are fascinating, and far in advance of everything ever attempted heretofore upon the stage.

"No, they are not, poor fellows," cried Penelope. "They have taken nothing but water."

"By Jove! Deuced clever, that," drawled the duke. "Eh?" to the New Yorker.

"Deuced," from the Knickerbocker.

"Well, well! What's it all about?" demanded Bazelhurst.

"Mr. Shaw, sir," said James.

"Good Lord! Couldn't you rescue him?" in horror.

"He rescued us, sir," mumbled Tompkins.

"You mean"—

"He threwed us in and then had to jump in and pull us out, sir. Beggin' your pardon, sir, but dash him!"

"And you didn't throw him in after all? By Jove! Extraordinary!"

"Do you mean to tell us that he threw you great hulking creatures into the river? Single handed?" cried Lady Bazelhurst, aghast.

"He did, Evelyn," inserted Penelope. "I met them coming home, and poor Tompkins was out of his senses. I don't know how it happened, but"— "It was this way, your ladyship," put in James, the groom. "Tompkins and me could see him from the point there, sir, a-fishin' below the log. So we says to each other 'Come on,' and up we went to where he was a-fishin'. Tompkins, bein' the game warden, says he to him 'Hi, there!' He was plainly on our property, sir, a-fishin' from a boat for bass, sir. 'Hello, boys!' says he back to us. 'Get off our land,' says Tompkins. 'I am,' says he; 'it's water out here where I am.' Then"—

"You're wrong," broke in Tompkins. "He said 'it's wet out here where I am.'"

"You're right. It was wet. Then Tompkins called him a vile name, your lordship—shall I repeat it, sir?"

"No, no!" cried four feminine voices.

"Yes, do," muttered the duke.

"He didn't wait after that, sir. He rowed to shore in a flash and landed on our land. 'What do you mean by that?' he said, madlike. 'My orders is to put you off this property,' says Tompkins, 'or to throw you in the river.' 'Who gave these orders?' asked

Mr. Shaw. 'Lord Bazelhurst, sir, dash you'—beg pardon, sir; it slipped out. 'And who the devil is Lord Bazelhurst?' said he. 'Hurst,' said Tompkins. 'He owns this ground. Can't you see the mottoes on the trees! No Trespassin'?' But Mr. Shaw said, 'Well, why don't you throw me in the river?' He kinder smiled when he said it. 'I will,' says Tompkins and made a rush for him. I don't just remember why I started in to help Tompkins, but I did. Somehow, sir, Mr. Shaw got"—

"Don't call him Mr. Shaw. Just Shaw; he's no gentleman," exploded Lord Bazelhurst.

"But he told us both to call him 'Mister,' sir, as long as we lived. I kinder got in the habit of it, your lordship, up there. That is, that's what he told us after he got through with us. Well, anyhow, he got the start of us, an'—there's Tompkins' eyes, sir, an' look at my ear. Then he pitched us both in the river."

"Good Lord!" gasped the duke.

"Diable!" sputtered the count.

"Splendid!" cried Penelope, her eyes sparkling.

"Hang it all, Pen, don't interrupt the count!" snorted Bazelhurst for want of something better to say and perhaps hoping that Deveau might say in French what could not be uttered in English.

"Don't say it in French, count," said little Miss Folsom. "It deserves English."

"Go on, James!" sternly, from Lady Bazelhurst.

"Well, neither of us can swim, your ladyship, an' we'd 'a' drowned if Mr.—if Shaw hadn't jumped in himself an' pulled us out. As it was, sir, Tompkins was unconscious. We rolled him on a log, sir, an' got a keg of water out of him. Then Mr.—er—Shaw told us to go 'ome and get in bed, sir."

"He sent a message to you, sir," added Tompkins, shivering mightily.

"Well, I'll have one for him, never fear," said his lordship, glancing about bravely. "I won't permit any man to assault my servants and brutally maltreat them. No, sir; he shall hear from me or my attorney."

"He told us to tell you, sir, that if he ever caught anybody from this place on his land he'd serve him worse than he did us," said Tompkins.

"He says, 'I don't want no Bazelhursts on my place,'" added James in finality.

"Go to bed, both of you!" roared his lordship.

"Very good, sir," in unison.

"They can get to bed without your help, I dare say, Pen," added his lordship caustically as she started away with them. Penelope blushed, and one party went to luncheon, while the other went to bed.

"I should like to see this terrible Mr. Shaw," observed Penelope at table. "He's a sort of Jack the Giant Killer, I fancy."

"He is the sort one has to meet in America," lamented her ladyship.

"Oh, I say now," expostulated the New York young man wrvrv

"I don't mean in good society," she corrected, with unconscious irony.

"Oh," said he, very much relieved.

"He's a demmed cad," said his lordship conclusively.

"Because he chucked your men into the river?" asked Penelope sweetly.

"She's dooced pretty, eh?" whispered the duke to Mrs. De Peyton without taking his eyes from his young countrywoman's face.

"Who?" asked Mrs. De Peyton. Then he relinquished his gaze and turned his monocle blankly upon the American beside him.

"I shall send him a warning that he'll have to respect, cad or no cad," said Bazelhurst, absently spreading butter upon his fingers instead of the roll.

"Send him a warning?" asked his queenly wife. "Aren't you going to see him personally? You can't trust the servants it seems."

"My dear, I can't afford to lose my temper and engage in a row with that bouncer, and there's no end of trouble I might get into"—

"I shall see him myself if you won't," said her ladyship firmly. There was frigid silence at the table for a full minute, relieved only when his lordship's monocle dropped into the glass of water he was trying to convey to his lips. He thought best to treat the subject lightly, so he laughed in his most jovial way.

"You'd better take a mackintosh with you, my dear," he said. "Remember what he told Tompkins and James."

"He will not throw me into the river. It might be different if you went. Therefore I think"—

"Throw me in, would he?" and Bazelhurst laughed loudly. "I'm no groom, my dear. You forget that it is possible for Mr. Shaw to be soused."

"He was good enough to souse himself this morning," volunteered Penelope. "I rather like him."

"By Jove, Cecil! You're not afraid to meet him, are you?" asked the duke, with tantalizing coolness. "You know, if you are I'll go over and talk to the fellow."

"Afraid? Now, hang it all, Barminster, that's rather a shabby thing to suggest. You forget India."

"I'm trying to. Demmed miserable time I had out there. But this fellow fights. That's more than the beastly natives did when we were out there. Marching isn't fighting, you know."

"Confound it! You forget the time"—

"Mon Dieu! Are we to compare ze Hindu harem wiz ze American feest slugger?" cried the count, with a wry face.

"What's that?" demanded two noblemen in one voice. The count apologized for his English.

"No one but a coward would permit this disagreeable Shaw creature to run affairs in such a high handed way," said her ladyship. "Of course Cecil is not a coward."

"Thank you, my dear. Never fear, ladies and gentlemen. I shall attend to this person. He won't soon forget what I have to say to him," promised Lord Bazelhurst, mentally estimating the number of brandies and soda it would require in preparation.

"This afternoon?" asked his wife, with cruel insistence.

"Yes, Evelyn, if I can find him."

And so it was that shortly after 4 o'clock Lord Bazelhurst, unattended at his own request, rode forth like a Lochinvar, his steed headed bravely toward Shaw's domain, his back facing his own home with a military indifference that won applause from the assembled house party.

"I'll face him alone," he had said a trifle thickly for some unknown reason when the duke offered to accompany him. It also might have been noticed as he cantered down the drive that his legs did not stick out so stiffly, nor did his person bob so exactly as on previous but peaceful expeditions.

In fact, he seemed a bit limp. But his face was set determinedly for the border line and Shaw.

CHAPTER II.

In Which a Young Woman Trespasses.

MR. SHAW was a tall young man of thirty or thereabouts, smooth faced, good looking and athletic. It was quite true that he wore a red coat when tramping through his woods and vales, not because it was fashionable, but because he had a vague horror of being shot at by some nearsighted Nimrod from Manhattan. A crowd of old college friends had just left him alone in the hills after spending several weeks at his place, and his sole occupation these days, aside from directing the affairs about the house and grounds, lay in the efforts to commune with nature by means of a shotgun and a fishing rod. His most constant companion was a pipe, his most loyal follower a dog.

As he sauntered slowly down the river road that afternoon, smiling retrospectively from time to time as he looked into the swift, narrow stream that had welcomed his adversaries of the morning, he little thought of the encounter in store for him. The little mountain stream was called a river by courtesy because it was yards wider than the brooks that struggled impotently to surpass it during the rainy season. But it was deep and turbulent in places, and it had a roar at times that commanded the respect of the foolhardy.

"The poor devils might have drowned, eh, Bonaparte?" he mused, addressing the dog at his side. "Confounded nuisance, getting wet after all, though. Lord Bazelhurst wants war, does he? That log down there is the dividing line in our river, eh? And I have to stay on this side of it. By George, he's a mean spirited person, and it's his wife's land, too. I wonder what she's like. It's a pity a fellow can't have a quiet, decent summer up here in the hills. Still"—lighting his pipe—"I dare say I can give as well as I take. If I stay off his land they'll have to keep off of mine. Hullo, who's that? A man, by George, but he looks like a partridge. As I live, Bonaparte is pointing. Ha, ha, that's one on you, Bony!" Mr. Shaw stepped into the brush at the side of the path and watched the movements of the man at the "log," now less than 100 yards away.

Lord Bazelhurst, attired in his brown corduroys and his tan waistcoat, certainly suggested the partridge as he hopped nimbly about in the distant foreground, cocking his ears from time to time with all the aloofness of that wily bird. He was, strange to relate, some little distance from Bazelhurst territory, an actual if not a confident trespasser upon Shaw's domain. His horse, however, was tethered to a sapling on the safe side of the log, comfortably browsing on Bazelhurst grass. Randolph Shaw, an unseen observer, was considerably mystified by the actions of his unusual visitor.

His lordship paced back and forth with a stride that grew firmer as time brought forth no hostile impediments. His monocle ever and anon was directed both high and low in search of Shaw or his henchmen, while his face was rapidly resolving itself into a bloom of rage.

"Confound him," his lordship was muttering, looking at his timepiece with stern disapproval, "he can't expect me to wait here all day. I'm on his land, and I'll stay here as long as I like!" (At this juncture he involuntarily measured the distance between himself and the log.) "I knew it was all a bluff, his threat to put me off. Hang it all, where is the fellow? I won't go up to his beastly house. I won't gratify him by going up there even to give him his orders. Demmed cad, blowhard! Five o'clock, confound him! I dare say he's seen me and has crawled off into the underbrush. He's afraid of me; he's a coward. It is as I feared. I can't see the rascal. There's only one thing left for me to do. I'll pin a note to this tree. Confound him, he shall hear from me. He'll have to read it."

Whereupon his lordship drew forth a large envelope from his pocket and proceeded to fasten it to the trunk of a big tree which grew in the middle of the road, an act of premeditation which showed strange powers of prophecy. How could he, except by means of clairvoyance, have known before leaving home that he was not to meet his enemy face to face?

As Mr. Shaw afterward read the note and tossed it into the river, it is only fair that the world should know its contents while it hung unfolded to the bark of the tall tree. It said in a very scrawling hand: "Mr. Shaw, I have looked all over this end of your land for you this afternoon. You doubtless choose to avoid me. So be it. Let me state once and for all that your conduct is despicable. I came here personally to tell you to keep off my land henceforth and forever. I will not repeat this warning, but will instead, if you persist, take such summary measures as would befit a person of your instincts. I trust you will feel the importance of keeping off." To this his lordship bravely signed himself.

"There," he muttered, again holding his watch and fob up for close inspection. "he'll not soon overlook what I've said in that letter, confound him!"

He had not observed the approach of Randolph Shaw, who now stood, pipe in hand, some twenty paces behind him in the road.

"What the devil are you doing?" demanded a strong bass voice. It had the effect of a cannon shot.

Well, Read the Interesting Whys and Hows of the Telephone Directory If You Want to Get In, You Had Better Call The Local Manager To-day

It is to the mutual advantage of the Telephone Company and the subscriber to have the latter listed in the directory as soon as possible after he gets his telephone, because such a listing saves many calls for "Information."

The Boston division directory plays such an important part in promoting good service that its preparation, printing and distribution are subjects of the most careful supervision. It costs a good deal in time and money to revise an average of 40,000 listings per issue, to transform 600 tons of paper into 200,000 books of 400 pages each, and to distribute these books over 1,500 square miles, but it is well worth the effort.

It is apparent that the preparation for printing must proceed on a schedule as arbitrary as that of a newspaper pressroom. If the book is not produced promptly, much of its value is lost. When the closing date is announced, therefore, the printing must proceed with whatever listings are at hand. Those received subsequently must be held over for a later issue.

The patron who rushes in at the last minute with his order may find he cannot be listed in the next book. It may be for one of many reasons, such as the running of additional wires or the setting of new poles or cross-arms; but the reason is a compelling one, although perhaps it might have been overcome had sufficient notice been given.

MORAL: Don't wait another day if you are contemplating installing a telephone, or changing to another class of service. Call the Local Manager from any Telephone or Pay Station FREE OF CHARGE.

NEWSPAPER ERRORS

The editor of an exchange doesn't want anyone to send him any more copies of his papers in which they have found mistakes. If they find a perfect copy, however, he offers a big price for it. Same with us, says the editor of the Crystal Falls (Mich.) Drill. If the fool critic who hunts for mistakes in the papers would find them all he would be kept busy. We will be pleased to buy copies of any paper which can be proven entirely free from errors, either typography or in statements of fact. We will be pleased to find a merchant who never made a mistake in putting up an order; a lawyer who never lost a case through his own errors, a doctor who never wrongly diagnosed a case, a druggist who never made a mistake, a postoffice official who never put mail into the wrong box, a woman who never forgot to put in the salt while cooking or to put the tea in the teapot before putting in the water. Bring on some of your mistakeless paragons who find it so easy to criticize the papers and we'll give them a chance of their lives to find out whether they are really human.—Publisher's Auxiliary.

SUGGEST CHANGES IN THE AUTOMOBILE LAWS

Many important changes in the laws governing the operation of automobiles are recommended in the annual report of the State Highway Commission, transmitted to the General Court last Friday.

The commission states that the use of heavy motor trucks is increasing very rapidly, and the rates of speed at which many are run are excessive and decidedly dangerous. It also says:

"The commission believes that the law should limit the weight and speed of such vehicles and the speed at which they may be moved over the highways. .... The law should limit the kind, character and weight of the vehicle and load..... Already one bridge on the main line between Boston and Fitchburg has been practically destroyed by a six-ton truck which went over it. Officials in many towns are complaining that roads which they repair are immediately destroyed by heavy motor trucks. Commercial vehicles and motor trucks now travel long distances, and the commission feels that it is only fair that the same fee should be charged for their registration as for automobiles of like horsepower."

The report states that the number of automobiles in operation is constantly increasing, but the accidents in many places increase at a faster ratio. The commission believes that it would prove a great safeguard not only to the public but to the motorists as well, if an absolute maximum speed limit, say of 25 miles an hour, were fixed by law. This, it says, is a reasonable limit, and no sane operator would care to go much faster.

In view of the difficulty encountered in securing adequate sentences for persons convicted of reckless operation, or operation while under the influence of liquor, the commission suggests that the present maximum penalty of six months' imprisonment be increased.

Hubby had arrived home while wifey slept and at the breakfast table there was a cold silence.

"A penny for your thoughts, my love," he daringly ventured.

"For two cents I'd tell you what I think of you," she retorted, with a dangerous gleam in her eye.

He did not raise his bid.

CHANGE IN MAGNOLIA TELEPHONE SERVICE.

Last Saturday the Magnolia telephone lines were "cut over" from the local exchange to the Manchester office, and at the same time the service changed from the magneto to the common battery switchboard, which means that subscribers in calling "central" now do not have to ring; simply remove receiver from the hook and a little light in the telephone office signals the operator automatically. The Magnolia office is closed. But under this new system Magnolia calls for Magnolia subscribers will continue to be given the individuality of the Magnolia exchange. The calls will be handled just as though they registered in Magnolia village, instead of three miles away, in Manchester. The rates for local and toll service will remain the same. The service on the whole ought to give more satisfaction, as the system is more up to date and will be in keeping with that at all the other exchanges along the shore.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE

The premiere of Wolf-Ferrari's "The Jewels of the Madonna," an event which is being awaited with more eagerness than any other among the several promised for this season at the Boston Opera House, is now definitely set for Friday evening, Jan. 17. Hitherto, in the year since it first saw the footlights, the work has been sung only in Chicago, Philadelphia and New York on this continent, for previously it has belonged only to the repertory of the Chicago Opera Company. In Germany, Italy and England it has won most enviable success and next summer will witness its introduction to Paris, when Miss Garden will create Maliella, a role which might have been hers if she had thought it worth while, when Mr. Dippel first staged the opera in Chicago.

Just as the composer, himself the offspring of a German-Italian marriage, combines the two nationalities in his temperamental make-up, so does the opera incline toward the rich modern harmonies of German opera in its orchestration, while at the same time retaining a flow of melody distinctly Italian. For this reason it has an equally strong appeal to the adherents of either faction. In Berlin

Wolf-Ferrari has been accused of being too Italian and in Italy his Teutonic tendencies have been declared to be the strongly predominating ones.

Again as was the case in "Louise" the street scenes call for a very long cast of characters and almost the entire strength of the organization will appear.

The other bills for the week are: Monday, Jan. 13, "Pelleas et Melisande" with Mmes. Edvina, Gay and Fisher and MM. Riddez, Lankow and Mardones; Wednesday Jan. 15, first subscription performance of "Carmen" with Mme. Gay in the title role, Miss Donner as Micaela and MM. Zonatello and Mardones. In response to a general request that "Haensel und Gretel" be repeated at an afternoon performance it will be given again on Saturday matinee in conjunction with "Cavalleria Rusticana." The popular performance on Saturday evening will be given over to "Aida." Miss Elizabeth Amsden will sing the name part.

"SAIL FROM BOSTON."

"Sail from Boston—But First See New England" is the title of a very attractive folder just issued by the New England Lines for the purpose of making better known to the people of New England, the middle West and the Provinces the advantages of Boston as a port of departure for trans-atlantic travelers.

The folder tells why you should sail from Boston—why Boston is the logical as well as the most delightful port of departure for those who are planning to go abroad.

It also sets forth the wonderful fascination of a journey across New England to Boston. It pictures the loveliness of New England lakes, mountains, countryside and sea coast as you see them from the car window on the way to Boston.

It is full of information about the Boston steamship lines. It gives the sailing schedules of these lines and contains an excellent map in colors of the routes.

Much stress is laid on the fact that time is saved by sailing from or to Boston—that Boston is 190 miles nearer Europe than other great American cities. Thus the traveler saves nearly 12 hours' time. That means a good deal if you are in a hurry to get to Europe or don't like the sea.

Copies of this folder may be obtained by addressing Room 475, South Station, Boston, Mass. *

POLITICAL "TRADES AND DEALS"

If the opposition to the newly elected mayor of Beverly is as pronounced throughout the year as it appeared to be at the inauguration in the Garden City on Monday last, there will be a continual deadlock between the chief executive and the majority of the Board of Aldermen. Although Mayor MacDonald is apparently trying to carry out his pre-election promise of clean government for Beverly, some of the aldermen do not seem to agree with him.

Monday's inauguration brought out the first instances of petty opposition to the mayor, when several measures introduced by Mayor MacDonald were ignored by the aldermanic board. The mayor acted within his rights when he demanded that his recommendations be given due deliberation irrespective of their merits. The Board of Aldermen failed in their duty to the community in not respecting the communications of their executive, but a victory was won for Mayor MacDonald by the public sentiment that was aroused against the refractory members.

It is quite evident that there will be a sharp fight for better things at Beverly City Hall despite the organized system of "trades and deals" that now prevails. Undoubtedly Mayor MacDonald and Aldermen Wiley, Smith and Goldsmith will exert an influence in the management of city affairs that will remedy many of the abuses of other years. Mr. MacDonald announced that he was to be mayor in fact as well as in name, and his initial move against the opposing factions at City Hall is indicative of his intention to carry out the declaration. He has the support of the right-thinking people of his city.

THAT ELUSIVE POWER.

Manchester and vicinity is fast earning a reputation which promises to equal Alaska in the matter of periods of continual darkness. We refer to the too frequent disappearance of the electric power which Beverly furnishes hundreds of residents of Manchester. At least thirteen times within two months has the electric power taken some wild flight and refused to center its attention on this vicinity.

During the summer season the young people might welcome the absence of too much electric brilliancy, but if the townspeople are paying for electric lights in their houses and the business men are depending upon power in many cases for running their shops it would seem that Manchester might get better service by obtaining a system of its own.

The trouble is of course more noticeable after storms, when the electric companies are often seriously inconvenienced by the effects of the elements on their systems. But when power is denied the people for hours at a time in thirteen days out of two months, it would seem that Manchester could do much better with some service of its own.

THE PARCEL POST AND EXPRESS COMPANIES.

No person can dispute the wisdom of the Parcel Post and the fact that it should prove a boon to the people, but the express companies are quite unsuccessfully trying to show that they can send parcels cheaper in Greater Boston than can the new government parcel delivery.

While it may be true that these companies can in the limited territory of Boston and its environs carry a parcel cheaper than the government they will find it hard to explain how a parcel may be carried cheaper by them outside of this immediate zone.

For instance, if one wished to send a package weighing ten pounds to Los Angeles, California, two or perhaps three express companies might carry the package, and their rates are not uniform. This would bring the cost a great deal higher than that charged by the parcel post.

The government's innovation is a sure step toward helping lower the cost of living. It is going to facilitate the business of the small merchant, and this same small business man is, after all, the backbone of the country's commercial interests. The new delivery is bound to give every business the advantages now open only to the large mail-order houses.

The people should be "from Missouri" and make the express companies demonstrate more clearly to them why the parcel post is not a better means of parcel conveyance for them than the express companies. The American people have been waiting long for the parcel post, and they are going to show their appreciation of its possibilities by supporting it.

PUBLIC SERVANTS

Although there is but little probability of the New Haven road losing President Mellen in the future by his resignation, some of the opposition which meets the attempts of his road to better railroad conditions in New England must be indeed trying to a man of even his patience. Already one report has been made concerning Mr. Mellen's resignation and just as quickly denied, and it would not be a surprise if he did become thoroughly disgusted with the petty opposition of the yellow newspapers and the letter-writing public which is always finding fault with the service of the railroads.

Outside of the weather-man there is probably nothing that is more continually "knocked" than the railroads. Any move that is made by them to increase business and promote the general industry of a locality is said to be due to the ulterior motives of the company. Some times we wonder at the apparent smallness of New England character as evidenced by the petty grievances that are registered against some of our corporations. Public service in New England is no sinecure, and it is no wonder that really capable men are hard to find, for the fact that they have to put up with so much abuse from those whom they try to serve.

The lure of the sea caused forty-five fishermen from Gloucester to lose their lives during the year just past. A debt which is indeed large is owed by society to the fishermen for the hardships and perils these men suffer that the fish of the sea may find a place on our tables. The loss of life and the sufferings of the fishermen makes the monetary loss of the year, $73,800, dwindle into insignificance by comparison.

In their determined efforts to assist foreigners the North American Civic League is doing a wonderful work among the aliens of Boston. The league is doing much to help newcomers to the "land of promise" learn our ways and methods, and should receive the financial and moral support of all citizens.

The election of John L. Saltonstall as a member of the Beverly water board was one of the commendable features of the first meeting of the city government on Monday. Mr. Saltonstall is the best qualified man in the city for the position, and it is a municipal fortune that his services have been obtained.

North Shore people who journeyed to California to escape the rigor of a New England winter have probably been somewhat disappointed as weather conditions in that section have not even compared favorably with those on the Atlantic coast. An unusually severe winter is being experienced in Pasadena, the "City of Roses," and the same severity is being felt elsewhere in California.

Laxity in railroading is not a misdemeanor; it is crime. In this new departure it is evident that every precaution is to be taken for the protection of the public.

Fr. Nicholas R. Walsh, rector of the Catholic church in Beverly Farms, is to give his lecture on Rome at the school building in the course of popular lectures. The attendance at this address will be large as Rev. Mr. Walsh has won his place among the people of all creeds in Beverly Farms.

A pertinent illustration of Congressman Gardner's appeal to the people for a conservation of resources is given us in the recent losses by fire in Minnesota forests. In the last year the loss has been kept down to $25,000, as against $4,000,000 in the last ten years.

A spirit of public service was evidenced on Monday, when the Beverly Farms band played at the Beverly inauguration without payment. This example made a striking contrast to some of the actions of the Board of Aldermen at the inauguration.

THAT PROCTOR STREET PROBLEM!
Editor of The Breeze:

Why would it not be a good solution of the Proctor street (Manchester) problem to continue the Old Neck Road, following the well worn foot path across the Smith field, making a short and easy cut to Smith's Point; a very gradual ascent over land well prepared by nature. Surely the authorities will not go to the expense of widening Proctor st. without at the same time remedying that dangerous and troublesome corner at Mazonoma and Beach streets, and what would that mean in the matter of cost to lower the grade, sink the water pipe, beside paying for a generous slice of Mr. White's $10,000 lot. The proposed road would surely relieve the old way of two-thirds of its travel, make a much more direct road to Smith's Point, from whence most of the travel comes. Manchester does not need any more Castles, but the man who has the courage to buy the Smith field (ten acres), which Boardman will sell for $30,000, cut it up into house lots, build cottages which will rent from ten to fifteen hundred dollars, will fill a want long felt, be a public benefactor, and increase his private bank account at the same time.

The town would get a lot of taxable property; our many ambassadors would provide with summer homes within their names.

The new road would make all this feasible. Consider the proposition well, dispatch it quickly, and place Manchester-by-the-Sea on the map, more effectually if possible, than it is today.

Taxpayer.

An idea of the magnetism of the name America in European countries may be realized by the estimates made that about 1,400,000 immigrants will come to this country during the year 1913. It is little wonder that the American people believe that something ought to be done to further restrict immigration to this country. But some solace may be gained by the fact that many thousands will return to their homes across the ocean in the same time.

The annual banquet of the horticultural society will be held Wednesday evening, Jan. 22. Members desiring tickets must procure same before the 15th, as after that date the tickets will be on sale to the public. The dinner will be served at 6.30, followed by an entertainment and dancing. Dill of Melrose will be the caterer.

Attorney Willmonton received word yesterday morning that his client, Mrs. Abraham Lampson had been granted an absolute divorce, the custody of children, the real estate and an alimony of $10.00 a week. The case was tried in the superior court at Salem several weeks ago. Since that time the defendant, Abraham Lampson, has been sent to jail for one month, because he broke the terms of his probation.

Local Red Men will be interested to know that as an entertainment feature of the meeting next Wednesday evening, Jan. 15, J. E. Beckwith, photographer for the Lynn Item, will give an illustrated talk. The views include pictures of the Red Sox at Hot Springs in training, of the World's Series at Boston and New York, as well as other pictures of general interest. A collation will be served after the meeting. The meeting will open at 7.45 sharp.

LOW DEATH RATE

ONLY 24 IN MANCHESTER IN 1912.
OTHER VITAL STATISTICS

The vital statistics of Manchester, printed on page 27 of this issue, contains some interesting information. First of all it shows that Manchester is a pretty healthy town to live in. Of the regular population of the town numbering about 2800, and with nearly 1500 more in summer, only 24 deaths are recorded for 1912. In 1911 the number was 32; in 1910, 28. Of the 24, ten were over 70 years of age and five of that number were over 80.

The records show that marriages are slightly on the increase. In 1910 the number was 25; in 1911, 27, but last year it was 30.

The number of births, however remain about the same. There were 59 in 1912; 60 in 1911, and 64 in 1910. Of last year's birth 32 were females and 27 males. The stork has the reputation of dividing things up pretty evenly, but last year it must be admitted—as a glance at the records on page 27 will reveal—he favored the girls during the first part of the year. Between Jan. 1 and Aug. 1 he brought to Manchester 25 of the year's supply of 32 girls, against 10 boys, but, as if to even matters up, he started in on July 28 with a pair of twin boys and with hardly a break he brought along 17 boys. He skipped Manchester entirely the month of November. Of the 59 babies born during the year only one died,—a remarkable record in itself.

Ten percent of the births during the year were in the half a dozen or more Polish families living in town, which lends the obvious suggestion that if the native families of the town were as progenitive the record of births would show a rate of nearer 350 than 59 for the year.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Coombs of School street are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter.

Waldo Peart has spent a few days during the last week visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Peart, Bennett street.

Miss Helene Sherman and Mrs. F. L. Smith are to give a costume party in Town hall this evening. Something new in the line of decorations is being prepared and a very good attendance is expected.

We regret to report the continued serious illness of George Peckham, who has been the Manchester agent of the American express for the last year. Mr. Peckham is at the L. M. Haskins hospital in Rockport with typhoid fever. It was reported Wednesday that he was not expected to live.

Manchester is at the foot of the list in the North Shore bowling league, with a record of four games won and eight lost, out of a total of 12 played. Gloucester and Beverly are tied for first honors, with 7 games won; Ipswich is third with 6 won and 6 lost. Of the individual average record Austin Jones holds fourth position with 100.

During the severe wind storm last Friday the chimney on the house occupied by Alfred Herse, on Bridge street, was blown down. A length of fence near Cat Brook was blown over, while a good sized hen house on the F. B. Rust property, School street, was tipped over killing a hen as it fell. A number of large limbs were blown off some trees on School, Tappan and Beach streets.

A Manchester Branch of the Massachusetts association opposed to the Extension of Suffrage to Women was formed at a meeting at Mrs. J. C. Mackin's home on North St. Monday afternoon. It is planned to have a meeting about once in six weeks if the members so desire. Some of the best speakers interested in the cause are promised for the meetings. At the meeting, Miss Anne Clarke was elected chairman and Mrs. Mackin, secretary and treasurer, of the Manchester branch.

Lodges and Societies Install Officers

A joint installation of officers of Allen Post 67, G.A.R., and of Allen Relief Corps, was held last Friday evening, in the Manchester Town hall, and was the occasion of a large gathering of the members of the two orders, as well as the auxiliary societies, the S. of V., and Associates. Prior to the exercises, a supper was served in the G.A.R. hall from 5 to 7.

Adj. Gen. W. C. Wetherbee of Boston installed the officers of the Post while the work of installing the officers of the W.R.C., was performed by Past Dept. President Mrs. Nellie F. Libby.

The officers of the post who were installed are as follows: Enoch Crombie, commander; Nathaniel Morgan, senior vice com.; Alfred S. Jewett, jr. vice com.; Charles P. Goldsmith, sergt.; John G. Haskell, quartermaster; Charles H. Stone, officer of the day; James H. Rivers, adjt.; Alfred S. Jewett, patriotic inst'r.; Edwin P. Stanley, sergt. major; Thomas W. Morse, quartermaster sergt.

The officers of the Woman's Relief Corps are the following: Miss Mary Morgan, pres.; Mrs. Carrie Cook, sr. v. p.; Mrs. Isabelle Stanley, jr. v. p.; Mrs. Hannah Tappan, treas.; Miss Mable Walen, sec.; Mrs. Jennie Dennis, chaplain; Mrs. Barbara Cook, conductor; Mrs. Cleve Bell, guard; Mrs. Nellie Doane, asst. conductor; Mrs. Ruth Bell, asst. guard; Mrs. Sadie Follett, Mrs. Ethel Swett, Mrs. Nellie Smith and Mrs. Hattie Baker, color bearers.

After the installation Mrs. Libby made a few remarks and was presented with a bouquet of flowers from the local corps. Adj. Gen. Wetherbee was another speaker, giving a short talk on the various camps in the state. Comrade L. F. Knowles, acting guide, made a few remarks appropriate to the evening's program.

An honorary membership in the W. R. C. was tendered Associate F. M. Stanwood by Mrs. Hannah Tappan. Mr. Stanwood responded in a short address on the life of famous generals in the U. S. Army and closed his remarks with an eulogy to Gen. U. S. Grant, whom he termed "the greatest general of the Civil War."

The Sons of Veterans held their annual installation of officers in Town hall Tuesday evening, the installing officer being Past Com. Walter R. Bell and Division Commander Kirschgasner.

After the installation Commander Crombie of the post and President

Miss Mary Morgan of the W.R.C., made a few remarks, followed by a short talk on the work of the local camp by Commander Kirschgasner. At the close of his speech Mr. Kirschgasner was presented with a set of military brushes by Past Commander Lyman W. Floyd on behalf of the camp members. Following the presentation Francis M. Stanwood, associate member of Post 67, G.A.R., gave a most interesting talk on "Men That I Have Met," among those particularly referred to being "Tom" Lawson, General Taylor of the Boston Globe and James G. Blaine.

After the serving of refreshments, informal dancing was enjoyed by those present, Miss Alice Latons playing for the dancers.

An unusually large attendance was present at Tuesday's meeting of the Manchester Woman's club at the Congregational chapel. Mrs. D. T. Beaton called the meeting to order at 3.30 and announced that the business would be postponed until after the program, the first number of which was a violin solo by Miss Marian Scott, accompanied by G. Allyn Brown. Miss Scott played unusually well and was rewarded by enthusiastic applause.

Miss Irene Bewley of Boston was reader for the afternoon and she gave an amusing little reading, "The Mission Box That Scandalised the Village," before rendering her four-act monologue, "Esmerelda." The plot of "Esmerelda" was that of a North Carolina family becoming suddenly wealthy through a vein of iron ore appearing on their rather barren farm. Mrs. Rogers, the real head of the family, has social aspirations and sells the little farm that she and her husband and daughter may live in "style." The life of the American family in Paris is humorously and, at times, pathetically, narrated. Mr. Rogers and Esmerelda, who are at heart "home folks," are not happy in their new life and the discovery that their money has disappeared and the appearance of Dave Hardy, Esmerelda's old lover, upon the scene straightens things out so that the ending is entirely happy for all except Mrs. Rogers, perhaps, whose schemes for marrying her daughter to a marquis have failed.

Miss Bewley's expressiveness of face and figure, made the monologue exceptionally graphic and her presentation of the various characters won much praise and applause for her.

After the business meeting the secretary's report was read and accepted and the President read an announcement of a Child Welfare conference to be held at Stoneham next Tuesday, January 14. A motion was made and carried that a delegate be appointed by the chair to attend the conference and Mrs. Hattie Baker was chosen to represent the club.

K. OF C. HAVE BIG TIME

Masconomo council, K. of C., of Manchester, held a big meeting in the Town hall, Wednesday night. The occasion was the working of the Third Degree upon a class of about 70 candidates, from the councils at Manchester, Beverly Farms, Beverly, Peabody, West Roxbury, and several other places. Deputy Francis J. Buckley and staff of Gloucester performed the work in a most creditable manner. The deputy from Peabody was also present. Several hundred men were in town for the occasion, many coming in motor cars and large busses.

MANCHESTER YOUNG WOMAN ENDS ROMANCE BY MARRIAGE.

The marriage last Saturday afternoon of Miss Helen Rosetta Allen of Manchester and Lawrence E. Easter of Brazil, Ind., reveals a romance which had its inception one night last summer, when a party of Manchester girls went to Salem Willows and attended a dance at the casino there.

Miss Allen is the daughter of Charles J. Allen, caretaker of the S. V. R. Crosby estate at West Manchester. She was employed in the local telephone exchange the past summer. Her husband is a first-class electrician on the U.S.S. New Jersey, now at the Charlestown navy yard.

The marriage was performed at Charlestown last Saturday afternoon by Rev. O. Forbes Hall of the First Congregational church. Miss Allen slipped into Boston unknown to her family or friends "to attend the theatre." Tuesday she left West Manchester for a visit at South Duxbury, with the Urquharts, formerly at the S. P. Blake estate, West Manchester. Even then her father or friends had not learned of the marriage, but the Boston papers of Wednesday contained an account of the elopement.

In the spring, when Mr. Easter's term of service in the navy is up, he intends to return to his home in Indiana with his bride. The young people's attendants at the wedding were Miss Marguerite Boutiluier of Boston and West Manchester, and V. Leavitt, also of the New Jersey.

BUSINESS MEN'S ASSOCIATION

The annual meeting of the Business Men's association of Beverly, Manchester, Wenham and Hamilton was held Monday night. Ozro M. Field was elected president; Vice Presidents, George E. Rowe, William Stopford, George F. Pendexter, Hamilton; Directors for one year, Charles F. Lee, John H. Newell, Charles A. Baker, John H. Girdler, Willis G. Whitcomb, Elmer Standley, Beverly Farms, George S. Sinnicks, Manchester, I. A. Sturtevant, ex-officio; Treasurer, Roland P. Woodbury; Auditor, John F. Hill; Secretary, Benj. A. Patch.

The annual banquet will be served at City hall, Beverly, next Tuesday, Jan. 14, when the speakers will be Thomas P. Riley of Malden, and Frank H. Pope of Leominster.

AS TO THE WEATHER!

A touch of real winter weather has been experienced along the North Shore during the past few days, the sleet storm of Tuesday accompanied by a sharp drop in the mercury giving the ground an icy covering which has resulted in fair sleighing and good tobogganing.

The sudden drop in temperature during the past two days is but another instance of the changeability of the New England climate, although many North Shore summer residents who have journeyed to California and the west coast find but little difference in the weather there.

It is apparent that winter is settling down to its work in earnest at last, eight degrees above zero being the surprisingly low temperature recorded in Manchester on Wednesday morning.

Postmaster Wheaton has sent into the department at Washington the record of business done by the parcel post for the first week. The number of local packages sent in town were 5; incoming, 142; total 147. Outgoing, 287. Average weight, 111-100 pounds. Postage $29.30. Insured packages dispatched, 5. Insured packages received, 2. The local business is increasing daily.

MANCHESTER

Born, Tuesday, Jan. 7, a son, to Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Pynn.

Born, Thursday, Jan. 9, a daughter, to Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ayers.

The vital statistics of Manchester for 1912 are printed on page 27 of this issue.

Mr. and Mrs. Snelling have gone to Florida for the winter. Mr. Snelling is chauffeur for the W. J. Mitchells.

Miss Lila Peters, who is now making her home in Beverly, has been visiting in town this week.

Archie Cool, who has been employed by the American Express Co., this summer, has been transferred to the West Newton office.

The next entertainment in The Manchester club course will be held Thursday evening, Jan. 23. It will be an illustrated lecture on the Grand Canyon.

Comrade E. P. Stanley will give a talk at the meeting of the S. of V., next Tuesday evening on the life and work of the late Col. Samuel F. Tappan, an account of whose death in Washington will be found on another page.

The two daughters of Daniel Meaney, Morse court, had a close call Tuesday morning when they were overcome by gas from a coal stove. They had retired quite late the previous night and the coal which was put into the stove had not had time to burn up sufficiently to take off the gas before arranging for the night. When Mr. Meaney called his daughters next morning one of the girls responded, but fell on the floor as she left her bed. The other in going to her sister's aid also fell. The doctor was called and pronounced it a case of partial asphyxiation.

The installation of officers of the Rebekah lodge will be held next Friday evening, Jan. 17.

ODD FELLOWS' INSTALLATION.

The annual installation of officers of Magnolia lodge, 149, I.O.O.F., of Manchester last night, drew out a gathering of 59 members and visitors from other lodges. Deputy Andrew M. Stone and suite from Marblehead were the installing officers. Following are the officers for 1913: Thomas Wiggin, noble grand; George M. Matheson, vice grand; F. Clifford Rand, secretary; Henry T. Brigham, financial secretary; Edward A. Lane, treasurer; John Lee Prest, warden; Stephen Henry Hoare, conductor; Raymond C. Allen, chaplain; S. Albert Sinnicks, l. s. s.; Arthur E. Olson, r. s. n. g.; James Kehoe, l. s. n. g.; Howard M. Stanley, r. s. v. g.; Arthur A. Smothers, l. s. v. g.; Byron A. Bullock, inside guard; E. L. Rogers, outside guard; Granville Crombie, past grand.

The report of the treasurer and financial secretary showed the lodge to be in an exceptionally strong financial condition, such as to merit its record of the past as one of the strongest lodges financially, for its size, in the jurisdiction of Massachusetts. The assets of the lodge amount to over $12,015, an increase of about $200 over last year. The lodge probably holds a record for term of service of the two men handling its finances. Henry T. Bingham was installed as financial secretary last night for the 32d year; E. A. Lane, as treasurer for the 21st year.

Following the meeting last night a supper was served in the banquet room, consisting of cold meats, beans, coffee and rolls, ice-cream and cigars.

NATIVE OF MANCHESTER

"HERO OF THE NEW WEST," COL. S.
F. TAPPAN DIES IN WASHINGTON

Word was received in Manchester
Monday of the death, in Washington, of Col. Samuel Foster Tappan, a native of this town. He was buried in the Arlington Soldiers' Cemetery, at his own wish. He is survived by two sisters, one Miss Annie Tappan of Manchester, the other, Mrs. Mary Cossitt, of Lincoln.

Samuel Foster Tappan was born in Manchester, June 29, 1831. He learned the chairmaker's trade here, but afterwards engaged in business in Boston.
In 1854 he went to Kansas with the earliest company of immigrants from Massachusetts. He located on the site of the present city of Laurence.
Later that same year a city government was organized and Mr. Tappan was elected alderman. The "border ruffians" were at this time carrying elections by fraud and force, and mobbing and murdering was general.
He was elected to the Kansas Legislature, and was clerk of the House.
He was the acting speaker of the House when it was disbursed by the U. S. troops under orders from the Pro-Slavery administration. He was secretary of the two constitutional conventions, and was active in the whole struggle that resulted in driving out slavery and enrolling Kansas among the free states.

In 1860 Mr. Tappan removed to Colorado and the next year he was commissioned captain in the First Colorado Volunteers. After seeing active service in breaking up a gang of desperados that terrorized the settlements, and receiving severe wounds afterwards at the hands of some of the outlaws, he was promoted as Lieut.-Colonel and was instructed to increase his command to a full regiment.

In 1861 and '62 Col. Tappan rendered most efficient service in holding Colorado for the Union, and, with the aid of some regulars and other volunteers, in driving the rebels from Utah and New Mexico. The plan of cutting off the Pacific coast from the Union was thus thwarted. The regiment was subsequently mounted, and during the rest of the war held the frontier against Indian attacks and rebel raids, Tappan having the rank of Colonel.

Col. Tappan served on the Indian Peace Commission and also as superintendent of an Indian Industrial school in Nebraska. His life was given to freeing the slaves, procuring equal rights for the Indians, and serving his country in time of peace and war.

One writer in speaking of Col. Tappan said: "He was a gallant Union soldier and commander; a valuable member of the Indian Peace Commission in 1862 under Grant, a hero of the new West and a man not fitly recognized by the communities for his loyal and gallant service to his country." The "Voice," a paper published in New York in 1868 said: "Col. S. F. Tappan is an authority on dealing with the Indian upon the plane of equality. When in command at Fort Garland he brought the southern Utes to peaceable terms and ended a century feud between the powerful Navajoes and the Mexican farmers of Northern New Mexico and Southern Colorado."

TALKED ON TREES

John Kirkegaard of Bedford, spoke very interestingly on "Trees and Shrubs" at the meeting of the North Shore Horticultural society last Friday evening. A few of the chief points of his remarks were that a tree would never be attractive unless it was vigorous. A great many trees die for lack of care after planting.

Careful pruning is a great thing for the welfare of the trees and shrubs. A tree like oher things can be fed out of season. After a tree is once set out it does not need to be watered; nature itself can well take care of the tree. Putting of stable dressing around the trees and shrubs oftentimes is very harmful as it rots the roots. The best results may be obtained from landscape gardener as to the arrangement, variety and height of shrubs and trees.

At the close of the talk a light colation was served. Ten new names were voted upon for membership.

The Ladies Home Journal recently requested graduates from women's colleges to write them telling of the benefits of their college training. Many of the letters received were so poorly spelled and showed such a marked deficiency in grammatical structure that they were ludicrous. Which shows that the agitation of leading educators for up-to-date methods of education has not been entirely based upon theories. Elbert Hubbard gives expression to a vital thought when he said: "What we need is not so much a higher education, but we need some compelling force which will make us put into effect the education we already have."

MANCHESTER CLUB ELECTS

The Manchester club elected officers for 1913 at their meeting last Friday night, as follows: Wm. W. Hoare, president; Chas. E. Williams, vice-president; Arthur E. Olson, secretary; Oscar B. Wing, treasurer; F. J. Merrill, auditor; Wm. W. Hoare, R. C. Allen, H. T. Sweet, G. A. Knoerr and Lewis S. Hooper, executive committee; Geo. R. Dean, H. W. Purington and F. J. Merrill, music committee. The president appointed the following committee to look into the matter of annual banquet, or to see if it is the desire of the members to have a "ladies night" this year instead: Maynard B. Gilman, James Hoare, A. E. Olson, F. C. Rand, A. C. Needham and H. W. Purington. The committee will report at the meeting next Friday evening, Jan. 17.

After the business meeting a colation was served and the members gathered around the piano for a sing.

THE RAMBLER

To mention an alarm clock to a certain North Shore young lady is like throwing a match into excelsior. Miss Blank had been having a hard time of late in rising in the morning, so one day last week at her lunch hour she purchased an alarm-clock. When she returned to the office where she works she placed her purchase on her desk. During the afternoon her fellow-workers found the clock and determined to have some fun with her, so they accordingly set the alarm to go off about five-thirty, at which time she would be on a Beverly car on her way home. When our friend boarded the car she met a young man acquaintance and they chatted together on the way to the Garden City. When the Salem car stables were reached, the passengers were startled to hear what they thought was a huge gong clanging somewhere in the car. It was only our friend's clock calling out its doleful summons. The worst feature of the incident was that the clock was of a new kind that cannot be stopped, and the bell continued ringing until Cabot street, Beverly, was reached. The young man who was conversing with the miss turned all colors of the rainbow when the bell started, for the other passengers evidently thought the couple were married and had bought the clock to wake hubby early in the morning. When Beverly bridge was reached our young man could stand it no longer, and left the car. But his companion had her courage with her, and holding the clock triumphantly aloft left the car at her stop unabashed.

YOU have no doubt seen a picture of America's new "first lady of the land," Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, but this will interest you especially because it is her "official" photograph. Of all the pictures she has had taken since her husband was elected president this was selected by her as the best and promptly labeled "official." While Governor Wilson is laboring with appointments and the detail of his approaching assumption to office on March 4 next, Mrs. Wilson is busy with the social side of her new life. The duties as president's wife are many and exacting.

MANCHESTER

The Evening Register of Torrington, Ct., of recent date, contained the following item of interest to Manchester people, as it concerns the former treasurer of the Manchester Trust Co.: "The Federal Trust Company, recently organized at Bridgeport by Hosea Mann and Ralph H. Mann, and which includes some of the leading financiers of the state of Connecticut, has arranged to consolidate with the Bridgeport Trust Company. The old Bridgeport Trust Company now has a capital of $200,000 and about $140,000 surplus and over a million and half deposits. The Federal Trust Company will bring to the consolidation $300,000 capital and surplus corresponding to the proportion contributed by the Bridgeport Trust Company. The directors of both banks will be included in one large board. Ralph H. Mann, who is secretary and treasurer of the Federal Trust Company, will be made secretary of the consolidated Bridgeport Trust Company. The present president of the Bridgeport Trust Company, Mr. F. W. March, retires, and probably Mr. Sanford, president of the First Bridgeport National Bank, will be elected president of the consolidated banks."

EMPIRE THEATRE, SALEM.

"THE EASIEST WAY" NEXT WEEK
Good-sized houses greeted the Jefferson Theatre Stock company at the Empire theatre, Salem, yesterday afternoon and evening, in spite of the unpleasant weather. Two more excellent presentations of "The dawn of a tomorrow" were given by the company and the host of admirers was increased in consequence.

Everybody who has had the opportunity of seeing the company is of the opinion that it is the finest organization of its kind ever seen in Salem. Miss Adelaide Keim, the leading lady, is simply delightful in the role of Glad, the waif of Apple Blossom court, and her supporting company goes far beyond meeting the ordinary expectations.

Theatre-goers in general are enthusiastic over the company, which is far ahead of the average stock organization. It is really a company of the highest class, and worthy of the patronage of the most exacting theatre patron.

"The dawn of a tomorrow" will be presented every afternoon and evening this week, and next week an elaborate production of "The easiest way" is announced.

Tragedy and comedy do not walk hand in hand with each other, but there are times in the evolution of a play on the stage that it happens, with a resulting mirthful reaction on the part of the audience. The Rambler witnessed an instance of this recently at a performance of the dramatization of Gene Stratton Porter's famous book, "Freckles." Although the company which essayed to portray the characters of Mr. Porter's book was a fair one, the advance man with the show had evidently neglected to arrange for the very necessary "properties" to be used at the performance. One of the most amusing results of this negligence occurred at the climax of the second act, when the actor who was reading the lines of "Freckles" told his sweetheart in glowing terms of the great amount of comfort he had gained from reading certain books. To illustrate his lines and to execute the proper stage "business" he picked three volumes from a table as examples. The actor wondered that his pathetic tale should be accompanied by shrieks of laughter from the persons in the front rows of the orchestra, but this can be explained when it is remarked that the books which he said had been his only solace consisted of a directory of the city of Boston, the Acts and Resolves of Massachusetts of 1911, and a copy of the Police Gazette. Perhaps this literature might have been comforting to him, but his lines certainly did not call for such a display. After all, it was only a blunder of the property man.

The theatrical season of 1912-13 has not been hugely successful thus far, many of the Boston houses reporting slow returns for the attractions they have to offer. The fact that there are many really good attractions at the houses in the Hub has saved the season to an appreciable extent, but whether or not a presidential year has anything to do with the situation, the managers are not over-joyful. That managers are willing to chance their luck in the Hub is evidenced, however, by the opening of three new theatres during the past few weeks, while new motion-picture houses have been planned, and will soon be added to Boston's already long list of playhouses. Americans constitute the greatest theatre-going public in the world, but it would seem that their taste is being cheapened by the predominating motion-picture show as presented in every city, town, village and hamlet large enough to support it. It is a question, however, whether the taste of the theatre-going public has been cheapened or otherwise. Much has been said for and against the motion-picture, but one thing is certain — the motion-picture houses have hurt the "legitimate" productions to no small degree. The big productions which play the large cities for months at a time, and usually venture upon the road for a series of one-night-stands, have felt the effect of the "movies" on their business, and may account for a scarcity of the one-nighters in the small cities.

MAYOR FOSTER INAUGURATED

Mayor Harry C. Foster, the first man in years which Magnolia has sent to Gloucester City hall as chief executive of the city of Gloucester, was inaugurated on Monday of this week. All records for the handling of the various orders which came up in the first day's business of the municipal council were broken, adjournment taking place at 11.15 o'clock. Many ladies were in attendance at the inaugural exercises and there was a large attendance of voters.

One of the signs of progression in the mayor's office was the substitution of new furniture and carpets for the antiquated fittings which have adorned the office for several years.

Many of the associates of Mayor Foster when he was a member of the engineering department of Boston several years ago attended the inauguration, and in company with a number of personal friends of the Mayor and the members of the municipal council, were entertained at dinner at the Hotel Savoy.

Among the party in addition to the aldermen, city messenger, and press representatives, were Mrs. Amelia Foster of Magnolia, the mayor's mother; Mrs. Harry C. Foster, his brother, Edward S. Foster; Mrs. Edward S. Foster, Edward S. Foster, Jr.

FINE FOR TAKING SAND FROM BEACH

Several important recommendations are contained in the report of the State Board of Harbor and Land Commissioners, presented to the Legislature last Friday. The most, far-reaching of these is one that the commission be given jurisdiction over all non-tidal rivers and streams in the Commonwealth. Others are that any person convicted of taking or removing any stones, gravel, sand or other material from any beach shore, bluff, headland, island or bar in or bordering on any tide waters shall be punished by fine of not less than $20 nor more than $200; that the commission be authorized to make a survey of the great ponds of the Commonwealth, containing 10 or more acres of land, and ascertain to what extent they have been encroached upon by

WHERE IS OLD BLACK JOE

Just think of it—a fire department horse spirited out of the city and Chief Robert H. Grant doesn't know where it has gone.

That's a sensation that has set people talking all over town although it happened at the Farms and has to do with old "Black Joe," one of the steamer horses.

When the motor truck was installed at Hose Two it did away with the horses and there was a shift of horses and in the shift the Farms was taken care of.

Then came the disappearance act. The man who was sent down with the Farms horses is said to have had orders to take the other one back but Chief Grant professes to know nothing of the deal and some members of the fire committee say that no such vote was ever taken. But the horses went just the same.

The horse was kept in a Beverly barn for a week and then shipped down to Maine to a brother-in-law of a Ryal Side man.

Up to the present time the city council has not as yet been enriched with any money turned in for the sale of the horse by the fire committee of which alderman McPherson is chairman and some members of the committee didn't know anything about the deal, although the horse is gone and has been traced to a Maine farm.

Now there promises to be an investigation and the man who made the deal is likely to step into the foreground and explain how long since the city has been in the habit of giving away or loaning fire department horses to do work on a Maine farm.

There may be some interesting developments.—Beverly Times.

WENHAM

At the village church Sunday morning the minister, Rev. F. M. Cutler, will preach on "Christ's." Sunday school at noon. Y. P. S. C. E. meeting at 6. The department of social service will be in charge of the 7 o'clock meeting, and will present as the speaker, Mr. Gates of Boston, an authority upon the subject of industrial insurance.

The Ladies society will conduct a public supper Wednesday at 6. Church night Thursday at 7.30 will take the form of a class in mission study, using the current text book on China.

The children of the grammar school held a successful fair Wednesday in the central school building, for the benefit of their school funds.

MAYOR MACDONALD INAUGURATED.

Mayor Herman A. MacDonald, the youngest man ever elected as chief executive of Beverly, and a resident of Beverly Farms, was inaugurated as the twelfth mayor of the Garden City at noon last Monday. A somewhat stormy session of the Board of Aldermen followed the formal inaugural program in which several measures which Mayor MacDonald brought to the attention of the aldermen were overlooked. The trend of the mayor's inaugural address showed, however, that he has a thorough knowledge of the various departments of municipal administration, and despite the apparent opposition of some of the aldermanic board, will undoubtedly prove one of the most successful mayors that Beverly has ever had.

Rev. Clarence S. Pond offered the prayer at the inauguration, and the Beverly Farms band contributed several selections to the program.

The first meeting of the Beverly Board of Aldermen proved to be one of the liveliest sessions of that body held in years. Some of the aldermen seemed to entertain a decided animosity toward Mr. MacDonald and twice forced him to take the floor in defence of measures which he had suggested in the course of his inaugural address. The questions which resulted in argument were centered about some changes in committees which the mayor had outlined, and did not seem to be to the liking of the opposing aldermen.

Several surprises were sprung on those interested in the minor elective offices. One was the election of William B. Publicover on the Park Commission, the latter winning over Benjamin F. Hawkins, who was a candidate for re-election. Some of the other interesting changes were the election of John L. Saltonstall, member of the water board for three years; Charles E. Riva on the board of assessors over Hervey Lunt, who had served for fifteen years, Dr. J. William Voss elected on the board of health over Dr. Whitman G. Stickney who was a candidate for re-election.

One of the recommendations of Mayor MacDonald was that the clerk of committees be abolished, but Aldermen Blaisdell, Brown, Lane, Hull and McPherson thought otherwise and elected William A. Lee, who has since resigned.

Guy C. Richards has been named by the mayor as city solicitor in place of Alfred E. Lunt.

The regular meetings of the board are to be held on the second and fourth Mondays in the month.

BEVERLY FARMS

The third of the free course of lectures and entertainments being given for the enjoyment of the Beverly Farms people, will be held tonight at the school house hall. Rev. N. R. Walsh will lecture on Rome, with stereopticon illustrations. This lecture will no doubt draw a large number as all are interested to hear one who is really acquainted with Rome. Mrs. John H. Linehan will be the hostess for the evening. The John West orchestra will furnish the music.

The banquet of the Business Men's association will be held next Tuesday evening at City hall. There will be addresses by public speakers and a musical program has been arranged.

Theo. A. Holmes, the Ward 6 member of the Board of Assessors, was elected chairman of that board at the meeting held Wednesday. He will make the canvass of Wards 1 and 6.

The Beverly Farms firemen at their meeting last Monday evening appointed a committee to make arrangements for their annual "night off." The Steamer Co. will probably take theirs on Saturday evening in two weeks time while the Hook and Ladder Co. plan for the early part of next month. The night off means a trip to Boston and a banquet, after which all attend some theatre.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. D. Connolly are being congratulated on the arrival of a grandson at the Brighton home of Dr. and Mrs. George F. Keenan (nee Gertrude Connolly).

The 1st and 2nd degrees were worked on 21 candidates at the meeting of O. W. Holmes Council, K. of C., at their meeting last Sunday afternoon in Marshall's hall. Grand Knight McKenna of Beverly worked the 1st and District Dept. G. K. Sheehan and staff of Peabody, worked the 2nd. There were many present from out of town. On Wednesday evening O. W. Holmes Council sent a large delegation to Manchester to witness the working of the 3rd degree.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Dienstadt of Haskell street are being congratulated on the arrival of a baby boy the latter part of last week.

One of the prettiest gatherings ever seen at City hall was that of last Monday evening, the occasion being the inaugural ball given in honor of Mayor MacDonald. The hall was very prettily decorated. Previous to the dancing, Mayor MacDonald and his mother received the guests. The Mayor was presented with a rosewood gavel. A large number from the Farms attended the ball.

The Beverly Farms band at its annual meeting last Tuesday evening elected the following officers for the ensuing year: Russell Cadigan, pres.; A. J. Gallagher, vice-pres.; E. Fred Day, sec.; Arthur Harlow, treas.; F. P. Gaudreau, Robert Smith and George Thompson board of directors. Ruel Davis will be the leader and L. M. Blythe the instructor. The business meeting will be held the first Tuesday evening of each month. The band has a membership of 20 and is making an excellent reputation by their good work.

The Ladies Sewing circle of the local Baptist church will have their annual turkey supper at the chapel next Thursday evening to which their husbands will be invited.

The installation of officers of Preston W. R. Corps takes place in G.A.R. hall next Wednesday evening. The work will be performed by Mrs. Wadsworth, the department patriotic instructor. Allen Post 188 will be guests. A supper will be served previous to the meeting.

George P. Connolly, while at the Geo. R. White estate in Manchester, Wednesday, slipped and fell heavily on his back, dislocating his shoulder. Medical attendance and the administration of ether was necessary to replace the shoulder. He is now getting along very comfortably.

Mrs. Cornelia Wallace of Philadelphia, Pa., has been a visitor at Beverly Farms the past week.

La grippe is a common complaint about the Farms, a score or more being victims.

John A. Morrison who has been in charge of a large job at Oyster Bay, L. I., for Connolly Bros., for the past year, returned to Beverly Farms this week.

The lining up of Aldermen Hull at last Monday's meeting, with what has been called "The Bunch,"—or those aldermen who voted against the mayor—according to sentiment as seen in Ward 6 by the Breeze man, is certainly a keen disappointment, for he was expected by many of his Beverly Farms constituents to be of the calibre of independent voting, and was expected to give the new mayor much support. The position taken by the Ward 6 alderman since Monday has certainly been the "talk of the town."

Unclaimed letters at the Beverly Farms postoffice for week ending Jan. 8th: Bailey C. Brown, K. Batchin, Leroy Burpee, Leo. Carie, Mr. and Mrs. J. Carie, Miss Lilla Domenick, James S. Enslie, Miss F. This has been a week of prayer at the local Baptist church with special services on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings. Each evening the pastor delivered addresses. The subject for Tuesday was a missionary one: "Our Neighbors Across the Sea;" Wednesday, "The Church," and Thursday, "Kingdom Among Men." Last Sunday morning the pastor preached to a large audience and at the 6 o'clock service there was a Scandinavian service addressed by Rev. G. W. Lindstrom, who also spoke at the later evening service. On account of the lecture at the school tonight the regular Friday evening service will be omitted.

Arthur D'Avignon and family moved from Connolly place to the newly remodeled tenement of D. W. Hardy on Hale street this week.

A three-horse hitch is now being driven by John W. Morgan of the Farms Fire Department. Steamer 3 is so heavy that two horses are unable to draw it and on hills is a good load for three horses.

The boys of the Pastor's Hour met this afternoon at the Baptist church. Among other interesting things the boys voted to extend a vote of thanks to James B. Dow, Connolly Bros. and Oscar Hakanson for courtesies shown them, which helped to make their sleigh ride on Christmas eve a pleasant affair.

Miss Carrie Davis and Miss Alice Leahy were among the 400 present at the New Year's party of the Carney Hospital Nurses Alumnae, held in Horticultural hall, Boston, Wednesday evening of this week. The party was given for the purpose of obtaining the nucleus of a fund to be used for sick members. On the entertainment committee for the affair was Miss Sara Donovan, a well known Beverly Farms young lady who was graduated from the hospital about a year ago.

BUFFETS

Splendidly illustrate, at present, this point. Wholesale prices on these are higher today than formerly, therefore they are rated in the market to be worth more; but at TITUS' the same fair and low prices are in effect. Not long ago we placed a large order for BUF-FETS before the advance in price, and we've marked them to sell strictly on the basis of what they COST us; so that, for example, you can buy at TITUS'

THIS BEAUTIFUL OAK BUFFET FOR $16.50

Which is several dollars below what the market would rate it to be worth. 'Tis so attractive in design and decorative appearance that when placed beside some of our higher priced ones it doesn't suffer any by comparison. It is well made and has a bevel plate mirror, also plenty of cupboard and drawer room. For our lowest price buffet it is unexcelled. Our large and handsome line shows other values up to seventy-five dollars.

"FRIENDSHIP CIRCLES" IN SOLID GOLD.

Friendship Circles are the newest thing in brooches. With astonishing rapidity they have sprung into popularity in all parts of the country. They are a perfect circle and have been named "Friendship Circles" because, like friendship, they are endless. Seldom does one find a piece of jewelry so simple in design and yet so rich in appearance. The three patterns shown are all solid 14k gold, richly engine turned. They are very smart with the new neckwear and are much used to fasten the Fichu which is now so popular. They are also very practical for the back of the collar as there is nothing to catch in the hair. Illustrations are actual size. Prices are quoted for other sizes also.

BLUE BIRDS for Happiness!

These pretty little Blue Birds are symbolic of Maeterlinck's story of the quest by two peasant children, for the Blue Bird (meaning Happiness or Good Fortune). Their quest is vain until they do a kindly deed for a little cripple, and lo! the Blue Bird is with them in their own humble cottage!

These Pins are sterling silver, heavily enameled on the front and gilded on the back. The Birds are colored a beautiful blue. Illustrations are actual size.

The daintiness of the Pins and the sentiment they express make of them delightful gifts.

We have torn three pages from our little gift book showing some timely and very desirable articles which have proved very popular with our customers in all parts of the country.

Perhaps you have a gift to buy for a friend, or mayhap you wish to buy yourself a gift. These pages may help you with some happy suggestions.

Any articles sent charges prepaid, on receipt of price.

AUTOMOBILISTS' OR TRAVELERS' CUSHION

As a gift for automobilists—one that will be appreciated and used—consider this cushion.

It is made of fine morocco, padded comfortably, and has a fine silk lining containing five small pockets. It fastens at the top with snap fasteners and has two stout flexible handles for carrying. It is very light in weight and measures 10½ by 13 inches.

This is a soft, comfortable Cushion, and at the same time a convenient receptacle for papers, letters, veils, gloves, etc., when traveling. For the automobilist or ocean traveler it is invaluable. It is illustrated both open and closed.

A gift that is sure to please!

Simply to seek happiness for its own sake is not the highest aim in life, and it often eludes those who make it the chief end. To be useful in one's day and generation is a far nobler object of desire, and a surer road to happiness; the truly useful man is the truly happy man.

A son was born Sunday, in Washington, to Cong. and Mrs. Andrew J. Peters of Massachusetts. Mrs. Peters was formerly Miss Martha R. Phillips, the daughter of Mrs. J. C. Phillips of Boston and "Moraine Farm," North Beverly, where her marriage to Mr. Peters took place on June 23, 1910. Mrs. Peters is the sister of Dr. John C. Phillips, and of William Phillips, who has been secretary of the American embassy in London.

SOCIETY NOTES

The marriage Wednesday week of Miss Cintra Hutchinson and Hallowell Vaughn Morgan, at Holy Trinity church in Philadelphia, was the most brilliant society event of the week in the Quaker City. The bride is the daughter of Sidney E. Hutchinson, who has a delightful summer estate on West Beach, Beverly Farms. Following the marriage at noon there was a reception at the Hutchinson home on upper Walnut street.

The annual fair in aid of the Industrial School for Crippled and Deformed Children will be held at the Copley-Plaza, Boston, on Thursday, Feb. 6, from 10 to 6, and the following day from 10 to 12.

The guests for the winter are, Mrs. Harvey Cushing and Mrs. S. Warren Sturgis. The circle meets Wednesday afternoons at the homes of its members in Boston and vicinity.

CECELIA LOFTUS AT KEITH'S

Cecelia Loftus, the greatest of all mimics, who has not appeared in this country for several years, comes to B. F. Keith's Theatre next week at the head of one of the strongest and best balanced vaudeville bills ever arranged for this popular playhouse. Miss Loftus is one of the biggest stars ever brought to this country by Mr. Keith for his circuit. For this tour she has elected to give imitations of some of the best known and most popular stars on the American stage, including Nora Bayes, Billie Burke, Rae Samuels, Jane Cowl, Mrs. Fiske, and several others. One of the most notable features of her act is an impersonation of Maude Allan, in costume. Miss Loftus' engagement is positively limited to one week only. Another big feature of the week will be May Wirth, the Australian equestrienne, and the greatest bare back rider in the world. Little Miss Worth is only eighteen years of age, yet she is the only woman who has ever been able to perform the feat of throwing a backward somersault from one galloping horse to another. She will be assisted by the Great Wirth family, including several beautiful horses.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE

Mme. Frieda Hempel, from the Royal Opera, Berlin, will make her debut at the Boston Opera House on Monday evening, Jan. 20, singing in "The Barber of Seville." The coming to America of this famous singer was several times deferred on account of illness. She made her initial appearance in New York on the night after Christmas as the Queen in "The Huguenots," and enthusiasm such as is witnessed but seldom at the Metropolitan was the tribute paid her singing, there being curtain calls after the third act.

In Boston her first appearance will be made an auspicious occasion, for associated with her will be John McCormack, the great tenor, and Vanni Marcoux, the most eminent of French baritones.

When sung for the first time in Boston last week, Wolf Ferrari's "The Jewels of the Madonna" scored the most remarkable success in the history of the Opera House and so great is the interest taken in this work that it will be sung twice next week, on Wednesday night and Saturday matinee with the original cast headed by Mme. Edvina.

On Friday evening "Carmen" will be given its second subscription performance, with Mme. Gay in the title role.

Prince of Wales, Heir to the English Throne, Quite a Golfer

THE Prince of Wales, heir to the throne of England, has gone in for golfing. He has become fairly proficient in it. This picture of him was taken recently as he was making a drive. After he has concluded his studies at Oxford the heir apparent will spend some time in sport of this kind and in travel. It is likely that he will come to America in 1913 for a tour of the country.

First Night Critics.

In an article in the American Magazine, Walter Prichard Eaton writes:

"The theater door man is an important person on first nights, because as he passes out return checks between acts he hears the comments of the audience. His ears are wide open on such occasions, and, mingling with the crowd in the lobby, are other attaches of the theater, all seeking to overhear the comments, and all rushing to report to the manager. Not long ago the last act of a play in New York was entirely changed after the opening night solely because the women in the audience as they left the house, were nearly all complaining of the tragic finish. When a piece hangs in the balance between success and failure, when 'finkering' can perhaps turn the scale, these frank comments overheard in the lobby are of great importance to author and manager. In other cases they are a barometer of success or failure, though the ultimate test, of course, is the subtle attitude of the audience in the auditorium, its spontaneous enthusiasm or its coldness and signs of boredom."

GAIN IN MOTH WORK ON NORTH SHORE

Shown by Report of Col. W. D. Sohier of Summer Residents' Committee.
Situation Best Since Infestation Began.

Approximately $60,000, nearly half of which was raised by subscription among the residents of Beverly, Manchester and Magnolia has been spent during the past season in the campaign to save the North Shore forests from the ravages of browntail and gypsy moths. An area of 3600 acres has been cleared and sprayed, and the committee in charge of the work feels that it has placed the woods in a condition better than at any time since the invasion of the tree pests five years ago.

A report on the work done has been prepared by Colonel William D. Sohier for the Summer Residents committee which is composed of Oliver Ames, Charles H. Tyler, William D. Sohier, Major Henry L. Higginson, Gardiner M. Lane and Geo. Wigglesworth. In its conduct of the work the committee has cooperated with the state and with the subscribers, giving them a protective belt back of their estates.

Funds for the work were obtained, as in the past, from the public and from summer residents. The allowance from the state was $22,500; the appropriation by the city of Beverly was $5000 and by the town of Manchester $5000. Besides this residents in Beverly gave $15,150; residents in Manchester gave $8434 and residents in Magnolia gave $2985.

Discussing the results obtained the report says: "We exceeded all former records this year, partly because we were favored with good weather, but principally because of the increased efficiency of our men and our spraying machines. Three thousand seven hundred and seventy-four acres were sprayed in twenty-three days. We had thirteen power spraying machines actively at work, and one motor truck spraying machine. This truck took care of all the roadsides very much more advantageously, and for very much less money, than they have ever been cared for before. To a large extent this increased efficiency was secured by employing a high priced and competent mechanic, and by keeping the parts and supplies constantly on hand.

"Your committees have adopted the policy of keeping enough of its more experienced men employed during the winter so that it will have efficient and competent foremen to direct the work the next year. This has proved a great economy. When the work started with the low-powered spraying machines, we could not throw to the tops of the trees. It was then considered a good day's work when a gang of eleven men and one power sprayer sprayed five or six acres a day. This year it was no unusual occurrence, where conditions were favorable, for one of the new machines with the same number of men to spray eighteen acres a day. The average acreage sprayed by each machine this year was something over twelve acres per day for the whole twenty-three days. We sprayed on an average of 164 acres a day.

"Roughly speaking about 1000 acres of woodland were cleared and sprayed in 1908 about 2100 acres in 1909, about 3000 acres in 1910, about 3200 acres in 1911, and over 3600 acres in 1912. The cost was approximately as follows:

1000 acres in 1908 .....	$60,000
2100 acres in 1909 .....	60,000
3000 acres in 1910 .....	57,000
2300 acres in 1911 .....	54,500
3600 acres in 1912 .....	38,000

"To all riders, drivers, pedestrians and bicyclists our beautiful wooded roads are one of the chief attractions of the North Shore. There are over thirty miles of these roads which have been built and are maintained wholly by subscription, at a cost of from $50 to $75 a mile annually. This money is obtained from a few subscribers to the moth fund, who allow their subscriptions to be used for either moth work or road work. It did not seem advisable to try to collect two separate subscriptions for work in the woods, as the repair of these roads is, relatively, a small item. These roads from which automobiles are excluded, all of which have a conspicuous sign at the entrance to that effect, have from time to time been used by automobilists.

"The writer hopes that all automobile owners on the North Shore will realize that these wood roads are the only places today on the shore where ladies and children can drive with any comfort, and where it is safe to allow young children, boys and girls, or even adults, to either ride or drive. The original posting of these roads for the exclusion of automobiles was made by the North Shore Automobile club. It is maintained by the writer, who feels that it is only fair that the owners of motor vehicles should not operate them in these narrow, crooked roads, which are not thoroughfares, and which should be left to the uses for which they are adapted. He certainly speaks from no prejudices, as at present he does not use a horse, but has three automobiles. There is one road now open to automobilists which is a short cut from Manchester and Hamilton, it being the new Manchester water works road, and running by the Chebacco house. The County commissioners of Essex County and the town of Hamilton are going to widen and improve the road to Hamilton this year, so it will be made safe for all classes of travel.

"The roads in Wenham and Hamilton leading to Myopia have been much improved this year. Your committees feel that all the residents on the North Shore are much indebted to Hon. William H. Moore and Henry C. Frick for their interest and generous help. These two gentlemen have not only paid all the balance of the money it cost to oil and repair these roads beyond what was collected by subscription but they have also, from time to time, paid the entire cost of improving and widening them.

"The committee sees a possibility that the work may be reduced a little in the future, but expresses a hope that the Commonwealth and the cities and towns will cooperate in the future as they have in the past. It hopes that every resident on the shore who enjoys the woods, the trees and the dustless roads will assist financially in maintaining satisfactory conditions.

"Your committee feels," says the report, "that the summer residents owe a great deal to Governor Foss and his state officials, the state foresters, superintendents and men in charge of the work, to the mayor and city government of Beverly, and to the selectmen of Manchester, for their generous help and cooperation, without which it would have been impossible for your committees to have done systematic, thorough and efficient work against the gypsy moth under one responsible head and without regard to town lines. The selectmen of Hamilton have also cooperated by caring for many of the woods in that town. Without this cooperation and the money given by the state, municipalities and subscribers, our forests and beautiful shores would have been greatly injured.

"The roads in Wenham and Hamilton leading to Myopia have been much improved this year. Messrs. Moore and Frick have not only paid all the balance of the money it cost to oil and repair these roads beyond what was collected by subscription but they have also, from time to time, paid the entire cost of improving and widening them. This last year they paid for improving and widening at the hill by the little school house and for widening at the corner in Hamilton near Mr. Bush's house. They have also requested that some very expensive improvements be made at one or two other bad corners some of the work being now in progress.

"If it is possible to secure the assent of the authorities in the city of Beverly, and the town of Wenham, also that of the county commissioners, the corner will be much improved near Mr. Shaw's at Preston Place by building the road in the new location across the field, widening at the corner.

Messrs. Moore and Frick have each agreed to pay for one-half of the cost of the above improvement.

"Grapevine road, Essex street, Rubby road to Myopia entrance, parts of Larch Row and Walnut street were repaired and oiled last year. The cost of the work was over $3,900. Subscriptions were collected from various members of the Myopia club amounting to $1,200. The town of Wenham contributed $324.50, and the town of Hamilton $100. The deficit of $2,346 was made up, one-half each by Messrs. Moore and Frick.

"These roads are to be patched and shaped from time to time during the season.

"As in former years, the city of Beverly agreed to pay bills for an amount not exceeding $1,000 for the shaping and repairing of about ten miles of road in Beverly which are much used by the summer residents. These roads are Greenwood avenue, Thissel street, Common lane, Boyle, Standley, East Corning and Corning streets and Brimbal avenue. In addition, the city paid a part of the cost of oiling done on Ober, Neptune and several other streets; the balance being paid from the water fund raised by Mr. Boardman.

"The work on the Beverly Farms end has been in charge of Connolly Bros., under the particular charge of Thos. D. Connolly. The work on the Beverly end has been in charge of John A. Gaffey. The repairs on Wood roads were made in the Chebacco and Essex woods by David E. Mears of Essex, and in the Commons by Stephen D. Edwards. All of these gentlemen gave their personal attention and a great deal of interest to the work. It is due to their efficient work that the roads are as good as they are, and the cost considering the results accomplished, exceedingly small."

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE

Henry Russell, Managing Director of the Boston Opera Company has just been notified that he has been nominated as a member of the National Institute of Social Sciences, "in recognition of distinction attained in operatic production" as the official notification reads. It is the first time in the history of the society that an operatic impresario has been singled out for the honor, and accordingly particular significance is attached to this national recognition of Mr. Russell's attainments.

The Institute is composed of two hundred and fifty men and women, who by their recognized achievements in the social sciences and by the distinction which has come to them through service rendered to humanity, have made themselves eligible for nomination. President Taft is the honorary president and on the executive staff are Hamilton W. Mabie, Elihu Root, Joseph H. Choate, Miss Jane Addams and Miss Mabel Boardman.

Included in the membership in the department of art and letter, with which Mr. Russell will be affiliated, are David Belasco, Miss Geraldine Farrar, Mrs. Fiske, Daniel Froham, Miss Ellen Glasgow, E. M. Holland, Eben D. Jordan, H. E. Krehbiel, Robert B. Mantell, Miss Julia Marlowe, Mme. Lillian Nordica, Otis Skinner, E. H. Sothorn, David Warfield, the Hon. James Bryce, and Mrs. Kate Douglas Wiggin, a truly representative company.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE

Mrs. Fiske and the Manhattan Company, under the direction of Harrison Grey Fiske, are to come to the Hollis Street Theatre in "The High Road," on Monday, January 20, for an engagement of two weeks which will include midweek as well as the regular Saturday matinee.

In "The High Road," his latest work, Edward Sheldon, author of Mrs. Fiske's former graphic success, "Salvation Nell," is said to have felt the pulse of the moment and to have written a play with a purpose but without a preachment. It is a story, so to speak, of soul progression.

Dramatically, the greatest interest in "The High Road" lies in the triumphant battle waged by one woman against powerful men and powerful interests, with her own happiness and the political future of her husband as

BOOKS

Some Topics in the January Magazines.

Many patrons of the Public Library who do not feel that they have the leisure to read books may still find time to read a short article in a magazine. To this class the periodicals taken at the local Library offer a varied selection in their January numbers.

"Lawyers and Physicians: a Contrast" is a very good essay in which the two professions are contrasted. The writer evidently had a warm place in her heart for the medical profession. "The Balkan Crisis" by Roland G. Usher, a very instinctive article, is also to be found in the Atlantic for this month.

"The Human Side of Joseph Jefferson" by Mary Shaw in the Century makes very entertaining reading. He is known to most of us as "Rip Van Winkle" or "Bob Acres." The writer gives many anecdotes about his home life which was a very happy one. "Parcels Post" by Howard Florence in the Review of Reviews is a timely article giving a good deal of information about a subject of which most of us know very little.

The Autobiography of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge is now running in Scribners as a serial. It began in the September 1912 number. He gives us a picture of Boston of fifty years ago which contrasts very strongly with the Boston of today. Our taste for reading must have changed somewhat since that time for I am afraid that some of the books read by the Senator would not interest the boys of our day.

Anyone interested in the early history of our country especially the French colonization period will be glad to have the opportunity to read the series of articles now appearing in Scribners—"The French in America" by John Findley. There were many heroic characters among the French pioneers of this country as anyone knows who has read "Pioneers of France in the new world" by Frances Parkman.

I wonder how many reading this note can tell who won the Nobel prize in literature for 1912. He wrote the "Fool in Christ," "Atlantis" and a number of plays. He is the subject of a good paper in the Review of Reviews for this month. When you have read it you will know a great deal more about this brilliant writer.

Many more interesting topics might be mentioned but come to the Library and look over the magazines and I am sure you will find many things that will interest you.

the issues that hang in the balance.

Mrs. Fiske has probably never had a more wonderfully human or more appealing role and her presentment of it is conceded to be one of the most brilliant triumphs of her brilliant career.

An admirable company, will of course, be found in Mrs. Fiske's support, including in the principal roles, Frederick Perry, Arthur Byron, and Herbert Delmore.

A clerk in a local drug store made a "break" one day this week that must have made his customer think he had obtained his training in a kindergarten.

A man entered the store in a hurry and asked for a dozen two-grain quinine pills.

"Shall I put them in a box, sir?" asked the clerk.

"Oh, no," said the customer, "I'm going to roll them home."

SOCIETY NOTES

Miss Constance Gardner, daughter of Congressman and Mrs. Augustus P. Gardner and granddaughter of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, was given a dinner last evening at the Somerset club, Boston, by Dr. William Sturgis Bigelow, a classmate of her grandfather, Harvard '71. The guests were the younger set and covers were laid for 26. The table decorations were of white lilacs and pink roses.

THE RAMBLER

With visions of the reception tendered the so-called morality play, "The Easiest Way" in Boston, the Rambler prepared himself for a mild shock and attended the performance of this production in Salem this week. Although the piece may have been slightly pruned since its New York engagement with Frances Starr in the title role, it did not leave a bad taste in the mouth. Quite to the contrary, it was a most excellent production of an excellent play, and as played all this week at the Empire Theatre, in the Witch City is delighting about 3,000 theatregoers of this vicinity each day. The engagement closes Saturday.

Whether there is any similarity in appearance of a certain Manchester young man to Gyp the Blood or Lefty Louie is unknown, but an experience which he had while coming from "visiting a sick friend" in Revere last Sunday night would seem to place him in that category of gun-men. After leaving the home of his friend, he pulled his overcoat collar around his ears and started to run for a car. But he had company in his little marathon, for two policemen looking for burglars seemed to be suspicious of his stride and the fellow acting as pace-maker, engaged in a merry race for the trolley. When the bluecoats captured what they supposed was a hold-up man they found that they had been badly stung and their visions of a little heavy type in the morning papers announcing their capture vanished with their would-be prisoner.

His lordship leaped half out of his corduroys, turned with agonizing abruptness toward the tall young man and gasped "Oh!" so shrilly that his horse looked up with a start. The next instant his watch dropped forgotten from his fingers, and his nimble little legs scurried for territory beyond the log. Nor did he pause upon reaching that supposedly safe ground. The swift glance he gave the nearby river was significant as well as apprehensive. It moved him to increased but unpolished haste.

He leaped frantically for the saddle, scorning the stirrups, landing broadside, but with sufficient nervous energy in reserve to scramble on and upward into the seat. Once there he kicked the animal in the flanks with both heels, clutching with his knees and reaching for the bridle rein in the same motion. The horse plunged obediently, but came to a stop with a jerk that almost unseated the rider; the sapling swayed; the good but forgotten rein held firm.

"Ha!" gasped his lordship as the horrid truth became clear to him.

"Charge, Bonaparte!" shouted the man in the road.

"Soldiers!" cried the rider, with a wild look among the trees.

"My dog," called back the other. "He charges at the word."

"Well, you know, I saw service in the army," apologized his lordship, with a pale smile. "Get up!" to the horse.

"What's your hurry?" asked Shaw, grinning broadly as he came up to the log.

"Don't—don't you dare to step over that log!" shouted Bazelhurst.

"All right. I see; but, after all, what's the rush?" The other was puzzled for the moment.

"I'm practicing, sir," he said unsteadily. "how to mount on a run, demmit. Can't you see?"

"In case of fire, I imagine. Well, you made excellent time. By the way, what has this envelope to do with it?"

"Who are you, sir?"

"Shaw. And you?"

"You'll learn when you read that

"Ah, yes; I see it's for me. Why don't you untie that hitch rein? And what the dickens do you mean by having a hitch rein anyway? No rider!"—

"Confound your impudence, sir! I did not come here to receive instructions from you, dem you!" cried his lordship defiantly. He had succeeded at that moment in surreptitiously slashing the hitch rein in two with his pocketknife. There was nothing now to prevent him from giving the obtrusive young man a defiant farewell. "I am Lord Bazelhurst. Good day, sir!"

"Just a minute, your lordship," called Shaw. "No doubt you were timing yourself a bit ago, but that's no reason why you should leave your watch on my land. - Of course I've nothing against the watch, and, while I promise you faithfully that any human being from your side of the log who ventures over on my side shall be ejected in one way or another, it would seem senseless for me to kick this timepiece into the middle of next week."

"Don't you dare kick that watch. It's a hundred years old."

"Far be it from me to take advantage of anything so old. Don't you want it any longer?"

"Certainly, sir. I wouldn't part from it."

"Then why don't you come over and get it? Do you expect me to break the rule by coming over on to your land to hand it to you?"

"I shouldn't call that trespassing, don't you know," began his lordship.

"Ah! Nevertheless, if you want this watch you'll have to come over and get it."

"By Jove, now, that's a demmed mean trick. I'm mounted. Beastly annoying. I say, would you mind tossing it up to me?"

"I wouldn't touch it for $10. By the way, I'll just read this note of yours." Lord Bazelhurst nervously watched him as he read; his heart lightened perceptibly as he saw a good humored smile struggle to the tall young man's face. It was, however, with some misgiving that he studied the broad shoulders and powerful frame of the erstwhile poacher. "Very good of you, I'm sure, to warn me."

"Good of me? It was imperative, let me tell you, sir. No man can abuse my servants and trample all over my land and disturb my fish!"—

"Excuse me, but I haven't time to listen to all that. The note's sufficient. You've been practicing the running mount until it looks well nigh perfect to me, so I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll step back thirty paces and then you come over and get the watch if you're not afraid of me—and I'll promise!"—

"Afraid? Demmit, sir, didn't I say I was Lord Bazelhurst? Of the guards, sir, and the Seventy-first? Conf!"—

"You come over and get the watch and then see if you can get back to the horse and mount before I get to the log. If I beat you there, you lose.

How's that?"

"I decline to make a fool of myself. Either you will restore my watch to me or I shall instantly go before the authorities and take out a warrant. I came to see you on business, sir, not folly. Lady Bazelhurst herself would have come had I been otherwise occupied, and I want to assure you of her contempt. You are a disgrace to her countrymen. If you ever put foot on our land I shall have you thrown into the river. Demmit, sir, it's no laughing matter. My watch, sir!"

"Afraid? Didn't I say I was Lord Bazelhurst?"

"Come and get it."

"Scalawag!"

"By George, do you know if you get too personal I will come over there." Randolph Shaw advanced with a threatening scowl.

"Ha, ha!" laughed his lordship shrilly. "I dare you!" He turned his horse's head for home and moved off a yard or more. "Whoa! Curse you! This is the demdest horse to manage I've ever owned. Stand still, confound you! Whoa!"

"He'll stand if you stop licking him."

"Halloa! Hey, Bazelhurst!" came a far distant voice. The adversaries glanced down the road and beheld two horsemen approaching from Bazelhurst Villa—the duke and the count.

"By Jove," muttered his lordship, suddenly deciding that it would not be convenient for them to appear on the scene at its present stage. "my friends are calling me. Her ladyship doubtless is near at hand. She rides, you know—I mean dem you! Wouldn't have her see you for a fortune. Not another word, sir! You have my orders. Stay off or I'll—throw you off!" This last threat was almost shrieked and was plainly heard by the two horsemen.

"By Jove, he's facing the fellow," said the duke to the count.

"Ees eet Shaw? Parbleu!"

"I'll send some one for that watch. Don't you dare to touch it," said his lordship in tones barely audible. Then he loped off to meet his friends and turn them back before they came too close for comfort. Randolph Shaw laughed heartily as he watched the retreat. Seeing the newcomers halt and then turn abruptly back into their tracks, he picked up the watch and strolled off into the woods, taking a short cut for the dirt road which led up to his house.

"I had him begging for mercy," explained his lordship as he rode along. "I was on his land for half an hour before he would come within speaking distance. Come along. I need a drink."

Young Mr. Shaw came to the road in due time and paused, after his climb, to rest on a stone at the wayside. He was still a mile from home and in the loneliest part of his domain. The Bazelhurst line was scarcely a quarter of a mile behind him. Trees and underbrush grew thick and impenetrable alongside the narrow, winding road. The light of heaven found it difficult to struggle through to the highway below. Picturesque but lonely and somber indeed were his surroundings.

"Some one coming?" he said aloud, as Bonaparte pricked up his ears and looked up the road. A moment later a horse and rider turned the bend a hundred yards away and came slowly toward him. He started to his feet with an exclamation. The rider was a woman, and she was making her way leisurely toward the Bazelhurst lands. "Lady Bazelhurst, I'll bet my hat," thought he with a quiet whistle. "By George, this is awkward! My first trespasser is in petticoats. I say, she's a beauty—a ripping beauty. Lord, Lord, what do such women mean by giving themselves to little rats like Bazelhurst? Oh, the shame of it! Well, it's up to me. If I expect to 'make good' I've just got to fire her off these grounds."

Naturally he expected to be very polite about it—instinctively so. He could not have been otherwise. The horsewoman saw him step into the middle of the road, smiling oddly but deferentially. Her slim figure straightened, her color rose, and there was a—yes, there was a relieved gleam in her eyes. As she drew near he advanced, hat in hand, his face uplifted in his most winning smile—savoring more of welcome than of repulsion.

"I beg your pardon," he said; "doubtless you are not aware that this is proscribed land."

"Then you are Mr. Shaw?" she asked, checking her horse with premeditated surprise and an emphasis that puzzled him.

"Yes, madam," he responded gravely, "the hated Shaw. Permit me," and he politely grasped the bridle rein. To her amazement he deliberately turned and began to lead her horse, willy nilly, down the road, very much as if she were a child taking her first riding lesson.

"What are you doing, sir?" she exclaimed sharply. There was a queer flutter of helplessness in her voice. "Putting you off," he answered laconically. She laughed in delight, and he looked up with a relieved smile. "I'm glad you don't mind. I have to do it. These feuds are such beastly things, you know. One has to live up to them whether he likes it or not."

"So you are putting me off your place? Oh, how lovely!"

"It isn't far, you know—just down by those big rocks. Your line is there. Of course," he went on politely, "you know that there is a feud."

"Oh, yes; I've heard you discussed. Besides, I met Tompkins and James this morning. Pardon me, Mr. Shaw, but I fancy I can get on without being led. Would you mind?"

"My dear madam, there is no alternative. I have taken a solemn vow personally to eject all Bazelhurst trespassers from my place. You forget that I am, by your orders, to be thrown into the river and all that. Don't be alarmed! I don't mean to throw you into the river."

"By my orders? It seems to me that you have confused me with Lord Bazelhurst."

"Heaven has given me keener perception, your ladyship. I have seen his lordship."

"Ah, may I inquire whether he was particularly rough with you this afternoon?"

"I trust I am too chivalrous to answer that question."

"You are quite dry."

"Thank you. I deserve the rebuke, all right."

"Oh, I mean you haven't been in the river."

"Not since morning. Am I walking too fast for you?"

"Not at all. One couldn't ask to be put off more considerably."

"By Jove," he said involuntarily, his admiration getting the better of him.

"I beg your pardon," with slightly elevated eyebrows.

"Do you know, you're not at all what I imagined you'd be."

"Oh? And I fancy I'm not at all whom you imagined me to be."

"Heavens! Am I ejecting an innocent bystander? You are Lady Bazelhurst?"

"I am Penelope Drake. But," she added quickly, "I am an enemy. I am Lord Bazelhurst's sister."

"You—you don't mean it?"

"Are you disappointed? I'm sorry."

"I am staggered and—a bit skeptical. There is no resemblance."

"I am a bit taller," she admitted carefully. "It isn't dreadfully immodest, is it, for one to hold converse with her captor? I am in your power, you see."

"On the contrary, it is quite the thing. The heroine always converses with the villain in books. She tells him what she thinks of him."

"But this isn't a book, and I'm not a heroine. I am the adventuress. Will you permit me to explain my presence on your land?"

"No excuse is necessary. You were caught red handed, and you don't have to say anything to incriminate yourself further."

"But it is scarcely a hundred feet to our line. In a very few minutes I shall be hurled relentlessly from your land and may never have another chance to tell why I dared to venture over here. You see, you have a haunted house on your land, and I"—She hesitated.

"I see. The old Renwood cottage on the hill. Been deserted for years. Renwood brought his wife up here in the mountains long ago and murdered her. She comes back occasionally, they say; mysterious noises and lights and all that. Well?"

"Well, I'm very much interested in spooks. In spite of the feud I rode over here for a peep at the house. Dear me, it's a desolate looking place. I didn't go inside, of course. Why don't you tear it down?"

"And deprive the ghost of house and home? That would be heartless. Besides, it serves as an attraction to bring visitors to my otherwise unalluring place. I'm terribly sorry the fortunes of war prevent me from offering to take you through the house. But as long as you remain a Bazelhurst I can't neglect my vow. Of course, I don't mean to say that you can't come and do what you please over here, but you shall be recognized and treated as a trespasser."

"Oh, that's just splendid! Perhaps I'll come tomorrow."

"I shall be obliged to escort you from the grounds, you know."

"Yes, I know," she said agreeably. He looked dazed and delighted. "Of course I shall come with stealth and darkly. Not even my brother shall know of my plans."

"Certainly not," he said with alacrity. "They were nearing the line." "Depend on me."

"Depend on you? Your only duty is to scare me off the place."

"That's what I mean. I'll keep sharp watch for you up at the haunted house."

"It's more than a mile from the line," she advised him.

"Yes, I know," said he, with his friendliest smile. "Oh, by the way, would you mind doing your brother a favor. Miss Drake? Give him this watch. He er—he must have dropped it while pursuing me."

Real Estate and Improvements ... Up and Down the North Shore ...

A barricade, built of matched boards, which in length would extend 250 feet, forming an outside covering around the mansion of George R. White at Smith's Point, Manchester, is being built by Howard A. Doane, the contractor. The space between the barricade, or covering, and the house will be heated. Already plumbers are laying pipes and installing radiators to be attached to several boilers. The house is to be rebuilt on the outside by a brick veneer and the above work is being done so that the masons can lay up the walls, without being bothered by weather conditions. Nothing of the kind is known to have been done before in this section. At present there are employed on the various work, including the alterations to the gardens and the former Putnam estate which adjoins Mr. White's property and which he recently became the owner of,—about 200 men. Soule & Co. of Boston, have the contract for the brick work and Connolly Bros. of Beverly Farms, have the contract for the changes and improvements to the grounds. Many Manchester men are employed on the work by the contractors.

The state commissioner of corporations has granted a certificate of incorporation to the South Village Investment Company of Rockport. The company proposes to do all forms of a real estate business. It has a capital of $25,000 represented by 500 shares of stock each of a par value of $50. William Parsons is the president of the company, Joseph Sears, treasurer, Alvin S. Brown, clerk. The board of directors is made up of William Parsons, Eben P. Moody, James Smith, Levi Cleaves Parsons and Sumner York Wheeler.

Each of the following persons have subscribed for four shares of the company's stock: William Parsons, Eben P. Moody, James Smith, Alvin S. Brown, Levi Cleaves Parsons, Frank C. Todd, Joseph Sears, James H. Robb, Hosea C. Tufts, Eben C. Green, William O. Blatchford, Raymond E. Manson, Charles E. Brown, Edward M. Grimes, Arthur G. Leman, Benjamin F. Burns, Sumner York Wheeler, Albert Story Parsons, John Sears.

These 76 shares of stock have been paid for in land consisting of two shore lots, one containing a cottage and having a total area of 11,250 square feet at the Headlands, Rockport.

LATER THEATRE TRAIN?

It is said that a later train will run down the Gloucester branch than the present "theatre train," beginning Jan. 27. Later trains will run from Boston to many of the suburban districts, and the North Shore stations are in the change, it is reported.

DANIEL LOW'S JANUARY SALE

Essex County people have been waiting for the big January reduction sale of Daniel Low & Co. of Salem, which begins next Monday at 8.30 o'clock and continues through the week. Each year after the Christmas rush this firm of jewelers and silversmiths offers a generous discount on hundreds of stock articles for the purpose of reducing their enormous stock before taking inventory.

The sale includes many of the unique novelties with the distinctive Daniel Low quality, beside gold and silver jewelry, china and cut glass, leather and brass goods, and travelers' conveniences. Excellent values are offered in every department of the big store.

CHANCE FOR BIG SAVING

A. C. Titus & Co., the great house-furnishing store announce that they will hold their second annual mid-winter 20 per cent. discount sale on Monday, January 20th to continue through the following six days. This certainly is a notable chance for the public of Essex county and elsewhere to choose, for one week, from the renowned beautiful 'Titus' stock at savings of two dollars on every ten, four dollars on every twenty, ten dollars on every fifty and twenty dollars on every hundred dollars worth bought. Nothing will be offered in their Sale but what is strictly identical with what this reliable firm has been selling in the past while the sale will be governed, as their other sales have been, by the law of honor, which is sufficient to assure the greatest freedom in buying and the integrity of the savings made.

The firm has received advices from authoritative sources that furniture of all descriptions will be higher in price this spring than it is at the present time. Bearing this thought in mind and taking into consideration the widely recognized truth that the everyday price-markings at the great 'Titus' store are considered always to be undisputably lower than elsewhere, make the advantages of purchasing at this sale even more pronounced than the figures, themselves, indicate. A. C. Titus & Co. state that thirty days' credit on all goods bought will be given, if desired and that they will hold goods bought, 60 days free of charge.

ARE AMERICANS "MOLLYCODDLES?"

Somebody has either been playing a huge joke upon a German man of letters now stopping in Washington or else he has a much mistaken theory of the manliness of residents on this side of the water. At any rate, we will take him at his word, and accuse him of asserting that "America's future young men is going to be a very dainty youth," a very mollycoddle, in fact.

Such a learned man as Dr. Louis D. Edvarts lays claim to be can hardly be thought to be guilty of such an error of speech, nevertheless he says he believes that the American youth of the future will be a type of English Johnny, with monocle, round shoulders and a bored expression of countenance that will indicate inertia and the fact that he is a mollycoddle.

It is very apparent that this gentleman is not aware of the fact that America leads all kinds of sportsmanship and that the pace that the sons of this country set for their foreign brothers is a trifle too fast for them. One does not have to wrack his brain very much to find that American athletes made the other contestants in the Olympic games take a "back seat," and that an American holds the all-round athletic championship. Evidently our German friend is not aware of the immense work that is being done by nearly every city and town in the matter of providing playground for the young people, and that every college and university counts its stadium or football field just as valuable as its libraries and laboratories.

We always hope to give the foreign visitor a good impression of the country when he visits Washington, but evidently the only "young Americans" that he has met have been effeminated by their surroundings and not the live-wire product that everyone associates with the name American. We see no real danger of our emulating our English brother and becoming a mollycoddle. It is not a part of our make-up.

THE SHORE WELL CARED FOR

With several energetic and progressive men directing the political destinies of the North Shore section in the State House and the cities along the shore, this section ought to be well cared for during this year.

At Beacon Hill Patrick H. Boyle, Representative from this district, is a resident of Manchester, while Senator Norwood, a Hamilton man, and one who has done much for this section, is the North Shore representative in the upper branch on Beacon Hill. Allison G. Catherton, formerly of Manchester, and now Representative from the Beverly district, is looking after the interests of the Garden City, while we have in Washington Congressman Augustus P. Gardner, whom everyone knows, is "always on the job."

In the local city governments for the first time in many years two mayors have been selected from suburban North Shore towns. A Beverly Farms man, Herman A. MacDonald, is chief executive of Beverly, and Magnolia this year sent Harry C. Foster of that section to the mayoralty chair in Gloucester. Which is every reason to believe that the shore will be well taken care of this year.

SPOILING OUR BEACHES.

An important recommendation of the State Board of Harbor and Land Commissioners to the Legislature is that prohibiting persons from taking sand from beaches in this state. If it is carried out it will be a misdemeanor punishable by law to remove stones, sand, gravel or other material from a beach shore, bluff, headland, island or bar in or bordering on any tide waters. Offenders will be punished by fine of not less than $20 nor more than $200.

This is surely a step in the right direction, as persons of this section can testify after seeing the wholesale devastation of our beach lands as a result of private parties hauling away wagon-loads of sand and gravel from our shore front. In many cases the beaches have been practically ruined by the practice, and as there has been no law to prevent it, private parties have continued to work havoc with the shore.

The beaches are a part of the valuable assets of the North Shore and if the recommendation results in a law, a preservation of our beaches will be effected. At present the beaches are fast losing their worth for bathing and recreation purposes, and a quick release from this practice will be welcome.

MR. MUNSEY'S SUGGESTION

The rank and file of Progressives do not seem to take kindly to the suggestion of Mr. Munsey in his newspapers that to prevent the Democrats from gaining further power the Progressive party should fuse with the Republicans. They say they have nothing to compromise; there is no middle ground with them, and that they have no particular antipathy toward either of the rival parties. A joint convention of Progressives and Republicans, as suggested by Mr. Munsey, is distasteful to the Bull Moosers, who believe with the Republicans, that the control by the Democratic party is only temporary. Therefore they do not intend to trade with any faction to gain the ends which their party strives for. After all is said, neither the Republicans nor the Progressive party should worry much about the ascendancy of the Democrats, for their rise into the limelight promises to be short-lived, at least to the coming administration. In the meantime, everything can be done by both of the other parties to keep the "Dimmycrats," as Mr. Doolley terms them, from coming out on top again.

GOV. SULZER OF NEW YORK.

The most interesting phase of politics just at present seems to be contained in the state of New York. There we find one of the most capable and energetic men that could be elected to the governorship of any state a Democrat, but with surprisingly progressive principles, and Mr. Sulzer also openly opposing Boss Murphy and the other apostles of Tammany who wrecked Dix's administration and threatened to put the quietus on to that of Governor Sulzer's if he does not toe the mark they have set.

It is not an entirely impossible assumption that the Progressive leaders will see in Sulzer a strong champion of their own party, and they may try to induce him to come over to their ranks before the next presidential election. Already the few Progressive newspapers of the East have started throwing bouquets at Governor Sulzer complimenting him on his stand in his inaugural address, when he voiced his belief of a thoroughly progressive administration and professed an unwillingness to be dominated by the Tammany bosses while in office.

But Mr. Sulzer will have a hard time during his administration if he tries to effectually oppose the strong influences which have run through the Democratic party in the Empire state for so many years. Tammany wrecked Dix's administration when he refused to bow to their will and although Sulzer is a strong man and has the courage of his convictions he is apt to be obliged to resort to public endorsement of his term in office if he would succeed.

A MUNICIPAL THEATRE FOR BOSTON

The appearance of the Northampton Players in Boston this week under the auspices of Mayor Fitzgerald and Governor Foss purposed to show the advisability of a municipal theatre for the Hub. Fitzgerald claims as a reason for the need of such a theatre the "tendency of the theatrical managers to provide amusement of light nature." But what relation that has to Boston and vicinity is hard to determine, for in Boston at present there is to be found every conceivable sort of theatrical offering that is bound to please the tastes of the most particular. There is certainly no attraction in Boston as foolishly frivolous as the mayor's insistent rendering of "Sweet Adeline."

Mrs. Wilson is to discourage frivolity and extravagance in the White House. A reckless assertion.

The artificial scarcity of coal may wake up the Legislatures and courts to the fact that municipal coal pockets may be necessary in the near future. The trust and local dealers are exhibiting too many tricks of the trade just at present.

It is rather hard on governors of states when they have a reputation of being simply tools for getting persons out of jail. But in this state we have been given too striking example of this condition prevailing.

Californians are saying some bad things about the weather man, who has served up to the Pacific coast some of the sharpest weather on record. He predicted the Ohio flood in time, however.

Diners in New York hotels can expect almost any attraction from a cabaret show to a waiters' strike these days. "The strike is on!" seems to be the password.

A fresh outrage in New York occasionally emphasizes the utter impossibility of effectually stamping out crime in the police department of that city.

New York is getting up-to-date. A court order has been obtained by the district attorney allowing the last of the horse car lines in that city to equip itself with electricity.

It looks as though business would be good for the steel trusts during the Wilson administration. It is rumored that Col. Gaston of the National Shawmut Bank is to succeed George Von L. Meyer as Secretary of the Navy.

Chicago is to have a children's theatre to give pantomime, dramatized fairy tales and motion pictures. This is a good move and if not overdone should be successful.

Sentiment among the women at army posts is said to be strongly in favor of restoring the canteen. They have had a chance to see the working of both systems.

A bill supported by Senator Crane is in Congress giving a firm authority to utilize 1,022,000 horse power from the Connecticut river. Some power grab!

Mr. Munsey, Progressive, seems to be "in wrong."

Sulzer stands for the spoils system.

Curtis and Elite Fall and Winter Shoes at Bell's, Central square. *

About 50 Red Men attended the meeting Wednesday evening. The entertainment feature of the evening was an informal talk by J. E. Beckwith of the Lynn Item on some of his experiences with the camera. He showed about 150 views, many of them to do with baseball, aviation and other sporting events. This proved very interesting to the members. An entertainment feature not announced was the appearance of Chief Blue Sky, a real Red Man, who was for 12 years a student at Carlisle. He has more recently been on the stage, and at present is going around among the Red Men's tribes giving entertainments. He sang some Indian songs, gave the war dance and talked on the Indians. He was dressed in Indian costume.

Interesting Talk on Books at Arbella Club Meeting, by Miss Alice Jordan.

The Arbella club held its first meeting of the new year at the Congregational chapel Tuesday afternoon with a good attendance. Miss Alice Jordan of the Boston Public Library was the speaker and her address on "Books," upon which subject she is exceptionally well qualified to speak, was one of the most valuable of the lectures the club has thus far heard. Miss Jordan took up her subject, as much as possible, from a girl's viewpoint and at the outset she impressed upon her audience the great opportunity that girls have to cultivate true appreciation of literature. To follow the Roman idea of reading, that is, to select from one's reading that which is most worthy, is the better plan, said the speaker.

"Books have a three-fold value: first is their practical side. A workman, a teacher, or a student, finds in reading his greatest source of information and instruction. Perhaps the greatest value of reading is the pleasure which may be found in it. Even if one's greatest joy is in playing the violin or piano, or in painting, there are many times when one must be separated from one's beloved instrument. It is then that everybody finds enjoyment in books. The pleasure of reading is universal because it gives sympathy with people in parts of the world with which the reader is not familiar and it gives insight into the feelings and actions of types of people the reader does not know. Reading develops our sense of humor, pathos or any emotion. Our imagination is especially appealed to in poetry. The third value of reading is its social development. In a way, reading takes the place of travel with many of us and it enables us to discuss what others in different parts of the world are doing."

Miss Jordan divided books into three classes; the books, such as school stories, which we enjoy at a certain age but soon cultivate; those which we read later in life, the problem books; the really great books which we enjoy when we are young and which have still something left for us when we are old. In speaking of the great books, Miss Jordan made mention of the story hour at the Boston Public Library when about twenty or thirty little boys from the poorer parts of the city gathered every Saturday afternoon and listened to the stories of Ulysses, Siegfried and Robin Hood. Finally the boys became so interested that they wanted the other boys in the neighborhood to hear the stories. A club which met once a week on the roof of a tenement house when the same stories were retold was the result. When the cold weather came a club room was given over to their use for the afternoon through the influence of an interested party. Miss Jordan described it as one of the most interesting sights she had ever witnessed to see the boys gathered about a boy not much older who was telling one of the great stories of literature in boy language. The stories of Ulysses and Robin Hood grip the interest of the boys even in the crude form in which they are hearing them and the stories will still have a great deal of interest left when the same boys are older. Miss Jordan advised the girls to know Scott. For biography, she recommended the life of Louisa M. Alcott and "The Story of My Life," by Helen Keller. Miss Jordan spoke very strongly on the value of reading and learning poetry. Helen Keller's "The Stone Wall," was one of the latter day poems of which she spoke highly.

Miss Jordan's address was greeted with applause and the president presented her with a book in behalf of the club. Before the address Miss Ethel Townsend rendered a violin solo, "Melody in F," accompanied on the piano by Miss Hester Rust. A solo by Miss Townsend closed the program. After the entertainment, a pleasant social hour was spent during which chocolate and crackers were served.

OPEN TO MEMBERS ONLY—CLUB IS NOW SO LARGE

It has been decided that in the future, all regular meetings of the Arbella club will be open to members only.

Up to this time the club has been pleased to entertain the guests of different members, but with its increased numbers the society feels that it will be unable to extend the courtesy longer.

At all open meetings, however, all friends of the club will be most cordially welcomed.

As a successful poultry man on a small scale, Howard M. Stanley of Vine street has the record, as far as we can learn. During 1912 Mr. Stanley got 3300 eggs from 22 hens,—an average of 150 eggs per hen for the year. Based on the existing market price of the eggs the money value of the 275 dozen was $75.42 or $3.44 per hen.

SUCCESS OF MANCHESTER YOUNG MAN IN ST. LOUIS

We are pleased to learn of the success of a former Manchester boy,—Arthur S. Martin,—in St. Louis. In the St. Louis Republic of last Sunday we note on the real estate page the announcement that "Arthur S. Martin and Fred C. Breitt have severed their connection with the Holbrook-Blackwelder Real Estate Trust Company and formed the Martin-Breitt Real Estate Company. The new firm will make a specialty of leasing business property, they having been in charge of the leasing department of the Holbrook-Blackwelder Company. Mr. Martin was connected with the trust company for seven years, coming here from Boston, Mass., and Mr. Breitt for ten years. They will do a general real estate business." Mr. Martin will be well remembered by Manchester young people who are about 30 years old. Previous to going west he took up the study of dentistry in Boston but had to give up the work because of his health. He is the son of the late Israel Martin, who run the brick yard here some years ago. Mrs. Abraham Lampron of Brook street is his sister.

MANCHESTER

The W. R. C. are planning on having a farce in the Town hall in February.

Mrs. John C. Staples of Beverly spent the first of the week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Archie Greenough.

The degree team of Camp 149, S. of V., is being kept busy these days accepting invitations for initiations and installations. Last month the team was at Beverly. Next Monday night they go to Gloucester, and the first of next month the team has a call to Salem.

Following are the bids on the repair work of the plumbing in Town hall: D. T. Beaton, $176.50; A. Sjolund, $174.00; E. S. Bradley, $174.00; John Scott, $170.70; R. Robertson, $154.52. R. Robertson Co. are doing the plumbing and Roberts and Hoare the carpentering.

Master Foster Bigwood fell overboard yesterday on the channel while trying out the thin ice. He was pulled out by other boys present, but not before he had received a good ducking. The channel has not been safe during the week and the police should have stopped the children from going onto the ice.

Grafton Owens got a wetting down at the Bennett ice pond yesterday while testing out the strength of the ice. He got out of the water without assistance, and was lucky as it was, for the water is very deep in this pond.

Mr. Rogers representing the Rockport Granite Company, was in town at the request of the school board Wednesday to draw up a print of the grounds surrounding the Price school. A plan is under way to put an article in the warrant calling for a nice granite curbing between the side walk and the lawn on Norwood avenue and Brook street. Such an improvement will improve the looks of the grounds surrounding the school and such a plan as this should be supported by all.

Miss Helene Sherman was given a tin shower last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick L. Smith on School street. The articles came in all sizes, and shapes with appropriate verses, which were read, much to the pleasure of all present. Games were played and music was enjoyed after which refreshments of ice cream and cake were served. At a late hour all returned home wishing Miss Sherman, and Mr. Kehoe their congratulations upon the announcement of their coming marriage.

PRETTY COSTUME BALL

The costume party given in the Manchester Town hall last Friday evening by Miss Helene Sherman and Mrs. Frederick L. Smith was one of the most enjoyable dancing parties of the season. A green lattice with two doorways separated the upper part of the hall from the lower and provided a popular sitting-out room. The lattice formed the principal part of the decorations although grey crepe paper was strung from the chandeliers added to the effect. Nearly seventy of the young people in town attended the dance and there were many charming costumes. Among the prettiest was that of Miss Antoinette Videt, a French flower girl of the Marie Antoinette period. Miss Frances Norrie's costume of a shepherdess was also very dainty. Miss Bertha Haskell, Miss Alice Sargent, Miss Marjorie Sargent, Miss Molly McNeary and Miss Elizabeth Lethbridge wore striking colonial costumes; Mrs. Frederick Smith, one of the hostesses of the party, represented night and her gown of black voile, draped with beaded marquisette was very effective. Among the others present in costumes were Miss Gladys Semons, Indian maid; Miss Pauline Semons, Miss Edith Menkin and Hester Rust, Hungarian gipsy; Mrs. James Sullivan of Magnolia, Carmen; Mrs. Byron Bullock, Japanese lady; Miss Elsie Northrup, Red Cross nurse; Miss Edna West, housewife; Miss Abbie Floyd, Japanese maiden; Miss Helene Sherman, sunbonnet girl; Miss Anna Maslin, red riding hood and Mildred Peart as Mary with her little lamb.

Among the best of the young men's costumes was that of Winthrop Younger who represented Father Time; Frederick Smith as the town constable, was most successful. William Angus as a Scotch lad; George Beaton and Gordon Northrup as country boys; Gordon Cool as a bell boy; George Fleming, Irving and Harry Baker as Boy Scouts, Aldis Flint as a cadet; Rufus Long as a West Point cadet; Frank Floyd representing the Sons of Veterans; and Bertram Allen as a summer fellow were among the others in costume.

Mrs. Fred K. Swett is spending the week-end with her mother, Mrs. Andrew Leighton at Gloucester.

It is a sad commentary on the patriotism of American citizens that all efforts have failed in the attempt to raise enough funds to preserve as a memorial to Francis Scott Keyes the house where he lived for more than twenty years at Georgetown, D. C. Although it would seem most appropriate to preserve this structure, it will give place shortly to a modern building. "The Star Spangled Banner," however, is a more lasting memorial than any house, even though the associations of his residence might be an inspiration to pilgrims to the place.

TALK ON LIFE OF LATE SAM'L F. TAPPAN

Comrade Edwin P. Stanley gave a most interesting talk on the life of Samuel F. Tappan before the members of Camp 149, S. of V. of Manchester last Tuesday evening. The talk was very informal and the life of Mr. Tappan was given as Mr. Stanley, who knew him personally, found him. He spoke of one incident that should not be passed over, when Mr. Tappan was given a permit to raise a regiment by the governor, he at once ordered the men to assemble, very quietly outside of the hall where the meeting of the pro-slavery people was held, and also planted a field gun loaded to the muzzle with the muzzle pointing into the open front door. Next Mr. Tappan entered the hall and said, "Gentlemen through the open door you can see my gun and men and by order of the governor you are ordered to dissolve your meeting and vacate this place." They went.

Mr. Tappan also raised a company of men and turned back General Price who was trying to connect the Pacific coast and make Colorado a secession state.

He was an Indian commissioner during the term of President Grant, but was dismissed by President Cleveland. His last years were spent in writing for various papers and magazines. He wrote many poems.

During Mr. Stanley's talk cigars were enjoyed and a social hour followed.

"Which was it, right or left?" asked Atty. Schorton.

Fresno Dan walked up to the stand. The witness turned him first to the right, then to the left, then back to the right again, and finally square to the front, measuring the drop of the ear-lobes with a squint.

"Now just you come here young fellow," he said to Scharton, "take a look at that right lobe, and see if it ain't a little smaller. Now that's the one Dannie Russell had frozen, and it shows that this fellow is the right one."

An entertainment will be held in the Baptist vestry Tuesday evening, Jan. 21st. Mrs. McMurphy will read. Ice cream and cake will be on sale. Admission 10 cents.

The most important business meeting of the B.Y.P.U. held this year took place last Monday evening. Plans were arranged for the season's work along religious lines. The reports of the Lookout and Membership committees were read and accepted.

The new church organ of the Catholic church will be installed next week. It will be one of the finest organs in the state.

The King's Daughters will meet with Mrs. Herman Swett, Monday evening.

HARMONY GUILD

Harmony Guild held its annual meeting and election of officers at the chapel, Manchester Monday evening. The annual supper was served at 6:30. There were 76 guild members present and all were generous in their praise of the excellent repast served by the committee. After the supper the yearly report of the secretary, the treasurer, the visiting committee, the benevolent committee and the calendar committee was hard. A vote was taken on the question of the church calendars and it was decided to discontinue them until the church shall have a permanent pastor. After a few words of appreciation for the year's work by the president of the society proceeded with its election of officers. The following were elected: Mrs. Carolyn E. Allen, president; Miss Eleanor Morgan, vice-president; Mrs. Alice Joseph, treasurer; Miss Alice Blaisdell, secretary. The vote for these officers was unanimous. The executive committee is as follows: Miss Annie Lane, Miss Elizabeth Jewett, Mrs. Maude Carter, Mrs. Edna Peabody, Mrs. Bessie Needham.

CHAFING DISH PARTY

Harmony Guild will meet at the chapel Monday evening, January 20th. Members are requested to bring their sewing.

BROTHERHOOD MEETING

Rev. F. L. Boody of Somerville was the speaker of the evening at the meeting of the "Brotherhood" last Monday night. One of the largest gatherings of men ever in the church vestry was present. G. Allyn Brown officiated at the piano, and at the close of the remarks by the speaker a social hour was enjoyed. A collation was served by the entertainment committee.

Mr. Boody spoke on "Leadership and Strength," and said: "It is a great thing to be a man and have the strength a man should have, a strength which rightly belongs to him. We are living in an age of splendid promise and achievement. Take a map of the United States, fold it in the center, and you will have where the desolate wilderness was once, but what is now our great and wonderful West. It has all come through the strength and possibilities of man. Today we stand upon the threshold of a life of difficulties and we have got to be men of strength to meet them. I like a man who can face a danger, and meet it with a strength that can not be broken, or that will not falter.

"If we are to look at the great achievements of man today we surely must see that it is through strength that it has been done. It is represented in the linking of you men into a brotherhood. The times demand such an organization as this to do some of the great tasks which have got to be done. To be sure we will meet with indifference of a few, and it will be through the strength that we possess that we can overcome these tasks and this spirit of indifference. We must possess the strength to meet the great needs of the church for the church makes great demands of the men of strength.

"The men of a 'Brotherhood' may be of great assistance to the church even though it has been said that the church appeals to the weaker element. There are men who do not seem to be moved by their self interests, though they are full of vigor. It takes an appeal of strength to start them and so friends, let me repeat that these times demand the strength of men for the accomplishments of high purposes, and strength can surely be found in a brotherhood for the word itself defines its meaning."

The Brotherhood will meet again next Monday evening, and will continue to meet regularly on the first and third Monday evenings of the month.

MANCHESTER

The next entertainment in the Manchester club course will be held in the Town hall next Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. It will be an illustrated lecture on the Grand Canyon of Colorado.

THE CONQUEROR'S PHONE NUMBER

The teacher said: "When did William the Conqueror invade England?"

After the silence had become painful, she said: "Open your history books. What does it say there?"

A boy answered: "William the Conqueror, 1066."

"Now," said the teacher, "why didn't you remember the date?"

"Well," replied the boy, "I thought it was his telephone number."

Tom Gunn, Chinese Aviator, Who Can Do Stunts In the Air

THIS is Tom Gunn. Who is Tom Gunn? Well, to begin with, he's a Chinese; also he is an aviator. Outside of that it doesn't interest us what Tom Gunn is. China has taken up a lot of modern things lately. She adopted a republican form of government. She handed over the vote to the ladies. Now she has taken up aviation. Tom Gunn is one of the best of Chinese air men, of whom there are at present only a few. He has been exhibiting near San Francisco.

WENHAM

At the village church Sunday morning the minister, Rev. F. M. Cutler, will preach on "The Conversion of St. Paul." Sunday school at noon, Y.P.S.C.E. meeting at 6. A musical service will be held at 7.

Mr. Edmund Hartman, Secretary of the Massachusetts Civic League, Boston, delivered an address last Saturday evening in the town hall under the auspices of the Village Improvement Society upon the theme, "Town Building Laws." Mr. Hartman urged forcefully and convincingly that Wenham, together with other towns of the Commonwealth, ought to pass a vote at the coming town meeting adopting the statute passed by the last legislature relative to Tenement Houses in Towns, (Chapter 635 of the Acts and Resolves). Wenham will soon face the housing problem, as there is every sign that population will shortly begin to overflow northward from Beverly. It is easier to prevent the construction of unsanitary housing than it is to correct housing mistakes after they are made.

Mr. Arthur Gates addressed the social service forum in the village church Sunday evening, describing succinctly the new Massachusetts Workingmen's Compensation Act.

Until the passage of this act a year ago a workman had great difficulty in securing just award of damages for injuries incurred during the course of his employment. Now the state is one of the very foremost of the entire nation in according justice to man and woman injured by industrial accidents. The social service forum concluded with questions and discussion by gentlemen present in the audience.

Many Wenham people felt the sorrow of a personal bereavement at the tidings of the death, Tuesday night, of Capt. Roswill Davis. Capt. Davis' failure of health was gradual, being due to advancing years. His wife cared for him tenderly during it all. By reason of kindness and generosity Capt. Davis stood high in the esteem of his neighbors. The funeral, conducted by Rev. F. M. Cutler, took place Friday morning and the interment subsequently at Woodlawn cemetery, Everett.

Joseph S. Lynch conducted a party of Wenham visitors through the State prison at Charlestown on Wednesday afternoon.

Postmaster Porter reports that last quarter the Wenham office came within $12 of being third class, with four mails each way per day. A few more letters or parcels sent and this advance might be achieved.

BEVERLY FARMS

The members of Steamer Co. 3 of the Beverly Farms fire department have settled on Saturday, Jan. 25th, for their annual "night off." With a number of guests they will go to Boston, have a banquet and attend the theatre.

Michael O'Connor who is fast recovering from a recent illness, plans to start on Feb. 13th for a trip to Ireland, his former home.

Inspector of building John A. Ober, is out again after being confined to the house with the grip.

That the people are interested in Mayor MacDonald and the city government was illustrated at last Monday evenings meeting of the aldermen when the City hall was packed with a record crowd, there being such a number of spectators that the big hall was used. At this meeting the mayor made his committee appointments, Alderman Hull of this ward getting the following: military and state aid, licenses and police and water supply.

The second of the socials and entertainments for the members of St. John's Episcopal church was held in Marshall's hall last evening. It was a program of enjoyment from start to finish. There are several more entertainments planned for later dates.

Mrs. Sally M. Watson, a daughter of John F. Morgan of Centreville, passed away Tuesday evening after a long illness of typhoid fever. She leaves a husband and infant child. Her estimable character, sunny disposition and kindly deeds made her a host of friends. She was a niece of Mrs. John T. Elliott of Haskell street, Beverly Farms.

Stephen J. Connolly was re-elected a director of the Mercantile Bank of Salem and John H. Linehan to the same position of the Salem Safe Deposit and Trust Co., at their annual meetings this week.

BEVERLY FARMS

At the annual meeting of the Beverly Farms Firemen's Relief association held last Monday evening, W. B. Publicover and E. Fred Day representing the local fire department were elected on the executive committee. The local firemen are much interested in this association, which has done much good among its members.

Oliver W. Low is home from a pleasant two weeks' vacation trip to New York.

Eddie Decoste a well known young man, who formerly lived at the Farms, has started in the forestry business under the name of E. R. Decoste & Co., with headquarters at Salem.

The three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George S. Williams of Hart street is reported to be seriously ill with pneumonia. A trained nurse is in attendance.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Hathaway of Newark, N. J., spent the past week at Beverly Farms visiting friends.

Rev. N. R. Walsh last Friday evening at the Farms school hall delivered an illustrated lecture on Rome to an audience that taxed the capacity of the hall. The occasion was the third in the course of free entertainments given for the benefit of Beverly Farms people. In the introductory remarks of Fr. Walsh a splendid tribute was made to our country and our flag. As each picture was shown it was accompanied by interesting remarks. The audience was taken through all the principal places of interest, including churches, museums and other public buildings, parks, gardens; works of art also shown. The lecture was a rare treat and very much appreciated. The John West orchestra furnished the musical program.

Mrs. McDonnell, mother of James E. McDonnell of Haskell street has returned to her home at Clinton after spending the past two months at the Farms.

Miss Jane Bolan left the Farms Monday for Washington where she plans to spend the balance of the winter.

Mrs. Juliet Osborne of North place, Beverly Farms' oldest resident, is reported to be much improved from a recent severe illness.

John Kelly of Pleasant Valley, Long Island, was added to the clerical force at Connolly Bros. office this week.

The many Beverly Farms friends of Miss Helen Fogarty of Dorchester deeply sympathize with her over the loss of her brother, Harry W. Fogarty who passed away last Monday. Miss Fogarty spends her vacations at Beverly Farms where she has a host of friends.

"Onion River," one of Addison Davis' ice ponds on the Chebacco road, has been frozen over this week and has offered fine skating to large crowds of Beverly Farms young people.

W. R. C. INSTALLATION

The new officers of Preston W. R. corps, No. 93, were inducted into office at the meeting of the corps in G. A. R. hall Wednesday evening. The work was performed by Department Patriotic Instructor, Mrs. Lou Stewart Wadsworth, assisted by Mrs. Leighton, the Dept. Sr. Patriotic Aid. Members of Preston Post 188 were guests, as were also Mrs. Sadie Follett the corps inspector, Post commander Fowler of the Duxbury Post and Mrs. Fowler. Mr. and Mrs. Fowler have recently moved to Beverly. There were also visitors from Manchester. At 6.30 a fine supper was served in the banquet hall, which was followed by the installation of officers in the upper hall. The retiring president, Mrs. Lizzie Williams, was presented with an electric lamp and Mrs. Wadsworth and Mrs. Leighton were presented with flowers. Following the official work there were speeches and music. The corps has 87 members and is doing a noble work. Following are the officers:—Mrs. Addie Sutherland, pres.; Mrs. Mary V. Morgan, sr. vice pres.; Mrs. Mary B. Eddy, jr. vice pres.; Mrs. Alice P. Collamore, treas.; Miss M. Lizzie Hull, sec'y.; Mrs. Mary May, chaplain; Mrs. Hattie Hardy, conductor;

Mayor MacDonald is to be congratulated on the make up of his committees. The finances of the city will be looked after for the city's interest rather than the committee's. The street committee will see that a larger return of the city's money goes for the benefit of the taxpayers. These are the most important and with Mayor MacDonald sitting on the lid there won't be much put over him without the spot light of publicity being turned on.—Beverly Times.

G. P. Connolly and J. A. Morrison are planning to take a vacation trip to the Panama canal. They will probably start within ten days and be gone for about three weeks.

The annual meeting the Wenham Mutual Benefit Association was held in the town hall Wednesday evening, Jan. 8. The following officers for the ensuing year were elected: President, Charles H. McQueeney; Vice President, James E. Kavanagh; Treasurer, Fred S. Knowlton; Secretary, Elmer E. Clarke. Also a Board of fifteen Directors. The Secretary's report showed a gain of thirty-seven new members during the year, a loss of four, leaving a net gain of thirty-three. The total membership January 1, 1913, was 280. That the association has continued active operations during thirty-seven years and is prosperous today, demonstrates the zeal and efficiency of its officers and the loyalty of its members.

Mr. Cutler read a report of church beneficence for 1912 Sunday morning. The "red envelopes" have brought in $112.93, of which $40 went to foreign missions, $43 to home missions, and $29.93 to local missions—i. e., the Wenham Y.M.C.A. Individual gifts, credited to the church's account, brought up the total foreign mission gifts to $100, home missions $125, and others $132. Total of the year's reported beneficence, $357. The church membership added eleven during the year and removed 6, now standing at 78.

Just A Few Remarks about A Famous Tree And—

What has been and is made from it. In Honduras it grows luxuriantly and attains the highest excellence in its notably worthy character. The wood of this tree has a pink tint and has properties of great firmness, toughness and endurance, while it is extensively used in the making of the best grades of furniture; known as MAHOGANY. Such furniture is very handsome in appearance, the most desirable and is everlastingly durable.

Exceptionally beautiful, however, is mahogany taken from that part of the tree where the main branches shoot off from its trunk—at the tree's CROTCH. This mahogany is known to the trade as

Daniel Low's January Reduction Sale

One week, beginning January 20, 1913.

MONDAY, January 20th is the date we have set for the opening of the sale that our patrons in all parts of Essex County have been looking forward to for weeks! It is our Annual January Reduction Sale. This sale is so well known and so eagerly awaited that we are receiving daily, almost hourly, inquiries as to the date the sale will open.

This is a Reduction Sale from two points of view—yours and ours. For the purpose of reducing our stock before taking inventory we are reducing our prices to you on hundreds of regular stock articles. Every year when Christmas is over and we come up to the time of taking our inventory we find that in our enormous Mail Order stock we have many numbers that have been discontinued in our Year Book to make room for the later goods. Other articles which would undoubtedly have sold rapidly were they shown in our Year Book, have been received too late for illustration. Still other goods which we have imported have been received too late for the Christmas trade in our Retail Store. And there are always certain odd and individual things,—particularly suitable for gift purposes—which remain after the Christmas rush is over and which we would rather sell at a reduction than carry over.

For these reasons it is our custom each January to hold a Reduction Sale, placing the goods included in the sale right out on top of the counters, each article plainly marked with the regular price and the special reduced price, so that you may see for yourself just what you are saving on each purchase, and so that you may look around to your heart's content, comparing articles and prices and judging the fitness of each article to meet your needs, without involving the slightest obligation to purchase.

The sale will include gold and silver jewelry, toilet and table silver, china and cut glass, clocks, stationery, leather and brass goods, travelers' conveniences and many unique novelties not to be found in any other stores. The price reductions will be decidedly worth while, varying of course, on different articles and ranging from 10 to 50 percent. There will be excellent values in each department—enough to last all the week, but of course the earlier you come the better will be the selection.

Many people take advantage of this sale to buy birthday gifts months ahead and to anticipate for next Christmas, as well as to purchase articles for their own personal and household use. That is the secret of many shrewd shoppers, who always seem to be well prepared for each occasion as it presents itself and who have well-appointed tables and well-equipped personal toilettes.

We think it unnecessary to say anything more. Essex County people know so well what a Sale at Daniel Low's means that our store is crowded almost from the minute the doors open. To give a list of the hundreds of remarkable values from all departments of the store would be almost impossible. We ask you to come and see for yourself, for in that way only will you learn what opportunities for saving this sale affords. It will be profitable for you to come, though you live at a considerable distance. See to it that you are not one of the disappointed ones who "forgot about it until it was too late."

Remember the date, Monday, January 20th, beginning at 8:30 A. M., and continuing during the week.

NO MAIL ORDERS.

NORTH SHORE BREEZE

Vol. XI

Manchester, Mass., Friday, January 24, 1913

No. 4

SOCIETY NOTES

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Abbott and children spent the week-end at their West Manchester estate. Mr. and Mrs. S. V. R. Crosby were also among the Bostonians who opened their Shore homes for the week-end.

♦ ♦ ♦

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Grew, the former the first secretary of the American Embassy in Berlin, opened the social season in Berlin's diplomatic circles by a dance which they gave last week at their new apartment, 27 Rankestrasse. Mr. and Mrs. Grew renewed their acquaintance with Countess von Brockdorff, Mistress of the Robes of the German Empress, at the first of her series of official receptions which she recently gave at her salon. Others who attended were Count and Countess Moltke (Cornelia Thayer), the former the new Danish Minister to Berlin. Mr. Grew is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Grew of West Manchester and Boston.

Mrs. H. P. McKean gave a very attractive dance last Saturday night at the L. C. Fenno house on Beacon street, Boston, which she is occupying for the winter, for Miss Fisher of Philadelphia, who has been visiting her.

The marriage at Trinity church, Boston, last Saturday noon, of Miss Edith Wendell, the youngest daughter of Prof. and Mrs. Barrett Wendell, and Charles Devens Osborne, of Auburn, N. Y., was a very pretty affair. The centre aisle of the church only was used, the rest screened off by rows of fir trees. The beautiful Christmas decorations were still in place and made the only ornamentation on the altar. The pew ends of the entire aisle were tipped with clusters of pink carnations tied with white ribbon. The guests were confined to the relatives, there being a large family connection, and a few intimate friends, because of mourning in the Wendell family. Both bride and groom have been frequent visitors on the North Shore, the former being a sister of Barrett Wendell, Jr., who married Barbara Higginson, and who summer at Beverly Farms.

SOCIETY NOTES

Herbert Warren Mason of Heartbreak Road, Ipswich, has announced his candidacy for the board of selectmen of the town, and he is strongly indorsed by former Senator Schofield, who is retiring from the board this year after many years of service. Says the Ipswich Chronicle: "He has been warmly indorsed by a large number of citizens and his candidacy meets with general approval. Mr. Mason has resided in Ipswich about two years but in that short time he has taken a deep interest in all matters relating to town government and has made a host of friends who are pleased that he is willing to become a candidate for selectman and to serve the town in an official capacity, for they realize that a man of his standing will make a valuable official. During the past year he has been a member of the Finance Committee and he is also a member of the Republican Town Committee."

A meeting was held on Wednesday of last week at the Boston home of Mrs. Robert S. Bradley, of the Department of Sanitation of the Women's Municipal League of Boston. Alton E. Briggs of the Boston Fruit and Produce Exchange spoke on "New England's Food Supply."

♦ ♦ ♦

Mr. and Mrs. Andre Nicholas Reggio (Claire Means) are giving a series of "At Homes" on Thursdays at their residence, 41 Bellevue street, Brookline. Mr. and Mrs. Reggio were married last June in the sacristy of St. Cecilia's church and are now giving their first "At Homes" since their marriage. They spent most of last summer at Beverly Farms.

Mr. and Mrs. Lathrop Brown (Helen Hooper), after their long season at their country place at St. James, Long Island, are at the Ritz-Carlton in New York for three months. Last winter Mr. Brown leased a house in town, but this season they decided to make their headquarters at the hotel, as they are spending many of the week-ends on Long Island. Next year they will be in Washington, as Mr. Brown was elected to Congress in November.

SOCIETY NOTES

Caleb Loring of Boston and Pride's Crossing will be best man at the wedding of his cousin, George Peabody Gardner, Jr., and Miss Grosvenor, in Providence, next Tuesday. Among the ushers will be Robert Amory, Hamilton Fish, Jr., Charles deRham, Robert H. Hutchinson, S. Dacre Bush, 2d, and Samuel Eliot.

Those in charge of the tables at the fair for the Industrial School for Crippled and Deformed Children, which will be held at the Copley-Plaza, Boston, on Thursday, Feb. 6, and the following morning, are: Mrs. George S. Mumford, the flower table; Mrs. Wallace Goodrich, cake table; Mrs. Prescott Bigelow, candy table, and Mrs. George E. Warren, baby table. Mrs. Clement S. Houghton will be at the household table; Mrs. A. L. Daniels, apron table; Mrs. Harrison G. O. Colby, fancy table; Mrs. William O. Taylor, toy table, and Mrs. Philip S. Parker, table for articles made at the school. Mrs. Randolph Tucker will have the grab; Mrs. F. W. Thayer, the restaurant, and Mrs. Daniel K. Snow, the bundle table. The school has a summer shop at Manchester, it will be recalled.

A. Shuman and his daughter of the Beverly colony are to sail for Egypt the last of next week.

♦ ♦ ♦

The excellent weather since New Year's has induced many people to visit the North Shore for walking hikes, and for a day's outing.

TINY TEACUPS

The teacups and pots used in Swatow, a province of China, are no larger than those in the sets of dishes given to children for their doll houses here. Each cup contains about three sips of tea and is scarcely deeper than a thimble. It is a ridiculous sight to see fully grown men and women gravely touching these diminutive vessels to their lips. The teacups used in the province of Canton, which are about two inches deep, are small enough, but those in Swatow are probably the most lilliputian in the world.

"You ran?" She accepted the watch with surprise and unbelief.

"Here is the line, Miss Drake," he evaded. "Consider yourself ignominiously ejected. Have I been unnecessarily rough and expeditious?"

"You have had a long and tiresome walk," she said, settling herself for a merry clip. "Please don't step on our side." He released the bridle rein and doffed his hat.

"I shall bring my horse tomorrow," he remarked significantly.

"I may bring the duke," she said sweetly.

"In that case I shall have to bring an extra man to lead his horse. It won't matter."

"So this rock is the dividing line?"

"Yes; you are on the safe side now—and so am I, for that matter. The line is here," and he drew a broad line in the dust from one side of the road to the other. "My orders are that you are not to ride across that line at your peril."

"And you are not to cross it either at your peril?"

"Do you dare me?" with an eager step forward.

"Goodby!"

"Goodby! I say, are you sure you can find the Renwood cottage?" he called after her. The answer came back through the clatter of hoofs, accompanied by a smile that seduced his self-possession.

"I shall find it in time."

For a long time he stood watching her as she raced down the road.

"At my peril," he mused, shaking his head with a queer smile. "By George, that's fair warning enough. She's beautiful!"

At dinner that night the Hon. Penelope restored the watch to her brother, much to his embarrassment, for he had told the duke it was being repaired in town.

"It wasn't this watch that I meant, old chap," he announced irreverently to the duke, quite red in the face. "Where did you find it, Pen?" She caught the plea in his eye and responded loyally.

"You dropped it, I daresay, in pursuing Mr. Shaw."

The positive radiance which followed dismay in his watery eyes convinced her beyond all doubt that her brother's encounter with the tall Mr. Shaw was not quite creditable to Bazelhurst arms. She listened with pensive indifference to the oft repeated story of how he had routed the "insufferable cad," encouraged by the support of champagne and the solicited approval of two eye witnesses. She could not repress the mixed feelings of scorn, shame and pity, as she surveyed the array of men who so mercilessly flayed the healthy, fair faced young man with a gentle strength.

The house party had been augmented during the day by the arrival of a half a dozen men and women from the city, brain fagged, listless and smart. The big cottage now was full, the company complete for three weeks at least. She looked ahead, this fresh, vigorous young Englishwoman, and wondered how she was to endure the staleness of life.

There was some relief in the thought that the men would make love to the good looking young married women—at least part of the time—and—but it depressed her in turn to think of the leftover husbands who would make love to her.

"Why is it that Evelyn doesn't have real men here—like this Mr. Shaw?" she found herself wondering vaguely as the night wore on.

CHAPTER III.

In Which a Dog Trespasses.

PENELOPE was a perverse and calculating young person. She was her own mistress and privileged to ride as often as she pleased, but it seemed rather odd—although splendidly decorous—that she did not venture upon Mr. Shaw's estate for more than a week after her first encounter with the feudal baron. If she found a peculiarly feminine satisfaction in speculating on his disappointment, it is not to be wondered at. Womanly insight told her that Randolph Shaw rode forth each day and watched with hawklike vigilance for the promised trespasser. In her imagination she could almost hear him curse the luck that was helping her to evade the patrol.

One morning after a rain she rode with the duke to the spot where Shaw had drawn his line in the road. She felt a thrill of something she could not define on discovering that the wet soil on the opposite side of the line was disfigured by a mass of fresh hoof prints. She rejoiced to find that his vigil was incessant and worthy of the respect it imposed. The desire to visit the haunted house was growing more and more irresistible, but she turned it aside with all the relentless perverseness of a woman who feels it worth while to procrastinate.

Truth to tell, Randolph Shaw was going hollow eyed and faint in his ceaseless, racking watch for trespassers.

"Here is the line, Miss Drake."

Penelope laughed aloud as she gazed upon the tangle of hoof prints. The duke looked as surprised as it was possible for him to look after the wear of the past night.

"Hang it all, Penelope," he said. "I didn't say anything, don't you know?"

"I was just thinking," she said hastily, "what fun it would be for us to explore the haunted house."

"Oh, I say, Pen, that's going out of the way for a little fun, isn't it? My word, it's a filthy old house with rats and mice and all that—no place for a ghost, much less a nice little human being like you. They're all like that."

"I think you are afraid to go," said she.

"Afraid of ghosts? Pshaw!" sniffed the duke, sticking out his chest.

"Yes, Shaw; that's whom you're afraid of."

"Now, see here, Pen, you shouldn't say that. Shaw's a d—, a cad. See what Cecil did to him. Remember that? Well, pooh! What would I do to him?" Penelope looked him over critically.

"I'll admit that you're larger and younger than Cecil," she confessed grudgingly. "But they say Mr. Shaw is a giant killer." The duke dropped his monocle and guffawed loudly.

"Good!" he cried in the ecstasy of pride. His worn, dissipated face lighted up with unwonted interest. "I say, Pen, that's the nicest thing you've said to me in a week. You've been so deuced cold of late. I don't understand. I'm not such a bad lot, you know."

"Tell that to Mrs. De Peyton and Mrs. Corwith. They're looking for the good in everything."

"By Jove, I believe you're jealous! This is the proudest moment of my life."

"Don't be silly! And don't try to make love to me any more. Wait until I'm married," she added, with a laugh, the irony of which escaped him.

"But, hang it all, suppose you should marry some one else and not me?"

"That's what I mean."

"Oh," he said, perplexed. Then, as if his stupidity called for an explanation: "I had a beastly night. Didn't go to bed till 4. But, I say, why can't I have the same privilege as these other chaps? Corwith makes love to you and so does Odwell, and, hang it, they're both married. It's rotten mean of"— "Their wives are accountable for their manners, not I. But, come; will you go to Renwood's with me?"

"I'd rather talk to you in that nice little corner of the billiard room at home if you"—

"But I don't need a brandy and soda. Oh!" This exclamation came with the discovery of an approaching horseman. "It's Mr. Shaw, I'm sure."

Randolph Shaw, loyal to his feudal promise, appeared in the road a couple of hundred yards away. He drew rein and from that distance surveyed the two who were so near to encroaching upon his preserves. He sat straight and forbidding in the saddle. For a full minute the two factions stared at each other. Then, without a sign of recognition, Shaw turned and rode rapidly away.

"He rides like a gentleman," commented Miss Drake, after reflection.

"Indian blood in him," remarked her companion.

"Let us go home," said she, whirling her horse like a flash. The duke had some difficulty in keeping abreast of her during the ride, and he lost sight of her altogether after they dismounted at Bazlehurst Villa.

The momentary glimpse of a real man set Penelope's opinions on edge for the remainder of the day and night. Shaw, whatever else he might be, was a man. Even while others addressed her in conversation she was absentmindedly recalling to memory certain English gentlemen at home who could stand comparison with this handsome fellow across the danger line. But to compare any one of the men in Lady Bazlehurst's house party—oh, it was absurd! She looked them over. Dull eyed, blase, frayed by the social whirl, worn out, pulseless, all of them. They talked automobile, bridge, women and self in particular. In the seclusion of a tete-a-tete they talked love with an ardor that lost most of its danger because it was from force of habit. One of the men was even now admitting in her ear that he had not spent an evening alone with his wife in four years.

"There's always something doing,"

he said. "A week or two ago, by Jove, you wouldn't believe it, but we had an evening turn up without a thing on hand. Strangest thing I ever knew. Neither of us had a thing on. We said we'd stay at home and go to bed early just to see how it felt. Well, what do you think? We sat up and read till half past 10 o'clock, and then both of us thought of it at the same time. We dressed and went down to Rector's and waited for the theaters to let out. Three o'clock when we got home. You can't imagine what a queer experience it is being all alone with one's wife."

"Don't you love your wife, Mr. Odwell?"

"Certainly! But there's always a crowd." Both of them glanced over at pretty Mrs. Odwell. She was looking down at her plate demurely while Reggie Van Voort talked straight into her pink ear, his eyes gleaming with the zest of invasion. "I say, Miss Drake, you won't mind talking to me awhile after dinner, will you?" went on Odwell, something like relief in his voice.

After dinner she was obliged to set him straight in a little matter. They were sitting on the terrace, and he had thrown away his half smoked cigarette, an act in itself significant. She had been listening patiently, from sheer habit and indifference, to what he was saying, but at last she revolted.

"Don't! You shall not say such things to me. I am not your kind, I fancy, Mr. Odwell," she said. "I don't know why you should tell me of your chorus girl friends, of your suppers and all that. I don't care to hear of them, and I don't intend that you shall use me as a subject of illustration. I am going upstairs."

"Oh, come now, that's rather rough, just as we were getting on so well. All the fellows do the same"—

"I know. You need not tell me. And you all have wives at home, too," with intense scorn.

"Now, that's where you wrong us. They're not at home, you know. That's just it."

"Never mind, Mr. Odwell; I'm going in." She left him and entered the house. For a minute or two he looked after her in wonder and then, softly whispering, made his way over to where De Peyton, through some oversight, was talking to his own wife. De Peyton unceremoniously announced that he was going upstairs to write a letter.

Penelope, flushed with disgust and humiliation, drew near a crowd of men and women in the long living room. Her brother was haranguing the assemblage, standing forth among them like an unconquered bantam. In spite of herself she felt a wave of shame and pity creep over her as she looked at him.

"Barnminster says the fellow ran when he saw him today," his lordship was saying. "But that doesn't help matters. He has been on my land again and again, Tompkins says, and Tompkins ought to know."

"And James, too," said the duke with a brandied roar.

"Can't Tompkins and his men keep that man off my land?" demanded Lady Bazlehurst. Every one took note of the pronoun. Her ladyship's temples seemed to narrow with hatred. Bazlehurst had told the men privately that she was passing sleepless nights in order to "hate that fellow Shaw" to her full capacity.

"My dear, I have given positive orders to Tompkins, and he swears he'll carry them out," said he hastily.

"I suppose Tompkins is to throw him into the river again."

"He is to shoot that fellow Shaw if he doesn't keep off our land. I've had enough of it. They say he rode his confounded plow horse all over the west end the other day." Penelope smiled reflectively. "Trampled the new fern beds out of existence and all that. Hang him, Tompkins will get him if he persists. He has told the men to take a shot at the rascal on sight. Tompkins doesn't love him, you know."

Penelope went her way, laughing, and forgot the danger that threatened Randolph Shaw.

The next morning, quite early, she was off for a canter. Some magnetic force drew her toward that obliterated line in the roadway. Almost as she came up to it and stopped Randolph Shaw rode down the hillside through the trees and drew rein directly opposite, the noses of their horses almost touching. With a smile he gave the military salute even as she gasped in self conscious dismay.

"On duty, Miss Drake; no trespassing," he said. There was a glad ring in his voice. "Please don't run away. You're on the safe side."

"I'm not going to run," she said, her cheek flushing. "How do you know where the line is? It has been destroyed by the ravages of time."

"Yes. It has seemed a year. This thing of acting sentinel so religiously is a bit wearing." His great friendly dog came across the line, however, and looked bravely up into the enemy's face, wagging his tail. "Traitor! Come back, Bonaparte!" cried his master.

"What a beautiful dog!" she cried, sincere admiration in her eyes. "I love a big dog. He is your best friend, I'll wager."

"'Love me, love my dog,' is my motto."

The conversation was not prolonged. Penelope began to find herself on rather friendly terms with the enemy. Confusion came over her when she remembered that she was behaving in a most unmaidenly manner. Doubtless that was why she brought the meeting to a close by galloning away.

Real Estate and Improvements ... Up and Down the North Shore ...

It is reported that Mrs. Putnam, widow of the late George Putnam, has bought a part of Mrs. Russell Sturgis' estate, bordering on Singing Beach, Manchester, and will make her summer home there. The Putnam property was sold several weeks ago to George R. White. It adjoins the latter's property on Smith's Point.

Quite an improvement has taken place at the new estate of Charles M. Cabot, formerly the John A. Ober place at Beverly Farms. The work includes the moving of the house to the rear and turning it half around, and building a new foundation for the residence. There will be new avenues, paths and a tennis court.

The work is in charge of Eben Day.

George W. Hooper conveys to Austin Morley et al., 5445 square feet of land on Vine street, Manchester.

Work on the new swimming pool at the beach is being carried on with all possible speed. D. C. Ballou & Co. have commenced work on the tennis courts.

JOHN DREW AT EMPIRE THEATRE, SALEM, TONIGHT

The advance sale of seats in anticipation of John Drew's appearance in Salem promises a large and fashionable audience to greet the leading American exponent of light comedy types when he appears at the Empire Theatre in the Witch City tonight.

Mr. Drew is playing this year in "The Perplexed Husband" by Alfred Sutro. This four-act comedy created a sensation in London when it was first produced this year because of its satirical attack upon woman suffrage and the amusing situations that arise when "the new woman" is confronted with that almost unknown being, "the new man."

Other attractions soon to appear at the Empire are Pollard's Australian Juvenile Opera Company on January 27 and 28; and Mme. Schumann-Heink, the world-famous singer, who is to appear in Salem on Monday evening, February 1.

MAGNIFICENT PIECES OF FURNITURE PRACTICALLY GIVEN AWAY

A. C. Titus & Co. of Salem, the great store of furnishings for the home reports to The Breeze that the volume of business done thus far by them at their big 20 per cent discount sale was more than double that done by any similar previous sale days and that it was unprecedented in the history of this firm's great distribution of goods; thus breaking their most notable selling records of the past. Throughout these days there was continuous heavy buying going on. Several people delayed their purchasing so that they might first attend the sales in Boston. The verbal expression of all was that Titus' prices were lower so they left their orders with the Salem firm. These facts certainly speak louder than mere words of the public's increasing confidence in A. C. Titus & Co. and their goods, also of the far and wider extension of this firm's patronage. The sale continues until late Saturday evening. The Titus Co. carry such an extraordinary large stock of home furnishings that notwithstanding the great quantities already gone out from their large establishment there is ample to supply the crowd which will purchase today and tomorrow.

Well-Known Manchester Man Passes Away. Geo. Forster Allen 86 Years Old.

George Forster Allen, one of Manchester's oldest citizens, passed away last Monday evening, at his home in Elm street, at the age of 86 years. His demise removes another of the old generation of men who have been prominently identified with the history of the town for the last two or three generations—since the town has grown into a summer resort.

As proprietor of "Ye Olde Corner Store," for half a century, Mr. Allen was probably one of the best known men of the town. Since his retirement from business some five years ago the old building, one of the landmarks of the town, has been removed.

For some months Mr. Allen had been in failing health, though it was not expected the end would come so suddenly. Ten days ago he was taken with a slight attack of grip and the latter part of last week he was quite miserable. Sunday he was decidedly weak and feeble. Monday morning he was able to get down stairs, but went to bed again in the afternoon, and his condition suddenly changed. He passed away in the early evening.

Mr. Allen was one of the oldest of the old line of Allens whose ancestors first settled in Manchester. He was six generations removed from the William Allen who was one of the original settlers. A glance at the family tree, at this time, will renew our memory somewhat of Manchester's early history.

William Allen was born in 1602, came to this country and landed at Gloucester in 1624. He moved to Salem in 1627. He was one of the petitioners for a grant to "erect a village" at Jeffrey's Creek, now Manchester, in 1640. He was a carpenter and probably erected the first house built in Manchester. Tradition has it that this house was on the Plains, near the Union cemetery, and there he resided. The records of Salem speak of him as an enterprising and influential citizen and a freeholder.

He died May 10, 1678, aged 76. He had three sons, Samuel, Onesiphorus and William. Samuel was born in 1631 and resided on "Ye Great Neck." He owned considerable landed estate. He was selectman in 1676 and 1693. He died about the year 1700.

Jonathan, a son of Samuel, was born in 1686, and built a house near where the Orthodox parsonage now stands. He died in 1769.

Jacob Allen, son of Jonathan was born in 1716, lived at North Yarmouth (now Forest street), was in the old French war as sergeant, and also in the Revolutionary War.

Nathan Allen, son of Jacob, was born in 1768, lived at North Yarmouth on the estate inherited from his father, was deacon of the church for 26 years. He died July 19, 1837.

GEORGE FORSTER ALLEN

Nathan Allen, Jr., son of Nathan, was born in 1794. He married Lucy S. Allen. He lived at North Yarmouth on an estate purchased of the widow, Elizabeth Lee. Before that the property belonged to one of the Allens called the Governor. He died there Nov. 9, 1826.

George Forster Allen, who died Jan. 20, 1913, was the son of Nathan Allen, Jr., and was born Sept. 10, 1826.

The above information was furnished the writer by Mr. Allen last summer, that we might be in position to state the facts accurately when the time came.

Mr. Allen has been honored by his fellow townsmen on many occasions by election and appointment to town office and also in connection with the church and parish. He was appointed postmaster in 1849 for four years, and he served the town as its clerk for six years, as selectman five years, water commissioner two years, school committeeman five years. His record as clerk of the Congregational church for forty years is unprecedented. He gave up the office four or five years ago. He was also treasurer of the church for 25 years, and clerk of the First Parish 39 years and a member of the Parish committee 20 years. As trustee of the Mary C. Martin fund he served twelve years.

As holder of office, however, Mr. Allen will be best remembered in connection with that unique organization Ye Elder Brethren which has made Manchester famous. He was one of the originators of the organization and was its president since its inception. He was the president of the Historical society for a few years when it was first organized.

Mr. Allen became affiliated with the Congregational church in 1866, and was the second oldest member at the time of his death. He served as clerk during the pastorate of Revs. Gleason, Clark, Marvin, Fate, Ashley, Lincoln and Ruge.

Fifty years ago he married Miss Arabella McCollum of Mt. Vernon, N. H., who survives him. They had no children. He is also survived by a half-sister, Miss Susan Leach of Manchester.

Funeral services were held yesterday afternoon in the Congregational church, the Rev. Albert G. Warner of the Baptist church officiating. It was expected that Rev. E. P. Tenney, a former pastor, would arrive from Maine in time for the funeral. A mixed quartet sang two selections. The pall-bearers were Deacons Oliver T. Roberts, Edward A. Lane and Frank P. Knight, and Wm. J. Johnson.

That the parcel post is almost too popular is evidenced by the query of a person at Fort McPherson, Ga., to the postmaster-general at Washington asking what the specifications are for mailing a baby via the parcel post. As bees and bugs are the only live things that may be transported by mail, Mr. Hitchcock is wondering what he can do for his Georgia correspondent.

AS TO ELECTRIC POWER IN MANCHESTER

There seems to be much dissatisfaction on the part of the people on the service given by the Manchester Electric Co. It must be remembered that the local company, while its charter gives the right to generate power, has always obtained its electricity from Beverly. While some of the trouble of the past has been due to local conditions there is no question but that most of the trouble is with the Beverly end of the wires.

It is generally conceded that the Manchester plant in itself is as good as in the average town. All its wires are underground—the most expensive system—and its transforming station is modern and up-to-date.

But—! All these things admitted, if we are to have electricity in our homes and in our places of business, let us have it.

The records show that during November and December and the first week in January just passed, the power was off in Manchester portions of thirteen days. The Manchester company says that in nearly every instance the trouble was outside the limits of Manchester. Then, it would appear that the Manchester company ought to see to it that the Beverly Electric Co. gives them better service.

We would suggest that the Manchester Electric Co. get its power from Gloucester if it cannot get satisfaction from the Beverly company. From Magnolia we learn that the Gloucester Electric Co. gives excellent service to that part of the city—a distance of some five miles from the plant. Why not extend the wires from Magnolia to Manchester?

And perhaps Gloucester would furnish power at a cheaper rate, so that, in consequence, the Manchester company could give its patrons a lower rate.

Whatever is in store for the future—this much we know—Manchester people are considerably stirred up over the poor service and if a great improvement is not made in the near future they will know the reason why.

We do not put much dependence in this current report about agitation for a gas system in Manchester, but—!

"GREAT WHITE WAY" FOR MANCHESTER

Among the improvements which might be suggested for Manchester's good the coming year is the installation of better street lighting in the center of the town. We are reading much of the "great white way" movement in many of our cities. Beverly instituted one the last summer. Lynn has extensively advertised its new lighting system of late, and now Gloucester is inaugurating a similar project on its principal street.

Manchester's streets are lighted by the so-called park light system (gasoline). On half a dozen of the lamp posts in the very center of the village are double lights. We would suggest that double be used on all the posts from the junction of Washington and Summer streets to the junction of Bridge street and Ashland avenue, on Beach street from the postoffice to the railroad crossing, and on School street from the drug stores to North street.

This improvement would mean 27 additional lamps, and at the present rate of $26.50 a lamp per year, charged by the Welsbach company, it would mean an added expense to the town of about $700 a year.

THE WATER QUESTION

The filing of another bill in the Legislature providing for an additional water supply for Salem and Beverly is the latest move in the controversy between the two cities. The bill, drafted and presented by Mayor Hurly and the Salem water board differs but slightly from the one provided last year. This latest appeal for a hearing provides for the creation of a joint water commission of three members. One each is to be appointed by the mayors of both cities with a third member appointed by the supreme judicial court.

It is to be hoped that with the filing of the present bill some definite action will result, because under its terms the board would have the power to make any necessary contracts and push the matter to a speedy completion. This water question is of inestimable importance to both cities, perhaps more so to Salem.

The suggestion that Salem should enter the metropolitan water system with money obtained for her share in Wenham Lake in the event of her selling it to Beverly was not favorably received by the Witch City, but the tapping of the Ipswich river in Topsfield as provided for in the bill will probably provide the final solution to the problem.

AN IMPORTANT COMMITTEE

A particular interest is felt locally in the new committee on social service in the State Legislature, because of the fact that Allison G. Catheron, a former Manchester man and now representing the Beverly district on Beacon Hill, is a member of it. The new committee is unlike any existing in any other state, and Mr. Catheron and his conferees have for their consideration so many matters affecting public welfare that the committee is perhaps the most important in the Legislature.

The new committee is making a study of many matters on social welfare, such as various forms of social insurance which have been embodied in legislation in Germany and England. There are also a number of questions involving the minimum wage question and the hours of employment for women and children. The committee is now engaged in making investigation of the best methods of dealing with the social evil.

The work of this social welfare is likely to attract considerable attention and any recommendations made by the members will be apt to have more official weight upon the minds of our law makers than the suggestions of some of our so-called social reformers. A scientific study is being made of the questions and when that measure comes up in any form in the Legislature some logical and authentic data ought to be available for proper consideration.

THE THROTTLING OF EDUCATION

Massachusetts has always boasted of her educational opportunities, and the people of the State realize that her supremacy lies in her skilled artisans, business and professional men of all types. Anything, therefore, tending to increase the ability, intellect and productive capacity of her citizens has been encouraged to the greatest extent, until Massachusetts schools have become a standard.

The schools and colleges of all types have been established at different points in the state, and, because of our inter-locking and fine system of transportation and reasonable railroad rates, these schools have been available to pupils from a large territory.

Just as this system is reaching a most perfect state, like a bolt from the clear skies, an edict is issued by our great railroad corporations cutting off or restricting student's tickets, thereby increasing tremendously the cost to families and individuals who can least afford the expenditure. To throttle the schools of Massachusetts is killing the goose that lays the golden egg, and the citizens of the state are rising in arms and insisting that the railroad rates be so adjusted as to make attendance at these schools possible for the tens of thousands who are now, or who purpose, availing themselves of these opportunities.

No favoritism or discrimination is asked. It is simply that the rates which have existed in past years be restored, made uniform and generally applied to all the steam roads of the state. That this demand is reasonable is insisted upon by every well-informed person, not only as a great conserving force, but a legitimate business demand.

Woodrow Wilson is a good politician. He is now trying to make the people think that he and Wall street are not on good terms. This is of course quite necessary, as it would hardly do to have him known as the "president of the interests." It is not an easy task to make a reputation, but the president-elect is starting his pre-administration speeches in the right way by showing the people that it is his earnest and sincere desire to represent the whole people.

Australia offers a bonus of $25 per baby to increase its population, while new South Wales adds free nursing and medical attendance. Evidently Roosevelt has been getting in some work in these districts.

Although the Titanic widows have filed claims against the White Star company for $10,000,000 the lawyers representing the company will probably take a very unsentimental view of the whole disaster.

The water-front reporters on city papers along the Atlantic coast have been at a loss for verbs to describe the arrival of ships during the recent period of bad weather. They might call upon the baseball editor.

The iceman is beginning to worry least his annual crop fail him.

TO URGE CONSTRUCTION OF NEW WAY TO SMITH'S POINT

In order to bring it before the voters directly a movement is now on foot to have an article inserted in the Town Warrant for the annual town meeting in March, for a new street to Smith's Point, Manchester. A petition has been placed at the Manchester Trust Co., for signatures, which reads as follows:

"To the Selectmen,

Town of Manchester, Mass.

"Gentlemen: The undersigned real estate tax payers in the town of Manchester, Mass., respectfully offer for your favorable consideration, the following request, namely:—

"What action will the Town take in the matter of laying out a public highway over land of Mr. G. R. White and heirs of the estate of A. A. Smith, between Beach and Proctor streets, Manchester, Mass., and making proper appropriation therefore?"

All real estate tax payers who favor settlement of this troublesome Proctor street problem as suggested above, are requested to call immediately at the Manchester Trust Co. and sign the petition. If unable to do this mail a letter to the Trust Company before Feb. 8th, 1913, signed by the person to whom the property is taxed, for filing purposes with said petition.

Editor of the Breeze:—

There are two more reasons, it seems to the writer, why this Proctor street, (Manchester), problem should receive serious consideration.

All know there are hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of property on the Point. In the event of a fire, just stop and think what the new road would mean, in the saving of time and money.

Again, supposing you decide to widen Proctor street, you must not only pay for land, but will have to rebuild this worn out street, the dangerous portion of which could just as well be closed up. Back Bay.

JOINT INSTALLATION OF WORKMEN AND DEGREE OF HONOR

The joint installation of officers of North Shore lodge, A.O.U.W., and of the affiliated Degree of Honor, in Odd Fellows hall, Manchester, Tuesday evening was the important occasion of the winter in the life of the two organizations. The hall was crowded. A supper was served in the banquet hall previous to the work and there was a generous supply of food for the 200 who were present. The officers installed were:

Degree of Honor: Mrs. Martha Steward, chief of honor; Mrs. Emma Morse, lady of honor; Mrs. Rose Crombie, chief of ceremonies; Mrs. Ida Mason, recorder; Miss Helen Mason, treasurer; Mrs. Laura Corley, financier; Mrs. Julia Andrews, usher; C. T. Loomis, inside watch; Charles Mason, outside watch; Mrs. Virginia Perry, past chief of honor. The work was very nicely performed by Deputy Mrs. Malonson and staff of Gloucester, who was one of the speakers after the installation. The Grand Lodge Recorder, Mrs. Todd, was also present and made a few remarks, though the time was limited. A handsome pin was presented the retiring chief of honor, Mrs. Virginia Perry.

The Workmen: Wm. J. Lethbridge, master workman; Levi A. Dunn, foreman; Sidney Marsh, overseer; E. Wallace Stanley, recorder; C. T. Loomis, treasurer; Chas. W. Sawyer, financier; Chas. A. Lodge, guide; H. A. Porter, inside watch; Lewis Killam, outside watch. The officers were installed by Dist. Deputy George Anderson and suite from Fernwood lodge, of Gloucester.

Beverly School Supt. Talks At Manchester On Industrial Education.

There were forty-five men present at the Brotherhood meeting in the vestry of the Manchester Baptist church last Monday evening. The membership numbers 62 to date. A constitution was adopted, after which the speaker was introduced.

Supt. of Schools Robert Small, of Beverly was the speaker of the evening his subject being "Industrial Education,"—a subject of vital interest to men. The speaker said that he was asked to come down and speak to the Brotherhood by request, having spoken in Manchester once before, at the Price school. He said in part, "The existing type of education today does not place the boys and girls who attend school where they belong in life. We know that the training we received when we attended school was inadequate for meeting the responsibilities set before us today. The old training did not equip one to deliver to the present what is demanded of us today. Education has not changed any in the present day. What we want is a substitute or addition to the schools which will result in the boys and girls who leave school receiving education which will fit them for something definite in life."

Mr. Small cited several reasons why the average boy and girl after leaving school was not found in an environment that was fitted to his natural gifts and personal desires. The speaker said that the individual pupil should be given work that would be agreeable and natural to him. He claimed that the experience of some pupils in the schoolroom indicates that although they do not know the joys of success and by their nature they are not scholars, but are willing to continue failing every day.

"My plea," said Mr. Small, "is for some work in which the boys and girls may taste the joys of success; something that they can start and finish.

"From what can be gleaned from statistics in European and American schools it is shown that juvenile delinquency is on the increase. The reason for this is that when the boys leave school they are unable to secure positions which will buy them the necessities of life, much less the luxuries for which they crave. They receive a very low wage, the average salary being six dollars per week."

In speaking of the boys who have been burglarizing this section during the past month, Mr. Small commented on the fact that most of them were under twenty years of age. "The ranks of the juvenile criminals," he said, "are being filled up with boys who have been sent out at a tender age to earn their living inadequately prepared. The boys know little of the employment which is open to them. It is generally picked up from friends, newspapers or otherwise. The schools must introduce some material teaching, some industrial intelligence. Then the young people can choose their employment. How are we going to do it?"

"Many municipalities cannot establish trade schools; in fact trade schools are a long distance away. The trade school of the United Shoe Machinery Company is one of the best illustrations of a step toward the solution of the problem. Here the boys are allowed a few hours each week of the employer's time for schooling; the rest of the time is devoted to some particular line of work. The boys who have attended this company's school are now earning more than eighteen dollars a week instead of six. Can we afford industrial education? We certainly cannot afford to do without it."

Manchester Woman's Club Hears Miss Cole of Beverly on Current Events.

An interesting meeting of the Manchester Woman's club was held this week at which various reports of delegates to conventions were heard and Miss Jennie Cole of Beverly, who is well known to the club, was the speaker.

The first report heard was that of Mrs. Hattie Baker who attended the Child Welfare Conference in Stoneham last week as the club delegate. Mrs. Baker's report of the questions discussed there and the movements in various states, and particularly in the Bay State, was excellent.

Mrs. D. T. Beaton, the president, reminded the members of the club of the mid-winter Federation at Boston Feb. 12. Mrs. Otis Stanley was appointed to represent the local club and Mrs. Beaton urged that others, who were interested, go to the Federation. The meeting is to be held at the Arlington street church and will probably occupy the entire day. The president also made mention of the guest night, Feb. 5, and spoke of the male quartette and reader to furnish the program.

The Story High School Glee Club sang "O Hush Thee, My Baby" with much feeling and expression, and Miss Martha Knight gave a most interesting account of the opening of the Louisa May Alcott Home at Concord at which she and Mrs. A. L. Saben represented the club. Miss Knight's description of the home of the famous authoress awakened great interest in the minds of those to whom "Little Women" is a favorite.

The Glee club then sang the old favorite, "Love's Old Sweet Song" and was again heartily applauded. Miss Cole, who was presented next, was greeted as an old friend. She was thoroughly conversant with her subject, "Current Events," and spoke easily and entertainingly. Africa and the new divisions and changes there, was the first topic. A significant point was the result of the recent war between Tripoli and Italy when the former came under the rule of the latter with the proviso that Mohammedanism should not be interfered with there. Morocco, which has long been a bone of contention between the European powers, has been divided between France and Spain and France has given to Germany a part of the Congo district. Tangiers has been ceded to Great Britain partly that her guardianship of Gibraltar may not be weakened. Great Britain rules Egypt jointly with the Khedive of that country and has strengthened her hold upon South Africa greatly during recent years.

Miss Cole spoke at some length of the Balkan war. She mentioned the causes leading up to the war and the sad state of Turkey's military forces since the young Turkish faction came into power. Since Montenegro, joined by Servia, Bulgaria and Greece, declared war, affairs have been going steadily against Turkey. Turkey having asked for peace, a conference of envoys is now holding session at London. The demands are that Turkey shall give up Scutari, Adrianople, her strongest fortress, the islands of the Aegean and shall pay tribute. The next point which the speaker took up was election of the French President at Paris Friday, January 17. Miss Cole made particular mention of the difference between the presidential election in France and in the United States. The difference lies principally she said, not in the fact that the French president is elected by the National Assembly but in the quietness of the election. Frenchmen seldom know anything of the life or personality of their newly chosen president.

Miss Cole spoke of last year in our own country as one of "elections and congresses." President-elect Wilson, she believed, has the executive ability and knowledge to have a successful reign, although Miss Cole is a firm supporter of Mr. Taft. The speaker was very favorable to the tariff bill passed in President Taft's term. Although Mr. Wilson is minority president, he has strong Democratic support and we may hope for the passage of some excellent laws regarding the inauguration of the President and the sessions of Congress in the near future, said Miss Cole.

Miss Cole received gratifying applause at the close of her address and the meeting adjourned for the social hour. Mrs. Edna Peabody was hostess.

14th Annual Banquet of Horticultural Society a Success.

The 14th annual banquet of the North Shore Horticultural society was held Wednesday evening in the Town hall at Manchester, and was attended by nearly 200 persons,—one of the largest gatherings in the history of the organization.

At 7 o'clock a turkey supper was served, the four tables stretched the entire length of the hall being crowded. Beautiful cut flowers and potted plants adorned the tables and added much to the attractiveness of the occasion. The plants were afterwards presented to the ladies present.

After the blessing had been pronounced by Rev. A. G. Warner the following menu was discussed.

BAKED CHICKEN HALIBUT, Tartar Sauce
Dressed Lettuce Potato Croquets
Tomatoes Cucumbers
ROAST TURKEY,
Delmonico Potatoes Cranberry Sauce
Chicken Croquets, Peas Lobster Salad
Escalloped Oysters Chicken Salad
Banana Fritters, Rum Sauce
ICE CREAM
Vanilla Strawberry Harlequin
Frozen Pudding Frozen Tom and Jerry Sherbets
Assorted Cake Fancy Cakes
Coffee Rolls

President John Chapman called the gathering to order after the supper and in brief well chosen remarks welcomed the gathering and spoke of the object and aim of the society. He expressed the wish that the younger people would become interested in raising flowers and that they would compete more at the bower shows.

The following entertainment program, mostly home talent, was presented:

Remarks by President John Chapman
Reading, Selected
Mrs. Mary Allen.

War Scene
Mr. Harry Tappan and Mr. Rufus Long Spanish Dance

Miss Beatrice Long

Selection
The Everett Orchestra
Song, "That's How I Need You"
Mr. John Gray

Reading
Mrs. Allen
Hungarian Dance
Miss Long

The dances by Miss Long were well done and the war sketch by Harry Tappan and Rufus Long served to introduce several songs, in which some local hits were made. The subject of Mrs. Allen's two readings were: "The Joiners" and "Dat Leedle Yacop Strauss." John Gray sang in his usual good voice. The Everett trio of young school girls rendered first "Glorianna," by Weidt, but as an encore they rendered the difficult but masterly work of Verdi, in selections from "Il Trovatore."

From 10 to 12 dancing was enjoyed. Long's orchestra furnished the music. John D. Morrison was the floor director.

The following committee was in charge of the affair, which was pronounced a success by all: E. H. Wetherlow, chairman; John Jaffray, Carl Eicke, Herbert W. Clark, William Swan, M. C. Horton and H. T. Stiles.

MANCHESTER REBEKAHS INSTALLED

Liberty Rebekah Lodge officers were installed at their meeting last Friday night by Dist. Deputy Grand Master Miss Ida Manion of Rockport, assisted by Grand Marshall Miss E. C. Marshall. The officers installed were as follows:

Past n. g., Miss Clara Sargent; n. g., Mrs. Annie Rogers; v. g., Mrs. Mabel Crombie; rec. sec'y., Miss Jennie Sargent; fin. sec'y., Miss Alice Haraden; treas., Mrs. Emma Stanley; warden, Mrs. Mabel Johnson; conductor, Miss Anna Maslin; inside guard, Mrs. Helen Andrews; r. s. n. g., Mrs. Alice Lee; l. s. n. g., Mrs. Delia Kehoe; r. s. v. g., Mrs. Jessie Rust; l. s. v. g., Mrs. Anna Maslin; chaplain, Mrs. Ethel Valentine; musician, Mrs. Flora Hersey. A supper was served at 6.30 o'clock to the members and invited guests. Supper consisted of cold meats, salads and fancy puddings. After the installation remarks were made by the installing officer, Miss Manion, past deputy, Mrs. Smith of Gloucester, and past noble grand, Mrs. George E. B. Strople of Rockport. Past Grand McKensie sang two very pleasing solos during the evening.

HEATH-PALMQUIST

The wedding of Miss Esther Palmquist, daughter of Peter and Anna S. Palmquist of Kane, Penn., and Warren Woodbury Heath, son of Warren E. and Lelia Sargent Heath of Manchester Cove, took place last week, only the immediate relations being present. The couple arrived home last Monday and will occupy the Edward Ayers cottage on School street.

The Political Pot

That's the way it is in Manchester—all mixed up. For years there has not been such a sentiment in favor of a change in town officials. But thus far only a few candidates have been mentioned for the board of selectmen, other than the old board. In our nine years' experience in running a newspaper in Manchester we have never known of such a universal desire on the part of the citizens to tip over things and put in an entire new set of men.

x—x

Perhaps it is because the board has done so much to gain the ill-will of the voters. It is very evident they made a rank mistake last spring in their choice of a chief-of-police. Sad to say, too much of the town's business hinges on that one point—the chief of police.

x—x

Perhaps it is because the affairs of the town are run too much by one individual. The voters elect a board of three selectmen to manage its affairs, it is true, but—with all due respect to the other two members of the board, things are run pretty much by one man. A sort of mayor. The voters are getting tired of that; they want a change.

x—x

Then, too, this latest sensation—the Power House Hill purchase—is just striking the voters with full force. At the special town meeting a few weeks ago the voters thought the proposition was put up to them somewhat as follows: A real estate man wants to buy the old Burying Ground lot at the Cove and has offered $5250 for it; the board of selectmen recommended its sale for $8500* * * * The owner of Power House hill is going to set up a saw mill on the hill, that beautiful pine wooded hill in the center of the town, and cut off all the trees. Let's sell this lot at the Cove and buy Powder House hill for $8200. Certainly we'll save the hill, and by an almost unanimous vote we decide so to do. Incidentally we will save $300 from what we get for the Burying Ground lot.

The Burying Ground lot has not yet been sold; but the check to pay for Powder House hill was signed the next day after the town meeting.

The question is very pertinent! Where did the money come from to buy the hill? The town did not appropriate any. The voters supposed the money received from the sale of one property would pay for buying

MANCHESTER

Mrs. John F. Babcock of Beverly is enjoying the day in town renewing acquaintances.

The regular meeting of the Arbella club will be held next Tuesday afternoon, Jan. 28. Dr. Southworth of Wellesley college will speak on "Health."

Mrs. Mary Stanley underwent an operation at the Boothby private hospital at Boston last Saturday for head trouble. She is reported as slowly improving.

Mrs. Myrtle A. Parker and son Horton of Lynn, Mass., spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. John E. Elliott on Vine street. Mrs. Elliott is the mother of Mrs. Parker.

The Annual Guest night of the Manchester Woman's club will be held Wednesday, Feb. 5th, at 7.45 o'clock. The entertainment will be by the University Male quartet assisted by a reader. A lunch of salads and ices will be served by Schlehuber of Lynn. Tickets may be obtained of Mrs. Helen Bullock, School street, Mrs. Wm. Johnson, Bridge street and Mrs. Eva Rand, Union street. Members 35c and guests 75c.

the other. It was put up to them in that way.

Anyway, whatever the ifs and ands, the voters are not satisfied with the deal and they are doing considerable talking about it.

x—x

We have heard several names mentioned in connected with the board of selectmen, among them Nathan P. Meldrum, James Hoare, George R. Dean and Walter R. Bell. We do not know that any of these men will run. We venture our opinion that any three good men would win this year.

x—x

The Breeze has always tried to be fair in dealing with town politics. Above all it is frank; it says what it has to say straight from the shoulder. It intends to deal that way this year, and for the next six issues will say what it has to say unhesitatingly, without going around Robin Hood's barn to do so. Everyone knows of the rottenness of town affairs, and the voters are awake to the need of a thorough cleaning.

x—x

These colmuns are open to all. If the selectmen, chief of police or anyone else has anything to say they will be accorded the free use of any amount of space they desire to state their case.

PARENT-TEACHER MEETING

MASSACHUSETTS DEPUTY COMMISSIONER OF PROBATION SPEAKS AT MANCHESTER

The Parent-Teacher association was fortunate in securing Eben F. Mulready, Massachusetts Deputy Commissioner of Probation, as a speaker at their meeting Wednesday evening. Mr. Mulready's main argument was the trend of the court to give offenders against the law another chance and better treatment. He spoke of his own work and its object which is to find the reason for the delinquency, particularly of minors.

When President McKinley was shot, as he greeted one whom he thought a friend, the whole nation was aroused and, when the hot-blooded, ignorant foreigner was duly punished for the crime he had committed, the nation was gratified, yet, Mr. Mulready pointed out, the murderer was doing his duty according to his point of view and intelligence. He thought the world would be better without this one of its great leaders and acted according to his belief.

Within the last few months, two brothers have confessed to dynamiting buildings all over the country in the interest of Labor against Capital, as they thought. It was their real belief that their acts were a help to the labor interests of the country.

Mr. Mulready gave an interesting description of the first religious ceremony ever held in a penal institution. It was in Pennsylvania many years ago and it was an accepted fact that the preacher would not be safe in the room with criminals comparatively free, so a gatling gun was placed beside him and he preached the gospel under its restraining influence. Now religious services are a part of prison life.

When Mr. Mulready was made an overseer of the poor in his home town about thirty years ago it was the common custom to board paupers out to the lowest bidder. Of course the years have obliterated the custom although there is still a town on Cape Cod where it is in use.

In speaking of the improvement of the treatment of individuals by institutions, Mr. Mulready mentioned the treatment of the insane. Years ago they were cared for by their families, later by the town and county and now by the state. By the latter method where they are treated scientifically, many of the patients are now cured.

The conditions of the children of the poor, crippled children and feeble-minded children are better now than formerly. Criminal boys are given a chance to become better citizens because of probation in the courts. A boy or man, who has once been in jail or in a truant school, finds it hard to live a straight life afterwards. Then it is that the probation officer gets in his work. The speaker gave the definition of probation as test of character, that is, to judge a person by what he really is, not by his reputation. A good old man, a philanthropist, was the first to start the movement for probation. He was not a minister, nor a teacher, but chancing to be in a court room one day when boys and men were being tried for various offences, he finally walked up to the judge's desk and asked to be given a chance to help just one of them to make good. He was given his chance and the movement has grown until today it is one of the greatest forces toward making good citizens of the so-called "incurable" boys known. In Massachusetts last year 148,666 people were arrested, nearly thirty thousand more than the combined population of Gloucester, Beverly, Salem, Peabody, Danvers, Hamilton, Essex and Manchester. Of this number 11,000 were women. 30,000 men and women were put in jail and 18,597 were put on probation. Last year, too, the probation officers collected $82,848 from 800 men charged with non-support of their wives. Boys out on probation paid back $11,995 of the money they had stolen.

Mr. Mulready gave numerous instances of the efficiency of probation and of the character of the prisoners in the State Prison. One of the most interesting was that of a good looking young man of twenty-two, who told Mr. Mulready he had been serving sentence for two years. When asked how much longer he had to serve he said, "O, me? I'm a lifer." At the age of twenty-two he has written a book on civil engineering, the first of its kind, which is so good that it is to be used in the schools for instruction. He is assistant engineer at the prison. When sentenced, it was claimed by his parents that he could not endure more than a month of prison life owing to his ill health resulting from head-ache powders and cigarettes. On the contrary, he has been better than ever before since being in prison. Another one of the prisoners presented Mr. Mulready with a sheet of music which he had composed during his imprisonment. That the music was a beautiful composition is proved by the fact that the Oliver Ditson company printed 50,000 copies.

The speaker added the suspended sentence as another innovation for the betterment of the men and boys, who must be American citizens. Mr. Mulready concluded his excellent address by impressing his audience with the fact that "we are our brother's keeper" in every sense of the word. Many of his audience were presented to him after the close of the program that they might express something of the appreciation of his address.

Miss Clara Corren of Magnolia rendered two solos, "Thy Beaming Eyes," and "At Night-fall" in a way that won the hearts of her audience. At the program's close a social hour was held and cocoa, sandwiches and crackers were served by the committee.

The next meeting will be the annual meeting. Mrs. A. L. Saben, Mrs. Emma Stanley and Miss Anne Clark were appointed for the nominating committee.

Mr. Crisscross: "Pass me the butter, please." Miss Featherbone: "With all my heart." Mr. Crisscross: "Only the butter please."—Puck.

By invitation of the Women's Charity club of Boston a meeting will be held Wednesday in Arlington street church, Boston. The morning session will open at 10 o'clock. Hon. Joseph Walker will speak on "The Making of a Law." The afternoon session at 2 o'clock, Prof. Zeublin will speak on "Saving and Spending."

CONTRACT AWARDED FOR PRINTING

At the meeting Tuesday night of the Manchester board of selectmen, bids were opened for printing the Town Report of the past year. Only two bids were received as follows:

North Shore Breeze Co., $2.19 per page; Manchester Printing Co., Harry E. Slade, prop., $2.25 per page.

The Breeze company put in an additional bid, as in former years, for printing the School Committee and Water Commissioners' reports. The Manchester Printing Co. did not put in any figure on this, no estimate being called for by the auditor.

Mr. Slade was asked if he intended to include this latter work (which comes to $60) in his original estimate and he replied that he did. The contract was awarded to him.

The Breeze company protested Wednesday on this kind of dickering and said that new bids ought to be called for. Chairman Knight informed Mr. Lodge that the board always reserved the right to accept or reject any or all bids. A little later he made known the decision of the board (and auditor) to chief of police Converse, who spent a liberal portion of Wednesday and Thursday informing the public that "The Breeze has lost the contract for printing the Town Reports."

The public fails to see just what connection Chief Converse has with the printing of the town. It is a significant fact, however, that he was deeply interested.

The chief was in the Town hall again this morning, getting additional information on the matter from the auditor, so Auditor Jones informed us at 2.10 this afternoon upon being asked the direct question.

Perhaps the chief is looking for the auditor's job next year and that is why he is so interested.

TOLD OF TRIP TO ENGLAND AND PARIS

Ernest Mead of Wellesley Farms, who is well known in Manchester, gave an informal talk Tuesday evening at the weekly meeting of Col. H. P. Woodbury camp, 149, S. of V., which was thoroughly enjoyed by the large number of men present. Several years ago Mr. Mead and a fellow employee at the Boston office of the Iver & Pond piano concern, took a five-week holiday to Europe, and it was some of his impressions of this trip that Mr. Mead told about. Mr. Mead has a remarkable memory and an equally remarkably way of seeing things and being able to tell about them very fluently.

Speaking of London he told of its army of 17,000 police officers and 1400 firemen and of some of the features of the great metropolis. Greater London, he said comprised some 700 square miles in area and had a population of more than seven million people. He took up briefly six points of particular interest in the city—the Tower of London, Westminster Abbey, St. Paul's Cathedral, Parliament buildings, the British Museum and the National Gallery.

From London they took a five-day tour about England, visiting such places as Cambridge University, Leeds and Sheffield, seeing the Rogers' cutlery plant in the latter place; Northampton, the center of the lace industry in England; Kenilworth Castle, Stratford-on-Avon, Oxford Universities and back to London, and a visit to Winsor Castle.

They afterwards spent a week in Paris, where the chief points of interest were visited, such as the Cathedral of Notre Dame, Eiffel Tower, the tomb of Napoleon, the old French prison, etc.

A collation of coffee, doughnuts, crackers and cheese was served and the meeting closed with the singing of patriotic songs.

On Sunday morning Rev. Walter Eaton, Ph. D., of the Village church will preach in exchange with Rev. C. H. Williams of the Trinity Congregational church, Gloucester.

A very interesting illustrated lecture on "Switzerland" will be given by Professor Lewis W. Newell at the Village church on Sunday evening at seven o'clock. This lecture will be the second in a series of entertainments to be given during the winter.

George W. Wilson of Wenham was the guest at the parsonage the first of the week.

The ladies' whist club will meet at the home of Mrs. Fred Dunbar on Magnolia avenue, on Tuesday of next week.

The next entertainment under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid society will be a "Pedlars' Parade" which will be held in the Women's club house on Wednesday evening, Jan. 29.

"The Ladies' Aid with greetings most hearty,

Invite you to come to their Vender's Party,

And see the sights of the "Fakirs Row,"

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE

One of the most notable weeks of the entire opera season will be that beginning Monday, Jan. 27 at the Boston Opera House. The coming of Felix Weingartner, the eminent composer and pri-ement operatic conductor of the day, who has obtained a brief leave of absence from the Royal Opera at Vienna, in order that he may assume charge of the orchestral forces in Boston, will lend especial distinction to the second half of the season which begins on Monday. Mr. Weingartner's initial bow will be made on Friday night when Wagner's great love drama and master work, "Tristan und Isolde" will be sung with Carl Burrian and Olive Fremstadt, both from the Metropolitan Opera House in the titular parts.

Mr. Weingartner will conduct again at the Saturday matinee, when good old "Il Trovatore" with its familiar melodies will be sung with an extraordinarily famous cast, for as Azucena Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink will make her first appearance as a member of the Boston Opera Company.

Monday evening will bring the farewell of Mme. Louise Edvina, a singer who has proved herself to be one of the greatest artists which the new season has brought. Operatic engagements in Europe compel her departure at this time and for her last appearance this season, Director Russell has chosen Puccini's "Tosca," in the title role of which Mme. Edvina has conquered the publics of Paris and London.

On Wednesday evening Verdi's "Otello," by many considered the greatest of all Italian operas, will be given its first hearing.

Saturday night's popular performance will be one of Rossini's "The Barber of Seville," a work which abounds in sparkling melodies and unctuous comedy.

"TO LEAVE NO STONE UNTURNED"

Though the phrase to "leave no stone unturned" is in common use and we hear it very frequently, not everybody knows how it originated. It is taken from "Euripides." Poly-crates asked the Delphic oracle about some treasure buried by a general of Xerxes on the battlefield of Plataea.

To discover the treasure, so the oracle said, it would be necessary to "turn every stone."

Breeze subscription, $2 a year.

BEVERLY FARMS

Miss Barbara Daniels, who is spending the winter in Boston, has been home the past week on account of illness.

Members of Steamer Company 3 and their guests, making a party of about 40, will go to Boston tomorrow afternoon for a banquet and will later attend the theatre.

Today Mr. and Mrs. Willard B. Publicover are receiving the congratulations of their host of friends on the 19th anniversary of their marriage.

The Ward 6 Republican City committee met last evening and organized for the year. Elmer Standley was elected chairman and Frank L. Woodberry secretary. The various committees to look after the details such as finance, naturalization, registration, etc., were made up. The other members are:—A. P. Loring, Jr., L. J. Watson, 2nd, H. E. Morgan, W. B. Publicover, Wm. R. Brooks, Wm. Standley, H. P. Williams and C. F. Butman.

Michael J. Connolly well known at the Farms, was elected president of the Holy Cross club at the annual banquet held at Young's hotel at Boston this week. Mr. Connolly graduated from Holy Cross with the class of 1887. S. John Connolly of the Farms, a member of the class of 1907, attended the banquet. Lieut. Gov. David I. Walsh was the principal speaker of the evening.

WITH MAYOR MACDONALD

Mayor MacDonald is gradually getting in touch with the different departments of the city. He is feeling his way carefully, and considers every step before it is taken.

One act of Mayor MacDonald's which should be appreciated by the citizens of Beverly is the prohibition of unsightly signs in front of City hall. It is said that he is quietly making an investigation of the fire and street departments, and that certain practices and methods in vogue in years gone by will be discontinued.

The Mayor showed that every section of the city will receive his immediate and careful consideration by his action in ordering the city electrician to place key guards on the fire boxes at North Beverly as soon as possible, and by personally making an inspection of the streets where small watermains are now laid.

It is understood that Mayor MacDonald has many reforms in view, and he intends to go about these matters in a careful and systematic manner.—Beverly Times.

BEVERLY FARMS

A vesper service to be held at the Baptist Church the last Sunday in February is being planned by the music committee of the church and the choir.

Members of the Bible School who have been holding an attendance contest for the past few months will gather tonight in the chapel for a "Red and Blue" social. Although the contest has no connection with the party, the factions which have been trying for a record attendance have been known as "The Reds" and "The Blues."

Mrs. Mary Bartlett is ill with pneumonia at her home on Hale street.

Many Beverly Farms people attended the annual banquet, entertainment and dance of the North Shore Horticultural society held at Manchester Wednesday evening.

The committee work of the city government which demands the attention of Alderman Hull upon the same evenings that John West Colony, Pilgrim Fathers, hold their meetings, has caused Mr. Hull to resign from the position of secretary with the order which he has held for some time. Miss Elizabeth Toomey has been elected his successor.

The services for Scandinavians which were so successfully held last summer at the local Baptist church will be resumed the coming season. The state secretary of the Swedish work, Rev. G. W. Lindstrom, recently conferred with the pastor and a program is now being arranged.

Richard Carr is awaiting the coming of his wife and children from England next month. Mr. Carr has been absent from his family for nearly three years.

A public whist party and social under the management of a party of Beverly Farms young ladies will be held in Marshall's hall on Tuesday evening, Feb. 4. The affair is for the benefit of St. Margaret's church.

The Park Commissioners, of which W. B. Publicover is the new member, organized on Tuesday evening. John C. McCarthy was appointed caretaker of the Beverly Farms playground, which position he held last year. It is understood that an option has been secured on land adjoining the playground with the purpose of buying. At many of the ball games and other events held there last summer it was evident that more space was needed to make this popular spot large enough to carry on the events properly.

Mrs. John W. Morgan has been elected librarian of the Baptist church of Beverly Farms. The library was made especially attractive recently by the addition of a number of new books. The picture committee of the church has recently purchased and hung three new pictures for the children's department.

Dr. Norman M. MacLeod of Beverly will deliver an address on "Patent Nostrum" under the auspices of the Girls' club at the Beverly Farms Baptist church on next Tuesday evening.

Frank B. Grove, a popular Beverly Farms young man, has accepted a good position with the Mutual Fire Insurance association at their headquarters at Baltimore, Md. He will leave in a few days for that city, and will be joined in about two months by his wife and child.

John Higgins, a well known resident of Grapevine road, just over the line in East Wenham, is improving from a severe illness.

A good time is planned at the public dance and social to be held in Marshall's hall this evening by a party of Farms young men.

Mrs. Arthur Burton and her sister, Miss Florence Paine, will sail for England on Feb. 4, where they will spend several months visiting their former home on the Isle of Wight.

Samuel F. Collamore has been confined to his home for the past week with a severe cold. His duties as janitor of the Farms school have been attended to by Ezra P. Williams.

MRS. JUDITH H. OSBORNE DEAD

Mrs. Judith H. Osborne, aged 94 years, widow of Ariel Osborne, and Beverly Farms' oldest resident died at her home on North place last Tuesday morning. While during her whole life she has never suffered by any illness, for the past two months she has failed and during the past two weeks her death was expected.

She was born and has always lived in the Osborne homestead in North place. She was the oldest member of the Beverly Farms Baptist church. She is survived by three daughters, Miss Arietta Osborne, Mrs. Harriet Younger, Mrs. Eben Day, and her son, Benjamin F. Osborne.

Funeral services were conducted at the Baptist church yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock and interment made at the Farms cemetery.

DEATH OF MRS. ADDIE F. WILLIAMS

In the death of Mrs. Addie F., wife of Fred Williams, Beverly Farms loses a valued resident. She had been in ill health for some time, but bore her suffering with cheerfulness and resignation. Born in Beverly, and since her marriage a resident of Beverly Farms, she has by her kindly ways and her interest in the welfare of the community made a host of friends.

Mrs. Williams was a member of Friendship Lodge, Daughters of Rebekah, a charter member of Preston W. R. Corps and benefit member of John West Colony, Pilgrim Fathers. Besides a husband she is survived by a son, Robert P. Williams and two daughters, Mrs. Benjamin F. Hawkins and Miss Alice Williams.

Funeral services were held yesterday afternoon at three o'clock at the Baptist church, which was filled. Interment was made at the Beverly Farms Cemetery.

BEVERLY FARMS

Mrs. Benjamin Ober and Mrs. James D. Hooper, who left the Farms some time ago to visit their sister, Mrs. Charles Perkins in Chicago, have left that city and will spend the remainder of the winter in California.

Former Alderman Augustus P. Loring, Jr., was recently elected a member of the State Housing Committee of the Massachusetts Civic association.

The boy members of the Pastor's Hour at the local Baptist church are holding weekly meetings each Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Their invitation to the boys of the Baptist and Congregational churches of Manchester to come to Beverly Farms and spend a social evening was accepted and took place last evening. There was an entertainment, followed by refreshments.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur P. Thissell have the sympathy of their friends over the loss of their grand-daughter, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Mason (Maude Thissell) who died in Norwood last week.

John Gray, for a number of years chauffeur for Thomas M. McKee, has accepted a similar position with John L. Saltonstall. He will probably move with his family from the Farms to Beverly Cove in a short time.

Probably not all the visitors to the Farms branch library are aware that the roll-top desk now in use there belonged to Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, the poet and writer. The desk was presented by his son, Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes. Dr. Holmes' library case was also given to local parties and is now in use in the Sunday school of the Farms Baptist church.

Mrs. Henry L. Mason of Boston and the Farms, who is in charge of the next entertainment in the Lyceum program at the school assembly hall on Friday evening, Feb. 7, has paid a visit to the Farms to arrange for the event. There will be a musical program, including out-of-town talent.

MR. DOW ENDORSES BILL

In a communication to the Beverly Times, James B. Dow of Beverly Farms, expresses himself on the proposed amendment to the Beverly City charter, as follows:

"Dear Sir:—I want to endorse most heartily the bill filed at the State house by our representative A. G. Catheron, which provides for the election of ward aldermen by all the voters of the city.

"The business of the city should be transacted in the interest of the whole people.

"Therefore the board should be elected by all the voters.

"The city, in all its official relations should be treated as a unit—in order that confidence and prosperity may follow.

"Any other policy will surely lead to unrest and depression and loss of enterprise. It would also contribute to that most pernicious of all forms of graft, called trading."

Inquisitive Passenger—And what is that curious thing you are carrying?

Sailor (with winch crank)—This, mum? It's the crank what they use for winding up the dog watch.—Judge.

WENHAM.

At the village church Sunday morning the minister, Rev. F. M. Cutler, will preach on "The Value of Small Things." Sunday school at noon. Y. P. S. C. E. meeting at 6. An outlook meeting will be held at 7, under the department of missions, addressed by Miss Emma Short of Salem. Miss Short's theme will be "Heroism."

Wednesday at 8 p. m. the final stereopticon course entertainment will be given by the Y. P. S. C. E. In addition to music and recitations there will be an illustrated lecture on "Longfellow."

Warm sympathy was extended last week to Mrs. Jacob D. Barnes upon the death of her mother, Mrs. Sarah A. Currier. Mrs. Currier was formerly a Wenhamite, and had many friends in town. Of late she has made her home at Onset. The funeral service was held at the Barnes home Sunday afternoon, and was conducted by Rev. F. M. Cutler. Musical numbers were rendered by the Gentlee quartet.

Joseph F. Lynch attended the boy scout council in the Y. M. C. A. building Tuesday evening, and gave the boys an account of his recent inspection of the Charlestown state prison.

A hockey game is arranged, weather permitting, between the Wenham Y. M. C. A. and the Danvers Unitarian boy scouts, to be played at Danvers next Saturday afternoon.

Wenham lilacs and horse chestnuts are budding. The weather bureau records may not go back quite so far, but our ancestors had just such a winter at this in 1775-'76, when the Americans were engaged in the siege of Boston.

A free lunch counter is maintained for the birds at the Wenham Manse. Last week patronage was brisk, amongst the hungry visitants being chickadees, nuthatches, downy woodpeckers, brown creepers and tree sparrows.

"THE GARDEN OF ALLAH."

No more gorgeous and vari-colored picture book has ever been unfolded than the stage form of this famous romance of the desert, which is being presented at the Boston Theatre, before large and deeply interested audiences. The production proper, for which we are indebted to the Liebler Company, is a spectacle beautiful to behold. The play itself may be said to stand alone among similar dramas of the moment in spiritual elevation, for the book from which it is taken has a profound impression among all those who have read it. Mr. Hichens, author of the novel, and Mary Anderson, who assisted him in the work of dramatization, have proved remarkably expert as playwrights.

A monk (Boris Androvsky), tired of the restraint and solitude of his cell, and possessing all the robustness, passion and vigor of men who live to love, and love to live, breaks his vow, escapes to the desert, meets a beautiful woman (Domini Enfiliden), who seems to fill every desire of his body and soul, and who upon her discovering his identity, forsakes her at her command, and returns to seclusion to atone for all that has gone before.

As for the spectacle proper, it lies in the resplendent pictures of Eastern life, the camels, the dancing girls in Beni-Mora, their belligerent Arab lovers, the bleating goats and kindred sounds of Oriental life that strike the ear, the brilliant sun on the walls of the Monastery, and the strange lights that play on the sky that marks the far-off end of the horizon. All these details, together with the love of the amorous Domini, and the haunted Boris, result in a unity of picturesque impression that fills the eye with alluring pictures of a romantic and distant world. During the Boston engagement, which is a limited one, matinees will be given on Wed. and Sat.

MANY FAMILIES ARE BUYING LARGELY IN ANTICIPATION OF FUTURE WANTS.

We have publicly announced heretofore that furniture of all descriptions would be higher in price this Spring. The coming raise in prices is justified by the increase in the cost of both labor and material. A great many families are profiting by this announcement which we purposely made for their guidance and welfare. Although large quantities of goods have already gone out from the great TITUS store there is still ample time to supply those who will purchase today and tomorrow.

Is Your Stationery You?

When you write to your friends does your stationery carry your individuality?

Has it that pleasing air of refinement and distinction that a monogram stationery has?

For if it hasn't, you know you can use beautiful die-stamped stationery, bearing your own monogram, for very little more than the cost of the paper plain. The die is the most expensive part, and we will make you a very nice one for $2.00 or $2.50.

Now that the winter season is here and social engagements demand correspondence, you should look into this, for socially one cannot afford to use anything but the most refined and individual stationery.

We shall be glad to send you samples and quote prices on any kind of a die, without involving the slightest obligation on your part. If you cannot come to the Store, write us and we will mail you sample sheet of dies, together with prices and particulars.

Life Means Living.

IT is a false belief that life necessarily wears itself out as the years go by. Life means living and so long as we live with our eyes open toward the future, with our ears attuned to catch the melody of the present day, with our hands eager for the new task, with our feet impatient for the unexplored path before us, we shall not grow old but we shall remain young in heart and mind and spirit, which after all are our real selves.

NORTH SHORE BREEZE

Vol. XI

Manchester, Mass., Friday, January 31, 1913

No. 5

SOCIETY NOTES

Mrs. Reginald Boardman has just returned to West Manchester from a short visit to Washington with her mother, Mrs. Charles A. Munn, who has been critically ill in New York since leaving Manchester last autumn. The many North Shore friends of Mrs. Munn will be glad to learn that she has sufficiently recovered to be taken to her Washington residence in Scott Circle. Miss Gladys Munn is with her mother.

Mrs. John Hays Hammond's at home this afternoon, from 4 to 6, at her Washington residence, marks the closing hospitality of that kind this winter at the Capital, and the last of a series of very delightful Friday afternoon receptions given by Mrs. Hammond this winter.

Mrs. Charles D. Sias of Wenham and Bay State Road, Boston, left this week for the Pacific coast, where she will spend the late winter and early spring.

Charles H. Tweed, of West Beach Hill, Beverly Farms, was included in the long list of well known people arriving in New York from Europe on the last trip of the Kaiserin Augusta Victoria.

Louis Agassiz Shaw, of the Beverly Farms colony, is to enjoy a late winter holiday in the shape of a trip to Bermuda. Mrs. Shaw is not accompanying Mr. Shaw on his journey, having arranged instead to join friends in Paris for a few weeks. She sailed on Tuesday of last week, from New York on the Mauretania.

Mrs. Roger W. Cutler (Leslie Bradley), who is highly accomplished in various directions, has added to her attainments by capturing the largest tarpon of the season at Miami, where Mr. and Mrs. Cutler have been for a portion of their honeymoon. They made a week's cruise on the Yuma, with admirable results, and although Mr. Cutler caught a tarpon tipping the scales at 67 pounds, his youthful bride made the record catch of the winter in landing a fish weighing 95 pounds.

SOCIETY NOTES

Notable among the nuptials which are being arranged for the coming season will be that of Miss Elizabeth Sears, elder daughter of Herbert M. Sears, of Boston and Pride's Crossing, whose wedding to Bayard Warren will be one of the most fashionable events of the season to take place, if present plans are carried out, at the family residence on the North Shore. Another bride of the early spring will be Miss Helen Fitch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ezra C. Fitch of Boston and Manchester, who is to marry Julian P. Fairchild during April. Still another wedding which is being arranged for the early spring (April) is that of Miss Josephine Dorr of Cambridge, whose family has been coming to the Brownlands at Manchester for several summers, and William Eustis Russell, son of the late Gov. Russell.

The engagement was announced the latter part of last week by Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Read of Manchester, of their daughter, Miss Helen Read, to Dr. Francis Lowell Burnett of Beacon street, Boston. Dr. Burnett is a Harvard man, class of 1901.

Dug Potatoes in Manchester on Jan. 20; Mowed Field on Jan. 29.

Some idea of the mildness of the winter weather in this part of the country this year may be gathered from the following incidents, not based on rumor, but on absolute facts:

Wilbur J. Paige, keeper of the almshouse at Manchester, plowed a potato field on Monday of last week, Jan. 20. He picked up a basket of potatoes, turned up with the soil. Some of these were served at the dinner provided the board of overseers of the poor on the occasion of their annual visit to the almshouse, Friday, Jan. 24.

Caretaker Henry Menkin of "Crowhurst," the F. M. Whitehouse estate at Manchester Cove, mowed a field of more than an acre of ground on the

SOCIETY NOTES

Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Bartlett (Serita Lincoln), are receiving congratulations over the arrival last week of a son, at their home at Beverly Farms. They were married last year.

Miss Evelyn Curtis, the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Curtis of Beverly Farms, is one of the particular coterie of Boston girls who are continually being invited over to New York for dances and other functions. She was over last week and was one of the most admired belles at the Morgan dance last Friday evening. For several years now Mr. and Mrs. Allen and daughter have gone to Europe for the late winter and spring, returning in time to come to their Beverly Farms estate for the summer months.

Mrs. S. Parker Bremer of the Manchester colony gave a dance one night the first of this week at her Boston home, 33 Marlboro street, in honor of Miss Charlotte Baylies, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Baylies, for whom several functions planned for earlier in the winter, had to be cancelled owing to the death of the debutante's grand-mother.

lowlands of the estate on Wednesday of this week—Jan. 29. A large mower, with single horse attached, was used. A man with rake followed up the machine.

The "hokey-pokey" carts have been kept on in Manchester all winter, thus far,—an unusual record. The first time on record when the street-cleaners have been kept to work up into January.

Rev. Mr. Harrison, father of Mrs. R. T. Glendenning of Church street, Manchester, has been in bathing at Singing Beach, Manchester, every day this winter, Sundays excepted.

Ice-men along the North Shore have given up hopes of getting any ice this winter.

Some Books Recently Added to Manchester Library.

Boys who like football—and what boy does not—will be glad to know that another of Ralph Henry Barbour's famous football stories has been added to the Library. "Change Signals" is a real boy's story, and one that would do any boy good to read. Mr. Barbour, who lives in our town at "Journey's End," kindly gave to our Library some twenty volumes of his stories. That they are very popular is proven by the fact that a number of them have had to be rebound in the short time they have been in the Library.

"Glenock Girls at Camp West," a good girl's story, is one of the new books. The Glenock Girls' series has been very much in demand, and this latest addition to the list—a tale of healthy outdoor life—will add to the popularity of the series.

There is probably no study that so inculcates the spirit of humility in the student as that of astronomy. The more one finds out about the stars and planets the more one realizes the immensity of the universe and how small a part of it is our little world.

The study is a very attractive one and to some of us was made much more so a few years ago, by reading a very fascinating little book, "The Friendly Stars." There are a number of books in the Library on this subject but this book is without doubt the best one to read by anyone wishing to get a general idea of the constellations and prominent stars in the evening sky. The author, Martha Evans Martin, has written a companion volume, "The Ways of the Planets." She writes of the planets in such a manner that their study is a pleasure.

The Chapter on Venus—that brilliant planet you have all observed shining so brightly in the western sky in the early evening for the last month—is one of the best in the book. Read it and learn more about this most beautiful of the planets.

To not a few boys and girls the study of history seems dry and uninteresting and anyone writing about the facts of history in such a way as to make them attractive to children has done a distinct service to education. Alice S. Hoffman in her "Heroes and Heroines of English History" has given us a book that will be a pleasure for any child to read. She tells about Alfred the Great, Queen Elizabeth, William Wallace, Bruce, Joan of Arc, Nelson, Florence Nightingale, and other well-known characters in English history. The work is gotten up in a very attractive form and is well illustrated.

"Through the School" tells how a mill boy got an education. It is a very human story. The author, Al. Pridy, is well-known by his "Through the Mill," "The Life of a Mill Boy." The reader will soon be convinced that the author has been "through the school" and "through the mill" and knows much about "the life of a mill boy."

"The Princess Purquoi" by Margaret Sherwood is a collection of fairy tales. The first story, which gives the title to the book, tells about a little princess who was the victim of a curse of the ugly fairy who had control of mind. This fairy had not been invited to the christening and was offended and hence the curse. The effect of this curse was manifest very soon when the growing child began to ask all sorts of unanswerable questions and to have a very strong mind all her own. The influence of her example on her companions is shown in another story in the book, "The Seven Studious Sisters." The stories are most charmingly told.

In the list of new books this week a number of Kipling's works may be found. Among those suitable for children are "The Just So Stories" with "The Just So Song Book" giving the music to the songs in "The Just So Stories." "Stories and Poems Every Child Should Know" is a collection of the best poems and children's stories to be found in Kipling's works.

This little book should do much toward making this author better known to the little folk. "Collected Verse" is another of the Kipling books. It will give great pleasure to the numerous lovers of the poetry of this author. The collection is a good one and well arranged. Many of his verses are familiar to us as "Danny Deever," "Fuzzy Wuzzy," "Mandolay," and the "Recessional." There are others like "McAndrews Hymn," "The Native Born," "The Ballad of East and West," and "Tomlinson" that we all should know.

William Vaughn Moody an American writer of plays and verse was born in Indiana in 1869 and died in Colorado at the early age of forty-one ending all too soon what promised to be a very brilliant career. His complete works were published last year in two attractive volumes. One is made up of his two prose plays, "The Great Divide" and "The Faith Healer." The other contains a trilogy—"The Fire Bringer," "The Masque of Judgment," and a fragment of "The Death of Eve" and Poems."

"The Great Divide" has been and is a popular play depicting Western life. Among his best poems may be mentioned "Ode in Time of Hesitation," "On a Soldier Fallen in the Philippines," "A Grey Day," and "Gloucester Moors." Most of the American poetry written during the past twenty years is ephemeral, but those competent to judge consider that a good deal of Moody's verse will live.

A new novel by G. A. Birmingham, author of "Spanish Gold," called "Priscilla's Spies" will help to pass some pleasant hours. It is a story of Irish life and the heroine is a very attractive young Colleen.

New editions of a number of the standard novelists have been purchased for the Library.

Anthony Trollope whose "Barchester Towers," "Doctor Thorne," "The Warden" many of us have read, is represented by some forty volumes. The books are small in size and the print is good. The edition of Captain Maryat numbers twenty-four. Some of our readers will want to renew acquaintance with "Peter Simple," "Jacob Faithful," and "Midshipman Easy."

Patrons of the Library who have enjoyed Ernest Maltravers "Alice," "Eugene Aram," "Paul Clifford," and "My Novel" will be glad to see the new edition of Bulwer Lytton.

In the thirty-two volume edition of J. Fenimore Cooper will be found all of his best stories. Mark Twain's complete works may now be obtained. Infinite variety may be found in the writings of this author and nothing but good can be obtained from reading his works.

New copies of Wilkie Collins' "Woman in White" and "The Moonstone" may now be had at the Library. Those who think that there are no novels like the old ones—and I am inclined to agree with them—will now have a good opportunity to reread their old favorites.

—R. T. G.

A detailed list of the books recently added to the library will be printed in our next issue.

MISS BILLIE BURKE AT HOLLIS

Miss Billie Burke, who has generally played her annual engagement at the Hollis Street Theatre, Boston, at Easter time, comes this year to enliven the early part of the Lenten period. She will begin a three weeks' run at the Hollis on Monday evening, February 3, and more than usual interest attaches to the coming of the popular actress this time because she brings with her Sir Arthur Pinero's newest —and many critics say, best—comedy, "The 'Mind the Paint' Girl."

Miss Burke had remarkable success in this play in New York where she played it 150 times at the Lyceum Theatre. She repeated her triumph at Philadelphia and again at Baltimore, where she is playing this week. The critics of these three cities agree that in this piece, Miss Burke has really come into her own as an actress of unusual merit and power.

In the Pinero play, Miss Burke, of course, has the title role—a London musical comedy star who has achieved fame by singing a song entitled "Mind the Paint." Lily Parradoll—that is the heroine's name—is a typical girl of her kind. Born over a small grocer's shop, brought up in the streets, her pretty face and nimble wit and still nimbler heels have pushed her forward into the position of the principal girl at the Pandora Theatre.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE

Mozart's "Don Giovanni" an opera which retains its place among the world's masterpieces, will be the notable addition to the repertory of the Boston Opera Company during the coming week. The revival has been brought about by Director Russell in response to many requests for a Mozart opera. Now that the promise is about to be realized, the prediction seems a safe one, that so carefully has it been planned that those who have been eager for it will find that their waiting has been more than worth while.

Not alone owing to the fact that Felix Weingartner, who is without a peer as an interpreter of Mozart, will superintend the final rehearsals and direct the premiere performance on Friday night, is this assurance given, but also because the cast assembled will be one fully equal to the severe demands of the score. In fact the cast will be an all-stellar one, with Mme. Emmy Destinn as Donna Anna and Miss Alice Nielson as Zerlina singing in opera in Boston for the first time in two years.

Scenically the work gives Mr. Urban unusual scope and that he has availed himself of it, the seven truly beautiful sets which he has designed personally, will afford proof.

On Monday evening Verdi's "Otello" and his masterwork, will be sung for the first time under Mr. Weingartner's baton.

Wednesday night Mr. Weingartner will conduct "Il Trovatore" and as Azucona, Mme. Schumann-Heink will sing for the second time. The announcement of the first appearance of the great contralto at last Saturday's matinee resulted in every seat being sold a week ahead of time.

For the Saturday matinee, beginning at 1.30, "Tristan und Isolde" is announced with last week's cast save in one notable instance. The Isolde will be Mme. Minnie Saltzmann-Stevens, an American singer.

On Saturday evening the first popular priced presentation of "Mme. Butterfly" will be given.

WENHAM

Rev. Henry F. Smith of North Beverly will preach at the village church Sunday morning, in exchange with the minister, Rev. F. M. Cutler. Sunday school at noon. Y. P. S. C. E. meeting at 6. The seven o'clock service will be under the department of Bible Study, and will consider the scripture account of Noah and the flood.

Wenham wells suffer from the low level to which Salem has reduced Wenham Lake. Patrick Kavanagh had to drill 69 feet before finding an abundance of moisture; and in doing it discovered that his house is founded upon a rock (a ledge, in fact). E. R. Anderson, Esq., is taking his turn at well-driving.

Joseph F. Lynch has been reappointed game warden for 1913, and is on the watch for infractions of the game laws. Mr. Lynch's report on the Charlestown prison compares interestingly with Dr. G. L. Cady's observations there. Mr. Lynch saw the comfortable cells and the abundant food; Dr. Cady the dark, ill-smelling cells and the cold meals. Mr. Lynch was impressed with the excellence of the goods manufactured by prison labor; Dr. Cady with how little prisoners produce compared with what they might make, and the consequent habits of slowness and even idleness they contract. Both agree that prison is the place to keep out of.

Last Saturday afternoon the Village Improvement society met at the tea room, and listened to a paper by Mrs. B. Hammond Tracy. Mrs. Tracy gave an able description of the progress of landscape gardening in various European countries which she has visited.

On Wednesday at 4 the Ladies' society will hold their regular meeting. The president announces that business meetings will hereafter commence at 4 p. m. Supper will be served at 6. Following the supper there will be an entertainment.

Real Estate and Improvements ... Up and Down the North Shore ...

An important real estate deal was put through this week when James E. McDonnell purchased the West street, Beverly Farms, estate of Mrs. Louise T. B. Wyatt and her daughter, Miss Pearl L. Wyatt. The property consists of a residence, a stable and store. There is over 13,000 feet of land, having a frontage of 130 feet on West street. Mr. McDonnell buys for his own occupancy.

THE RAMBLER

The Rambler has heard more or less about trial marriages, and even went so far once as to endorse them, but such a thing as a trial separation is new to him. This little story clipped from the Man About Town in the Salem News speaks for itself:

"A Salem young man had been keeping company with a young woman from a neighboring town. For some time the couple were all the world to each other, but apparently as time wore on the youthful lovers happened to hear of trial marriages or trial divorces or trial somethings, and so they decided to have a trial separation of six months. Presents were returned, and a verbal agreement reached whereby the two were to part company for six months, during which time each was to have perfect freedom to place his or her affections elsewhere. The months wore on and, as the story goes, the mutual feelings between the young experimenters survived the test of time and absence and at the close of the period of probation they were happily reunited, attend the movies together and will in all probability live together happily forever

There is a rattling good show playing in New York now by the name of "The 'Mind the Paint' Girl," which interpreted, means "look out for the chorus girl." Of course this warning has no particular interest for the Rambler, but it brings to his mind a little incident which happened to a local young man recently when he was calling on a friend of his. Of course this friend is a young lady. The fellow "in the case" is an ardent lover of amateur theatricals (also his lady friend) and of course shows frequent systems of both crazes. The other evening said young man pulled from his many pockets a "liner," used by the "profession" in their make-up. Friend girl was so interested that she tried to decorate herself with the black paint, and her really beautiful eyes took on a sombre and pensive look after a generous smearing of the cosmetic. All would have been well with this experiment had not the girl's father appeared on the scene. Of course he had to accuse the fellow of painting his daughter and teaching her bad habits.

The telephone company in some neighboring cities has sent circulars to its customers inviting criticism of the service that they may be able to correct faults. The Rambler wonders what would happen if some of the other public service corporations followed the same course. There would probably be suggestions enough to fill several books.

There is one Manchester young man who will not try to flirt with a telephone operator again. One day recently he called up one of the fair young ladies who presided over the switchboard, and said, "Miss Blank, I'd like to see you tonight." "I'm sorry, Jack, but the line's busy," replied Miss Operator. Whereupon friend Jack was so mortified and excited that he tried to talk through the receiver. It's an awful disease!

HIS VIEWS

A visitor at a seaside boarding house went into the local postoffice and, seeking to draw the postmaster into conversation, asked him what his views were as to suffragettes.

"Hain't got no views of that kind," replied the postmaster, "but we've got some fine post card views of the new viaduct, the Baptist church and the new library. Want to look at 'em?"

CONFUSION OF TERMS

Judge Blank, who is now on the supreme court bench, was, when he first began his practice of law, a very blundering speaker.

On one occasion, when he was trying a case of replevin, involving the right of property in a lot of hogs, he addressed the jury as follows: "Gentlemen of the jury, there were just 24 hogs in that drove—just 24, gentlemen—exactly twice as many as there are in this jury box."—Case and Comment.

The ways of fortune are strange, look at them from any point of view. Surprising as it may seem, a like encounter happened on the following day and—aye, on the day after and every day for a week or more. Occasions there were when Penelope was compelled to equivocate shamefully in order to escape the companionship of the duke, the count or others of their ilk. Once when the guardian of the road was late at his post she rode far into the enemy's country, actually thrilled by the joy of adventure. When he appeared far down the road she turned and fled with all the sensations of a culprit, and he thundered after her with vindictiveness that deserved better results. Across the line she drew rein and faced him defiantly, her hair blown awry, her cheeks red, her eyes sparkling.

"No trespass!" she cried, holding up her gloved hand. He stopped short, for that was one of the terms of truce.

The next day he again was missing, but she was not to be caught by his stratagem. Instead of venturing into the trap he had prepared for her, she remained on her side of the line, smiling at the thought of him in hiding far up the road. If any one had suggested to her that she was developing too great an interest in this stalwart gentleman she would have laughed him to scorn. It had not entered her mind to question herself as to the pleasure she found in being near him. She was founding her actions on the basis that he was a real man and that the little comedy of adventure was quite worth while.

At length an impatient line appeared on her fair brow, a resentful gleam in her eyes. His remissness was an impertinence! It was the last time she would come—but a sudden thought struck her like a blow. She turned white and red by turns. Had he tired of the sport? Had the novelty worn off? Was he laughing at her for a silly coquette? The riding crop came down sharply upon her horse's flank, and a very deeply agitated young woman galloped off toward Bazelhurst Villa, hurrying as though afraid he might catch sight of her in flight.

A quarter of a mile brought a change in her emotions. British stubbornness arose to combat an utter rout. After all, why should she run away from him? With whimsical bravado she turned off suddenly into the trail that led to the river, her color deepening with the consciousness that, after all, she was vaguely hoping she might see him somewhere before the morning passed. Through the leafy pathway she rode at a snail's pace, brushing the low hanging leaves and twigs from about her head with something akin to petulance.

As she neared the river the neighing of a horse hard by caused her to sit erect with burning ears. Then she relapsed into a smile, remembering that it might have come from the game warden's horse. A moment later her searching eyes caught sight of Shaw's horse tied to a sapling and on Bazelhurst ground, many hundred feet from his own domain. She drew rein sharply and looked about in considerable trepidation. Off to the right lay the log that divided the lands, but nowhere along the bank of the river could she see the trespasser. Carefully she resumed her way, ever on the lookout, puzzled not a little by the unusual state of affairs.

Near the river trail she came upon the man, but he paid no heed to her approach. He sat with his face in his hands, and—she could not believe her eyes and ears—he was sobbing bitterly. For an instant her lips curled in the smile of scornful triumph, and then something like disgust came over her. There was mockery in her voice as she called out to him:

"Have you stubbed your toe, little boy?"

He looked up, dazed. Then he arose, turning his back while he dashed his hand across his eyes. When he glanced back at her he saw that she was smiling. But she also saw something in his face that drove the smile away. Absolute rage gleamed in his eyes.

"So it is real war?" he said hoarsely, his face quivering. "Your pitiful cowards want it to be real, do they? Well, that's what it shall be, hang them! They shall have all they want of it. Look! This is their way of fighting, is it? Look!"

He pointed to his feet. Her bewildered eyes saw that his hand was bloody and a deathly sickness came over her. He was pointing to the outstretched, inanimate form of the dog that had been his friend and comrade. She knew that the beast was dead and she knew that her brother's threat had not been an idle one. A great wave of pity and horror swept over her. Moisture sprang to her eyes on the moment.

"He—he is dead?" she exclaimed.

"Yes; and killed by some cowardly brute whose neck I'd like to wring. That dog—my Bonaparte—who knew no feud, who did no wrong! Your brother wants war, does he? Well, I'll give him air—

"But my brother could not have done a thing like this," she cried, slipping "Accident! Don't come near me."

from her saddle and advancing toward him quickly. "Oh, no, no! Not this! He is not that sort, I know. It must have been an accident and"—

"Accident! Don't come near me! I mean it. God, my heart is too full of vengeance. Accident? Is this blood on my arm accidental? Bah! It was a deliberate attempt to murder me!"

"You—you, too?" she gasped, reeling.

"Yes; they've winged me, too. Oh, God, if I only had been armed. There would have been a killing."

"Let me see, let me help you!" she cried, coming up to his side, white faced and terrified. "I won't stay away! You are hurt. Please, please. I am not your enemy."

For a long minute he held back, savagely resentful, glowering upon her; then his face softened and his hand went out to clasp hers.

"I knew you had nothing to do with it. Forgive me—forgive my rudeness. Don't be alarmed about me. Two or three scattered shot struck me in the arm. The fellow's aim was bad when it came to me. But he—he got the dog! Poor old Bonaparte! It's as if he were a—a brother, Miss Drake. I loved him and he loved me."

"You must let me see your arm. I will not take no for an answer. It must need attention!"

"Believe me, it is nothing. I have had my handkerchief about it—two lit-the shot, that's all." The first charge riddled the dog. But I forgot. I am still on your sister's land. At any minute I may be shot from behind some tree. I—I couldn't help crying, Miss Drake. It was cruel—fiendish! Now, if you'll permit me I'll take my dead off of your land."

"Stop! I must know about it. Tell me; how did it happen?"

"I can't talk about it to you."

"Why not? Do you think I condone this outrage? Do you think I can support such means of warfare? You do not know me, Mr. Shaw; you do not know an Englishwoman's love of fairness."

"By Jove, do you mean it?" His eyes lighted up. "But, after all, you belong to the other camp," he added dejectedly. "I—I wish to heaven, Miss Drake, you were not one of them!"

"My brother—Cecil would not have permitted this," she tried to apologize, remembering with a cold heart that Lord Bazelhurst had given the very instructions of which this was the result.

"We can't discuss it, Miss Drake. Some one from your side of the line killed my dog and then fired at me. I'll admit I was trespassing, but not until the dog was shot. He was on Lady Bazelhurst's land when he was shot. It was not until after that that I trespassed, if you are pleased to call it such. But I was unarmed, hang the luck!" The way he said it conveyed much to her understanding.

"Tell me, please."

"I've had murder in my heart for half an hour, Miss Drake. Somehow you soothe me." He sat down on the log again and leaned his head upon his hand. With his eyes upon the dead dog he went on, controlling his anger with an effort: "I rode down the river bank this morning for a change, intending to go up later on to our trysting place through the wood." She heard him call it a trysting place without a thought of resentment or shame. "When I came to the log there I stopped, but Bonaparte, lawless old chap, kept on. I paid no attention to him, for I was thinking of—of something else. He had raced around in the forbidden underbrush for some time before I heard the report of a gun near at hand. The dog actually screamed like a human being. I saw him leap up from the ground and then roll over. Of course, I—well, I trespassed. Without thinking of my own safety I flew to where the dog was lying. He looked up into my face and whined just as he died. I don't remember how I got off the horse. The next I knew I was rushing blindly into the brush toward a place where I saw smoke cursing like a fiend. Then came the second shot and the stinging in my arm. It brought me to my senses. I stopped and a moment later I saw a man running down along the bank of the stream. I—oh, well, there isn't any more to tell. I don't know who fired the shots. I couldn't see his face."

"It was Tompkins," she cried. "I know it was. He had his orders"—but she checked herself in confusion.

"His orders? Do you mean to say—Miss Drake, did your brother instruct him to kill me?" She quailed beneath his look.

"I—I can't say anything more about it, Mr. Shaw," she murmured, so pitiously that he was touched. For a seemingly interminable length of time his hard eyes looked into hers, and then they softened.

"I understand," he said simply. "You cannot talk about it. I'll not ask any questions."

"My brother is weak in her hands," she managed to say in extenuation.

"After all, it isn't a pleasant subject. If you don't mind we'll let it drop—that is, between you and me, Miss Drake. I hope the war won't break off our"—

"Don't suggest it, please. I'd rather you wouldn't. We are friends, after all. I thought it was playing at war, and I can't tell you how shocked I am."

"Poor old Bonaparte!" was all he said in reply. She stooped and laid her hand on the fast chilling coat of the dog. There were tears in her eyes as she arose and turned away, moving toward her horse. Shaw deliberately lifted the dead animal into his arms and strode off toward his own land. She followed after a moment of indecision, leading the horse. Across the line he went and up the side of the knoll to his right. At the foot of a great tree he tenderly deposited his burden. Then he turned to find her almost beside him.

"You won't mind my coming over here, will you?" she asked softly. He reached out and clasped her hand thoughtlessly with his blood covered fingers. It was not until long afterward that she discovered his blood upon the hand from which she had drawn her riding glove.

"You are always welcome," he said. "I am going to bury him here this afternoon. No; please don't come. I'll bring the men down to help me. I suppose they think I'm a coward and a bounder over at your place. Do you remember the challenge you gave me yesterday? You dared me to come over the line as far into Bazelhurst land as you had come into mine. Well, I dared last night."

"You dared? You came?"

"Yes, and I went farther than you have gone, because I thought it was play, comedy, fun. I even sat upon your gallery just outside the billiard room—and smoked two cigarettes. You'll find the stubs on the porch railing if her ladyship's servants are not too exemplary." She was looking at him in wide eyed unbelief. "I was there when you came out on the lawn with the Frenchman."

"Did you hear what he was—what we were saying?" she asked nervously and going pale.

"No. I was not eavesdropping. Besides, you returned to the house very abruptly, if you remember."

"Yes. I remember," she said, a sigh or rather accompanying the words as they came to her cheek. "But were you not afraid of being discovered? How imprudent of you!"

"It was a bit risky, but I rather enjoyed it. The count spoke to me as I left the place. It was dark, and he mistook me for one of your party. I couldn't wait to see if you returned to renew the tete-a-tete"

"I did not return," she said. It was his turn to be relieved.

CHAPTER IV.

In Which the Truth Trespasses.

LORD and Lady Bazelhurst, with the more energetic members of their party, spent the day in a so called hunting excursion to the hills south of the villa. Toward nightfall they returned successfully empty handed and rapacious for bridge. Penelope, full of smoldering anger, had spent the afternoon in her room, disdaining every call of sociability. She had awakened to the truth of the situation in so far as she was concerned. She was at least seeing things from Shaw's point of view. Her resentment was not against the policy of her brother, but the overbearing, petulant tyranny of her American sister-in-law. From the beginning she had disliked Evelyn; now she despised her. With the loyal simplicity of a sister she absolved Cecil of all real blame in the outrage of the morning, attributing everything to the cruelty and envy of the despot who held the purse strings from which dangled the pliable fortunes of Bazelhurst. The Bazelhursts, one and all—ancestors thrown in—swung back and forth on the pendulum of her capriciousness. Penelope, poor as a church mouse, was almost wholly dependent upon her brother, who in turn owed his present affluence to the more or less luckless movement of the matrimonial market. The girl had a small, inadequate income—so small that it was almost worth jesting about.

Here was Penelope, twenty-two, beautiful, proud, fair minded and healthy, surveying herself for the first time from a new and an entirely different point of view. She was not pleased with the picture. She began to loathe herself more than she pitied her brother. Something like a smile came into her clouded face as she speculated on Randolph Shaw's method of handling Evelyn Banks had she fallen to him as a wife. The quiet power in that man's face signified the presence of a manhood that—ah, and just here it occurred to her that Lady Bazelhurst felt the force of that power even though she never had seen the man. She hated him because he was strong enough to oppose her, to ignore her, to laugh at her impotence.

WOULD REVERE BENEFIT

The designing eyes which Boston has at present on the town of Revere lead many persons to wonder what their motive can be in wishing to annex it to the Hub proper. Besides its beach, Revere has but little to commend itself to the neighboring city, and the only apparent gain that would result for either municipality in the event of its annexation, would be the abolishment of the town meetings for which Revere is famous, or shall we say infamous? For a town of its size, Revere has handed out some of the hottest headed would-be politicians that ever held office, and the warm discussions that even now are characteristic of the beach town would happily be eliminated. This would seem to be about the only gain that would result from the annexation.

There are indeed arguments for and against the annexation, but if Revere were gobbled up by Boston, the right to sell intoxicating liquors on the beach would transform that now pleasing thoroughfare into a brothel for drunken loafers. To be sure, there may be a violation of the liquor laws on the beach now, but it is not so evident as to make a visit to the place disagreeable. Revere should be content to be a part of "Boston's bed-room," as someone has expressed it, and not instead its dumping-place.

There would be but little good result in the annexation of the coast town and it had better keep what individuality is has now.

BUREAU OF SOCIAL HYGIENE

As a result of the work of the special grand jury appointed to investigate the white slave traffic in New York city in 1910 the Bureau of Social Hygiene came into existence. Under the active leadership of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., the work was advanced and a study made of the social evil of that city. Since that time the work has broadened in its scope and the study by experts has extended to European countries.

The bureau now has plans formulated for making warfare against the forces of evil in such a way that the work will not be spasmodic or temporary, but will go on, generation after generation.

One of the first things that was undertaken by the bureau was the establishment of a laboratory of social hygiene at Bedford Hills, New York, and adjacent to the State Reformatory for Women. In this laboratory it is proposed to study the physical, mental, social and moral side of each person committed to the reformatory. This study will be carried on by experts and after a diagnosis is completed it is hoped that the laboratory will be able to recommend the treatment most likely to reform the individual.

The prominent men and women who are responsible for the movement believe that this personal observation of cases is the only sure way of effecting a reform of the social evil and that it will result in a plan that may be used for dealing with the evil in New York city. If such a plan can be obtained, public support ought not to be difficult to obtain.

One of the commendable features of the bureau's work is that it is not sensational, sentimental or hysterical; it is not a spirit of criticism of public officials. It is rather a spirit of constructive suggestion and of deep scientific as well as humane interest in a great world problem.

UTAH WOULD EMULATE CHINA

Governor Foss dislikes the execution of a criminal by any method, and if suggestions would help him any, that contained in the recommendation of the Utah Legislature that the state adopt the Chinese custom of allowing a criminal to commit suicide would undoubtedly aid his excellency in his attempt to solve the question of capital punishment.

A judge in Salt Lake City has issued a statement endorsing the Chinese method. The Legislature of Utah also believes that the question of what to do to a prisoner convicted of a capital crime would then be abolished. This would indeed be a novel procedure for this country and would put the criminal out of existence, but it would seem that the system of shooting and hanging now in vogue in Utah would be preferable than allowing a man to take his own life. From a moral standpoint the scheme seems objectionable, as self-slaughter is certainly not a thing to be admired. It is rather questionable practice to encourage.

WITH THE SUFFRAGISTS

Premier Asquith will have his hands full if he attempts to much longer oppose the demands of the suffragists in England. He has shown the women one of the little tricks of his trade by literally throwing woman suffrage out of Parliament, which means that the violent disturbances which have been the result of opposition to the women will continue until they are granted their desires. As the situation now stands in England the women must either fight or surrender and await the probably tardy pleasure of the English government. But they intend to fight, and have started operations in no uncertain manner.

This latest move on the part of the English government makes the suffragists in this country ask themselves how much opposition is to be shown their attempts to gain the ballot in every state. There is sure to be a flood tide in the movement in the United States very soon, but the questionable strategems which have marked the fight in England will probably not be in evidence here. The measure is a popular one in this country, to say the least, and as is the case with all popular measures in the United States, it will probably achieve its success quicker and easier than across the water.

If some of the scandal-mongering ministers who took so much interest in the Ettor trial to learn all about "social conditions" and the "under-world" would take the hint and study the moral conditions all over New England they might be doing something worth while. If they visited the regular sessions of the criminal courts they would find material enough to last them for a lifetime in aiding boys and girls from getting into trouble. But they are looking for sky-rockets; a chance to pose and preach and publicly agitate over an element that are hardly worth their attention. Let them look to the parents of the boys and girls in their own community and they will be doing something beside theorizing about "social conditions."

The semi-professional of every description in sports seems doomed among college men and those taking part in amateur sports. The necessary exit of Thorpe, the Carlisle Indian athlete, from the field of amateur sports has opened the eyes of all interested on both sides of the Atlantic, and we will probably see a tighter line drawn around American contestants in foreign amateur sporting events. The conditions surrounding college athletes have always been suspicious. A very few college presidents are not firmly against the playing of professional baseball in the summer by their students as a means of helping defray the expenses of tuition. Now is a good time to clear up the situation.

Mr. Alexander McGregor, president of the Republican club of Massachusetts, gives his constituents some good advice when he says, "If there are things in our house to be cleaned, let us clean house; if there are false leaders in our party, let us sidetrack or eliminate them; if there is too much standpatism in evidence, let us let in some progressiveness but above all things let us get in touch with and keep in touch with the temper of the times; let us free ourselves from the idea that by holding back we can put a brake on progress." This should have been the Republican doctrine for the past few years.

Better wait until the end of May until you figure how much you have saved on the winter's coal bill.

After the exposure of the ferry graft in Boston it is unsafe to say "over the river" to Mayor Fitzgerald.

President-elect Wilson "must have" eight hours sleep nightly. Hope he gets it.

Salem now falls in line with a curfew for all boys and girls under sixteen years. Doesn't sound like Mayor Hurley.

Milwaukee seems a queer place to raise $1,000,000 for a Prohibition party.

THE RAMBLER

The Rambler was greatly interested in the usual minute detail which has been paid to David Belasco's latest, and said by some to be his most successful play, "The Woman," now playing at the Park Theatre. The noted producer never lets escape his attention the slightest detail or any little suggestion that will aid the imagination of his audiences. In "The Woman" he has certainly kept up his reputation. It is the little things in a play that help to make it worth while. One of these little tricks of suggestion which may in itself be trivial, but seems to have all the earmarks of a finishing touch of the great Belasco, is contained in a tense scene between Jane Petton and Mary Nash. The women are holding a clandestine conference in a hotel apartment at a time when a visitor is expected. To make a sudden interruption of their talk realistic the women must be warned of his coming, for the visitor is a man. Instead of a commonplace ringing of an electric bell Mr. Belasco has apparently utilized one of his many stage tricks. He conveys the coming of the visitor by a more subtle means. First, the audience, and also of course the women upon the stage, hear the purring of the elevator as it ascends to the floor where the apartment is situated. Then the soft shove as the door of the "lift" is opened; thus we are informed of the approach of someone. It is indeed a little thing and by many of the audience perhaps unnoticed, but it has its significance as an example of the detail and "playing up of little things" for which Mr. Belasco, the producer of "The Woman," is noted.

Judging from the advance in price of kerosene and gasoline, Mr. Rockefeller has begun to save all the pennies he can once more.—Lawrence Telegram.

MANCHESTER

Clarence Mackin was the guest of friends in Hudson Tuesday.

The town officials are now busy closing up the accounts for the year, which closes tonight, officially.

Mrs. Percy A. Wheaton is spending a week at Amesbury with her parents, Supt. and Mrs. Charles E. Fish.

The friends of Miss Alice Widger regret to hear of her illness at her home on Summer street, Manchester Cove.

D. C. Stranger of Danvers, County Boy Scout commissioner, will address the Boy Scouts of Manchester Friday evening, Jan 31.

Miss Bertha Haskell is enjoying a vacation from her duties as book-keeper for G. A. Knoerr, electrician, and is spending two weeks at Washington, D. C.

The Manchester bowling team has now won its way into third place in the North Shore League. Gloucester and Beverly is still tied; Manchester is third and Ipswich at the bottom.

The First Aid to the Injured class met at the John A. Price assembly hall for its weekly lesson, Monday evening. Miss Katherine P. Loring of the Pride's Crossing summer colony will be present at the meeting next week.

Miss Anna Maslin was given a surprise party at her home on Lincoln street Tuesday evening in honor of her birthday. About 24 of her friends gathered at her home and a most pleasant evening was spent with music and games. Refreshments of ice cream, cake and punch were served.

Yeiser Hooks and Eyes—something new, at E. A. Lethbridge's. *

The Boy Scouts enjoyed a most instructive hike last Saturday under the direction of Civil Engineer Raymond C. Allen. Start was made at one o'clock from Scout Master Warner's home. The hike led first to the so-called Gray Beach bound, on the easterly side of Manchester, thence to the other easterly bounds so far as the Heap of Rocks bound so-called. Mr. Allen gave to the boys much interesting and instructive information relative to the location of the bound; and the early history of Manchester. At a later date the remaining bounds will be examined.

MANCHESTER

Mrs. Joseph Vasconcellos was taken to the Beverly hospital for treatment Wednesday.

Miss Elizabeth Coughlin spent Sunday with her parents at Smith's Point. Miss Coughlin is training for a nurse in a Boston hospital.

The annual meeting the Helping Hand association of North Shore Lodge, A.O.U.W., will be held Tuesday evening, Feb. 4, after the regular meeting of the lodge.

Mrs. T. W. Long's party to be held at Town hall Monday evening, for which she issued invitations early in the week, is being anticipated as one of the pleasantest dances of the season.

Word was received by one of the local Greeks yesterday that one of the young men that left Manchester last fall to join the Greek forces in the war with Turkey, was killed in a battle several weeks ago. He was known in Manchester by the name of Theodore. Last summer he was employed as night watchman at the Essex County club.

Lamson and Hubbard hats for fall and winter at Bell's Beach street store. *

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bullock left last Saturday for New York city and after a few days with Mrs. Bullock's brother, Geo. E. Scott and family they left Tuesday for Florida. After a stay of two weeks they will return to New York for another couple of weeks with Mr. and Mrs. Scott before returning to Manchester in late February.

MANCHESTER CLUB WILL HAVE DUTCH SUPPER

The annual gathering of the members of the Manchester club will take place in the club rooms next Monday evening, Feb. third, at 7.45. Every effort is being made to make this a most enjoyable festivity, and with that end in view, all are urged to be present. At a quarter before eight there will be an entertainment filled with wit, humor and rollicking songs, after which a Dutch supper will be served. This is to be a gathering strictly for club members. All expenses are to be paid from the club treasury. The club will not hold its customary banquet this year.

MANCHESTER

Lawrence Watson has been ill at his home on School street the last week.

Fred Leach was a week-end visitor of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Leach of North street.

Manchester was represented at the big Portuguese ball in Gloucester Tuesday night by a delegation of about 15.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred K. Swett are planning to go to Cuba on a vacation trip this winter, leaving probably about the middle of next month.

The next dance of the winter series will be held in the Town hall Friday evening, Feb. 14. It will be a costume party. The grand march will be at 8.15 sharp.

Eben Burke, who was operating a saw at the saw mill on Pleasant street, in some manner caught his hand in the machinery, Wednesday, and almost sawed his hand off. He was rushed to the Beverly hospital in the ambulance. The man has worked at the business for nearly 40 years and this was his first serious accident.

The many friends of Mrs. George F. Allen regret to learn of her departure for Danvers, after continuously living in the town for more than 60 years. Left alone in the world by the death of Mr. Allen last week it was thought she could be better cared for at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Osborne Leach, who have a large country home on Maple street, Danvers, and consequently she was taken there by automobile Tuesday.

Frank P. Tenney had a narrow escape from serious accident Wednesday. He was coming down Central street in his small auto when a boy let a large iron hoop roll directly in the path of the machine. Before the power could be shut off the hoop had been struck and in so doing it turned the car completely around and sent it up over the sidewalk into the iron rail fence, which protects the dam in the center of the town. Had the rail not been there, or had it not been very strong Mr. Tenney and his machine would have gone overboard. As it was one of the large iron standards was snapped off near the base. It was a very narrow escape.

HIGH SCHOOL PLAY

TOWN HALL, MANCHESTER, CROWDED
LAST NIGHT FOR ENTERTAINMENT

The Manchester Town hall was crowded last night when the entertainment by the students of the Story High school was given. The feature of the program was the presentation of the three-act comedy "Out of Town." There were numbers by the High school orchestra and the Girls' Glee club of the school.

The money raised is to be devoted to the school organizations, including the orchestra, glee club and athletic association, as well as the graduating class.

The entertainment was pronounced a success. Every number of the program was thoroughly enjoyed. The play was especially good, and the eight boys and girls taking part had their parts well memorized. They had been carefully trained by Principal Saben and everything went along very smoothly.

The part of John Spencer Ellington, the unwilling possessor of a dukedom was taken by Rufus Long, who was disguised as a valet in the last act of the play. Robert Mayhew Thorndike, "a bachelor by choice," was taken by Joseph H. Carey. His mother, Mrs. Jane Harrington Thorndike, a widow, was very aptly impersonated by Miss Hester Rust, who had a strong propensity for bargains, and who was always doing things in "memory of her poor husband." In Acts 2 and 3 she and her daughter, Elizabeth Thorndike were disguised as housekeeper and maid, respectively. This latter character was taken by Miss Dorothy Blaisdell, who was very cute and prepossessing both as a "daughter" and as a "maid." The part of Mrs. J. Ludington Montroe, a former classmate of Mrs. Thorndike, airy, dominating, aristocratic and "with plenty of backbone" was carried out in grand style by Miss Gladys Semons, and the daughter, Esther Munroe, a demure, sensible young miss, was exceedingly well acted by Miss Helen C. Wing. Two other characters, James, the butler, and Marie, the maid, were taken by Irving Baker and Miss Margaret Meaney, respectively. All acted well.

The High school orchestra played as the first number of the program "Mosaic Overture," and a concluding number Mendelssohn's "Wedding March." The orchestra is composed of Miss Dorothy Blaisdell, piano; Miss Porter and Joseph Carey, first violins; Ethel Townsend and William McDiarmid, second violins; Lester Paige, cornet, and Harry Baker, drums. Willard Rust also assisted last night, as trombonist.

The Glee club, which sang in such favor at the Women's club last week, sang again last night and were warmly applauded, and well they might be for their selections were very well rendered. They sang as their first number "Morn-Rise," by Czibulka, and as an encore, "Oh, Lovely Night;" as their second number they sang, "Doan ye Cry, Ma Honey," and as an encore, "For-Get-Me-Not."

Yes, busted! Not by the overheated Breezes that blew like fury last Friday afternoon, but—

Because someone set a match to the Powder, in the Powder House, on Powder House Hill, and blew it all to smithereens. It looks as though the town will have to vote to retain the Old Burying Ground lot, after all. (We may need it, to bury the dead politicians).

x—x

The Operie House was crowded last night—durned crowded—for the High School entertainment. Its a wonder someone doesn't have plans prepared for a new Town hall. The selectmen saw fit to try to foist a monument onto the town in the shape of a new road to Smith's Point, at a cost of some $60,000, which scheme found favor in nobody's eyes except the one that schemed it and had plans and drawings to the value of several hundred dollars prepared. Why not erect a more appropriate monument, at a much less cost, in the shape of a new hall?

x—x

And speaking of monuments, have you seen the little one erected on the stage of the Town hall the past year? It has four legs, and is generally designated by the word "piano." And it cost only $600—for ONE piano. A mere trifle!

x—x

No papers have yet been taken out for any of the town offices. We understand Geo. E. Hildreth is the only man in the field for the Water Board; that Albert Cunningham will run again for the School Committee, and that Frank G. Cheever will be a candidate for re-election as assessor for 3 years. The only men that are out and out candidates for the selectmen are the present members of the board—E. S. Knight, Horace Standley and Frank G. Cheever. New names mentioned are Nathan P. Meldrum and George R. Dean. These two men will run, in all probability.

x—x

It is understood that an article will be inserted in the town warrant calling for a 44-hour day for town employees, and a raise in pay to 35 cents an hour. This means 4 hours less a week and an increase of $1.00 a week in pay. The men claim they do not average enough in the run of the year to get a living—so much time is taken out

THE MEN'S BROTHERHOOD OF MANCHESTER

The Men's Brotherhood of Manchester now number 65 members. The objects of the Brotherhood are as follows: To help men by increasing acquaintance of its members for the purpose of mutual development along spiritual, intellectual and social lines.

Its membership shall be any man who desires to participate in the privileges of the Brotherhood.

Its officers shall consist of a president, vice president, secretary and treasurer and a board of directors, numbering seven men of the organization. They shall be elected at the annual business meeting and their term shall be of one year's duration. The board of directors shall together with the president have general supervision of every department of the works of the Brotherhood.

There shall be no stated membership dues or taxes. The expenses of the Brotherhood shall be met by contribution when such expenses occur.

Meetings shall be held on the 1st and 3rd Mondays of each month at 7.45 p. m. unless otherwise ordered by vote of the Brotherhood.

All men of the town are urged to attend these Brotherhood meetings and bring their friends. The membership list is still open for admission.

DR. SOUTHAND OF WELLESLEY GIVES FIRST OF SERIES OF TALKS TO AR-BELLA CLUB

There was an attendance of nearly ninety at the Arbella club meeting Tuesday afternoon to listen to a talk on "Personal Hygiene" by Dr. Southand of Wellesley college. Dr. Southand through her extensive experience as a teacher in high schools and later as a doctor is thoroughly competent to deal with her subject in the best possible way. In this first talk of her series the most elementary and, in a way, the most important branches of her subject were taken up.

Two vocal solos, "Japanese Love Song" and "Bobolink" were very sweetly rendered during the afternoon by Miss Melissa Stanley, who won great favor with her audience. She was accompanied on the piano by Miss Dorothy Blaisdell. After Miss Stanley's second song, the meeting adjourned for a social hour with the committee in charge. Cocoa and crackers were served.

BEVERLY FARMS

The annual meeting of the West Beach corporation will take place in Marshall's hall on Monday evening, Feb. 17.

Beverly Farms' new steam fire engine which was put out of commission the latter part of last week because it did not stand up under a cold water test, was put in commission again on Wednesday. The concern that made the machine have had mechanics at work on it for a few days and it is now in first class condition. The trouble was not serious and the needed repairs were easily made.

Mrs. Benjamin F. Osborne has been confined to her home the past week by illness.

Of interest to many Beverly Farms people is the matter of descendants of the late Mrs. Judith Osborne, aged 94, Beverly Farms' oldest resident, who died last week. She had five children, Arietta, Benjamin, Harriet, Adaline, and one deceased. She is survived by six grandchildren and eight great grandchildren.

Letters remaining unclaimed at the Beverly Farms P. O. Jan. 29th: Delia Connolly, Jeremiah Callahan, Henry Hinzer.—Wm. R. Brooks, postmaster.

Members of the Beverly Farms Baptist church held a cottage prayer-meeting at the home of Miss M. Elizabeth Hull last Monday evening. The next one will be next Tuesday evening at the home of T. H. Stiles, West Manchester. On Sunday the pastor will give an address on "Child Labor," and also on this day the Ordinance of the Lord's Supper will be observed. Last Wednesday evening the pastor began a mid-week service of a series of lectures on the Life of St. Paul; the second of the series will take place next Wednesday evening. This evening the church will be represented by John L. Chapman and Otis N. Davis at a centenary of the organization of the Salem Bible Translation and Foreign Mission society. This is of interest because of its being the parent organization from which all similar societies in America have originated. The music committee and choir are planning a special musical service to take place on the last Sunday in February. On April 27, Rev. J. Frances Russell, formerly teacher in the Philippine Islands, has been secured to deliver an address on "The Pearl of the Orient."

Miss Jennie L. Chase of Derry, N. H., has been visiting Beverly Farms friends the past week.

BEVERLY FARMS

George H. Wyatt will leave Beverly Farms next Tuesday, going to Washington, D. C., for a three months stay. He is to visit in that city his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Mutch.

Mayor Herman A. MacDonald was one of the speakers at the annual banquet of the Now and Then association at Salem Wednesday evening. He received a royal reception from the members of that popular organization.

An important change voted upon at last Monday evening's meeting of the Board of Aldermen was the consolidation of the city engineer's and the street superintendent's departments by a vote of 5 to 4—Alderman Hull voting against the new order of things. The action is the result of Mayor MacDonald's recommendation, and like his other recommendations, seems to meet with popular approval.

The members of the Pastor's Hour class for Boys of the local Baptist church are now working for a stereopticon outfit, much needed in the general work of the church. The outfit will cost about $75.00. In order to assist in the matter the ladies of the church are planning to hold a food sale and entertainment in the near future. The boys will meet at the church next Thursday evening at 6.45, at which time there will be present an instructor from the Beverly Y. M. C. A. to give them a lesson in physical training.

Mr. and Mrs. Israel Barnes (nee Lida Pierce) who have been spending the winter in Lowell were made happy by the advent of a son last Friday.

Thomas Chapman of Pride's, employed by the General Electric Co. at Schenectady, N. Y., paid his family a surprise visit last week. He had come on to Lynn on a business trip.

Next Friday evening, Feb. 7, at the fourth number of the free course of lectures and entertainments at the Beverly Farms school hall, an excellent musical program will be given, consisting in part of a chorus of pupils of the school. Piano solos by Mrs. J. Langdon Frothingham of Boston, a group of songs by Mr. Floyd Neal of Boston and other features, making a most excellent program and a pleasant evening to look forward to.

Mrs. Howard A. Doane entertained the Ladies' Sewing circle of the Baptist church at her home on Hale street last evening.

Breeze subscription, $2 a year.

BEVERLY FARMS

Miss Bertha A. Connor of the fifth grade of the Beverly Farms school has resigned to accept the position of master's secretary in the Worcester school. Miss Mary A. Dolan, who has been teaching at Uxbridge, Mass., is her successor.

John McTiernan and Henry Williams have obtained good positions at the plant of the U. S. M. C. in Beverly.

The ladder company of the fire department will elect a committee to make arrangements for the annual "night off" at their regular meeting next Monday night.

Fernald Machain and family are moving from the Joseph Stanwood house on Vine street to the green cottage of Connolly Bros. on Hale street.

The wife of Albert Smith, night gateman at the West street crossing, has been through an operation at the Beverly Hospital this week.

The whist party to be given at Marshall's hall next Tuesday evening in aid of St. Margaret's church, is sure to be well attended and will prove an enjoyable affair.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward D. Gilbert of Newark, N. J., have been visiting at Beverly Farms the past week.

Arthur Davis and Arthur Harlow, who built an ice boat during the early winter in anticipation of much sport at Gravelly Pond, are so discouraged at the tricks of the weather man that they are considering turning it into an aeroplane.

Mrs. Arthur Burton and sister, Miss Florence Paine sail from Boston next Tuesday for the Isle of Wight, England, their former home.

John A. Morrison has gone to Kennebunkport, Me., for a week's visit.

A committee from the Beverly Farms Athletic club is arranging a banquet and evening's entertainment for last year's baseball team. The event is to take place within three weeks at Marshall's hall and will be open to all by ticket.

Officer Moines and Bray prevented a serious fire early Wednesday morning when they discovered a slight blaze in the postoffice building due to the explosion of a lamp. The flames were put out without much damage.

Mr. and Mrs. Fernald Machain of Oak street led the grand march of a French-Canadian society ball in Paul Revere hall, Boston, Monday evening. Mr. Machain was chairman of the entertainment committee in charge of the event.

SCHUMANN-HEINK AT SALEM

FAMOUS SINGER AT THE EMPIRE THEATRE, MONDAY, FEB. 3.

What will no doubt prove to be the most important musical event of the year in this section will be the concert given at the Empire theatre in Salem Monday evening, Feb. 3, by Mme. Schumann-Heink assisted by Edward Collins, pianist. In paying tribute to Mme. Schumann-Heink the Bayreuth Festival Book of 1912 said: "Schumann-Heink, the artist—that is all. Without an adjective. Let it be left to the little ones and the mediocrities to trick out and exalt their personalities with decorative words. In the case of Ernestine Schumann-Heink all things are comprehended in one: women, mother, singer, actress—and uniquely great. Great in the sense which is self-operative; self-understood, which by its penissant, convincing naturalness makes superfluous every explanation smacking of school or criticism.

The coming to Salem of this great artist has already aroused unusual interest among the lovers of good music and it is safe to say that there

B. &amp; M. TIME-TABLE CHANGE

Several important changes of time schedules of passenger trains on the Boston & Maine R. R. are announced in the change which will take effect Monday morning, Feb. 10. Several trains on the Gloucester branch will have their time changed, full particulars being obtained from time tables which will be in the hands of all ticket agents about three days prior to the change.

"I don't know whether it is a good thing to encourage women to go into politics or not," said the man with a furrowed brow.

"Surely you do not doubt their capability."

"Not in the least. But think of the appalling sums that will change hands if they got travelling hats on elections."—Washington Star.

REV. WM. H. RIDER, D. D. RESIGNS

After serving as pastor of the Independent Christian (Universalist) church in Gloucester for 30 years, Rev. William H. Rider, D. D., tendered his resignation to the members of the parish at last Sunday's service. His action in severing his pastorate came as a total surprise to the members of his church and a general regret was felt that he had decided to give up active work in Gloucester. His resignation has been accepted, however, and a reception planned to honor his work.

Dr. Rider has been 45 years in the ministry and is a leader among the Universalist ministers of the present day. He is well known as a man of commanding personality, a masterly orator and a companion whose society is much sought after. He has always taken an active interest in the public affairs of Gloucester, his efforts for civic improvement being evident in many ways. If the Rev. Mr. Rider decides to remove from Gloucester he will be greatly missed by a host of friends outside of his own congregation.

BEVERLY FARMS

The Beverly Farms Athletic club has appointed a baseball committee for the coming season composed of the following fans: Cornelius Shea, Daniel Neville, James E. McDonnell, Lawrence J. Watson, Dr. William J. Lougherty, Augustine Callahan and Benjamin F. Hawkins. This committee will take charge of all matters pertaining to the forming of a baseball team and its management.

Miss Barbara Daniels, who underwent an operation for throat trouble at the Beverly hospital last week, has been quite ill, but is now much improved.

Beverly Farms people will be sorry to hear of the death of Mrs. Thomas Callahan (nee Quigley) who passed away last Friday at Concord, N. H. For several years, up to two years ago, she lived in the Linehan house on West street and was beloved by all who knew her. A husband and five small children survive her. Interment was at St. Mary's cemetery, Montserrat.

The building on Oak street, next to Connolly Bros' office, is being fitted up as a shop for Wilbur J. Pierce, the plumber, who expects to move from West street about Mar. 1. Mr. Pierce is adding to the scope of his business somewhat in that he is now prepared to do metal and furnace work, stove repairs, etc., in addition to his regular heating and plumbing business.

A former Beverly Farms resident, now living in one of the western states, has subscribed to the Breeze this week, in order to keep in touch with affairs at home. The suggestion is obvious,—if you want to make an appropriate gift to some distant friend, send the Breeze to him or her for a year. Only $2.00.

Guest (to head-waiter): "Is your name 'Tide'?" Waiter: "No, sir," Guest: "Or 'Time'?" Waiter: "Not at all." Guest: "Well, it ought to be one of them. You wait on no man."

THE LINCOLN MEMORIAL

Senator Root's exposition of the Gettysburg highway as a memorial to Lincoln came as a surprise to those in the House who thought they would get their pet measure through without effective opposition. The audacity of the scheme to make "business good for the road houses" which would be established along such a speedway is almost beyond comprehension, when it is realized that the opposing members claim to be inspired by "high and artistic motives."

Those in opposition to the plan of a memorial on the bank of the Potomac claim that "it is too much like a Greek temple and not distinctly American." They also are very frank in their offer of a "grand memorial highway." It is a pity that someone cannot invent a new type of American architecture to please these members.

The Greek model which has been made of the proposed memorial is pronounced by experts to be the most perfect kind of memorial to the great American. There is no doubt as to the permanency of such a structure, while the highway proposed would probably develop exactly as Senator Root has prophesized. As an improvement the road might be quite proper, but as a national and lasting memorial to Abraham Lincoln its fitness is not visible.

Breeze subscription, $2 a year.

DEDICATION OF MEMORIAL LIBRARY

MT HERMON SCHOOL, NORTHFIELD, WILL DEDICATE BUILDING GIVEN
BY MRS. A. F. SCHAUFFLER

Founder's Day, February fifth, at Mount Hermon Boys' School which Dwight L. Moody founded at Northfield thirty years ago, will be made notable this year on account of the dedication of the beautiful new Schaufler Memorial Library, the gift of Mrs. A. F. Schaufler of New York city, in memory of Rev. William G. Schaufler, D. D., long connected with educational and missionary work in Turkey. The library is a one-story brick building, with Vermont marble trimmings, and Colonial in style. It is semi-fireproof, and its details are all according to the best modern library practices, with steel book stacks in the stack rooms, inlaid cork floors for the sake of quiet, and furnished with substantial oak reading tables, chairs, etc.

Many people are unaware of the tremendous strides which Mount Hermon has made in the past few years in the way of material equipment. As a matter of fact, there has not been a five-year period in the history of the school in which new buildings have not been erected, but the greatest advance has been within the past five years. Holbrook hall, the administration building erected in 1908; West hall, largely the gift of Mrs. William E. Dodge of New York city, where now six hundred students and teachers have their meals, and there is room for two hundred more, first occupied February fifth, 1909; James Memorial Gymnasium, the gift of Mrs. D. Willis James of New York, equipped with modern apparatus, running track, and swimming pool, dedicated June fourth, 1910; Crossley hall, a new building to replace the original destroyed by fire, first occupied September first, 1911, accommodating 320 students and fireproof and modern in its appointments; Ford Cottage, the residence of the principal, the gift of the former students of the school, first occupied April first, 1912. Besides these, a power plant, the gift of Arthur Curtis James of New York, which supplies heat and light to all the school buildings, was installed in 1910. With these new buildings in addition to the thirty other school buildings, and with her excellent laboratories, the school is today, in the matter of equipment, the peer of any secondary school in the country, and is excelled only by the largest colleges and universities. Moreover, if the record her graduates are now making in nearly a hundred colleges and other higher institutions of learning is a criterion, Mount Hermon's scholarship standards are keeping pace with her material improvements.

EDNA GOODRICH AT KEITH'S

Miss Edna Goodrich, the celebrated legitimate star, and one of the handsomest women on the American stage, will make her debut as a vaudeville headliner at B. F. Keith's Theatre next week. For her tour over the B. F. Keith circuit Miss Goodrich has elected to appear in a one-act playlet written especially for her by Claude Gillingwater, and entitled "The Awakening of Minerva." The story of the piece is that of a young artiste who has succeeded in solving the secret of making marble resemble human flesh. He makes a statue of Minerva, and dreams it come to life. The subsequent adventures of the statue form the groundwork for a story of engaging interest, with a touch of comedy. Miss Goodrich appears in the role of Minerva, the Greek beauty who comes to life, and dons some stunning Parisian gowns, to the dismay of all the men she meets, who immediately fall in love with her. Miss Goodrich is surrounded by a splendid company of excellent players. Her engagement is for one week only.

SOCIETY NOTES

"Selwood," the Thomas M. McKee estate at Beverly Farms has been leased for the coming season, through the Boardman agency, to Mr. and Mrs. William Baldwin Miller of Akron, Ohio. They will take occupancy of the house quite early in the season and will remain well into the autumn. Last year the Millers had the Francis I. Amory cottage at Beverly Cove, while the Amorys were in Europe. Mr. Miller is in the rubber business in Akron, being secretary of the Diamond Rubber Co. Mrs. Miller was Miss Louise Beveridge Stevenson before her marriage. There is one daughter, Lysbeth Livingston, twelve years old.

Harcourt Amory and daughter Miss Gertrude Amory of the Pride's Crossing colony, are on one of their travel trips to the West Indies and Panama.

Secretary and Mrs. Meyer have sent out invitations to a reception in honor of the officers of the navy at their Scott circle house, Washington, for the evening of Feb. 28. It will be Mr. Meyer's last reception as a public official in Washington and will close a period of six years' residence in which the Meyers have been social leaders in the capital, and particularly so in official life as members of the cabinet circle.

It was estimated that about 3000 guests attended the reception of President and Mrs. Taft at the White House in Washington, Tuesday night, given especially in honor of the Army and Navy and the final official entertainment under the present executive administration. The reception line was headed by Admiral George Dewey and Lieut. Gen. Nelson A. Miles, retired, and senior officers of the army. These two and other ranking officers of the Army and Navy were invited to the Blue Room along with Secretary of War Stimson and Secretary of the Navy Meyer. All officers of the Army and Navy, Marine Corps and revenue cutter service stationed in and about Washington, were the honor guests. The guests were in the uniforms of their rank.

SOCIETY NOTES

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Henry Appleton of Marlboro street, Boston, have leased the Knowlton cottage in West street, Beverly Farms, occupied for so many years by the late S. B. Dana. Mr. Appleton and his bride occupied this house last season, and it is understood they have now taken a three-year lease of it.

Miss Dorothy Jordan gave an informal dance Tuesday evening in the rehearsal room of the Boston Opera house. The few guests appeared in fancy costumes.

♦ ♦ ♦

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Tucker of Manchester, who are spending the winter at the Plaza in New York, entertained friends at dinner Sunday evening.

♦ ♦ ♦

Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Richardson of the Magnolia colony were registered at Magnolia Inn, Magnolia, over the week-end. The Inn is open all winter for the accommodation of guests and quite frequently summer visitors are down for a day or two to enjoy the winter weather.

♦ ♦ ♦

The Count and Countess de Chambrun entertained a breakfast company Sunday, at their Washington residence, complimentary to the Misses Loring of Pride's Crossing who have been guests of Mrs. Levi Z. Leiter for a week.

The twenty-first anniversary horse show of the New Riding club, Boston, took place Saturday afternoon. The feature event was the hurdle exhibition for hunters. The whirlwind jumps of Miss Emma Mandell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Mandell of the Beverly Cove summer colony, who rode six different horses, was the sensation of the day. She captured the red ribbon with Collette, and her diminutive brother, Master Tom Mandell, took third place with her horse First Mate. The first ribbon in this event was taken by Miss Alice Thordike, riding Miss Amy Peabody's gelding, Keswick. Miss Eleanor Saltonstall and her brother Richard were the heaviest prize winners with their geldings, Xanthos and Checkers.

SOCIETY NOTES

Mr. and Mrs. John S. Curtis, who have kept their house at Beverly Farms open all winter, left the North Shore Wednesday for Fernandina, Fla., where they plan to spend the next six weeks. There is quite a colony of North Shore people at Fernandina this winter. This is one of the numerous islands along the Florida coast, just a short distance from the mainland. It is owned almost entirely by the Carnegies. Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, 2d, always go there after closing their house at Manchester. They are followed shortly after by Mrs. Carnegie's sister, Mrs. Walter J. Mitchell and Mr. Mitchell. For the last year or so, their daughter, Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw, 2d, and family, have been there for part of the winter, and this winter Mr. Shaw's mother, Mrs. John S. Curtis and Mr. Curtis are to spend part of the season there.

Mrs. S. Parkman Blake and her daughter, Miss Marian L. Blake, of Boston and West Manchester, are going South, with Augusta, Ga., as their objective point. They are to remain there for the next two months or more.

A summer or two ago F. K. M. Rehn of New York city and Magnolia painted one of his most important marines in the vicinity of Rafe's Chasm, Magnolia entitled "In the Glittering Moonlight." This picture has had many enthusiastic admirers. Those who recall having seen it last summer in his Magnolia studio may be interested to know that it has been recently acquired by the Corcoran Art Gallery of Washington, D. C., for its permanent collection.

A TENDER POINT

"What got you into trouble with this policeman?" demanded the New York judge.

"Just trying to ask him a civil question, your honor," said the visitor, "nothing more."

"What was that question?"

"I just asked him when the next official murder would be pulled off."—Kansas City Journal.

Real Estate and Improvements ... Up and Down the North Shore ...

It is understood that the property of Messrs. Wyatt and Trowt on Hart street, Beverly Farms, consisting of quite an area of land and a barn, was sold this week to an agent acting for the present holder of nearby property. This property is located on the Beverly Farms-Wenham road.

Ground has been broken and considerable stonework has already been laid up for a large green house for Quincy A. Shaw at Pride's Crossing, located on land adjoining Hale street and near the entrance to the H. C. Frick estate.

BOSTON THEATRE

It happens often that when a book has been dramatized, its presentation on the stage causes the audience to look with interest at the name of the author and inquire, "What else has he written?" and there follows a wild demand for his books that makes his popularity look like a contagion. This will not be the case with "The Garden of Allah." "Who," the audience will ask, "is the great genius that saw the possibilities for such an amazing spectacular production in such a book? Who read this book and saw between the lines the opportunity for producing the greatest scenic play the stage has ever known?" "The Garden of Allah" as a book, is the foundation on which has been built a play that every one should see, and when they see it, they will go away marveling at the wonderful edifice some architect of the spectacular has erected. It is a series of marvelous visions, the like of which has never been produced on any stage.

Those who see "The Garden of Allah" at the Boston Theatre and this will include all theatregoers, will carry away with them scenes of stretches of the desert, of sand storms, of the life of the mysterious Arab, and, above all, a longing to some day go there and learn of the spell of the Sahara for one's self.

The horny-handed son of toil who had just inherited a fortune went to see a manicure.

"Can you do anything with these ma'am?" he asked, exhibiting his hands.

"Yes, sir," she said, "after you've gone to a surgeon and had those cracks stitched up. I don't meddle with jobs that belong to the regular practitioners."—Tit-Bits.

"Brother Hardesty, can't you make your contribution for the education of the heathen a little larger than usual this year?"

"Dr. Goodman, I'm more than doubling it; I have just started that youngest boy of mine to college."

"My favorite football team," complained the gridiron enthusiast, "is losing right along this season."

"Well," said the baseball enthusiast, "it is always better to do your losing early in the season."

"I know that axiom goes good in baseball, but we've got such a darn short season."

Modern young men court in haste and repent at leisure.

After an illness of two weeks with pneumonia, Mrs. Carl Dreyfus a daughter of A. Shuman, died Sunday at the winter home of her father, 90 Commonwealth avenue, Boston. She was 35 years old and since her marriage in 1899 she and her husband had made their home with Mr. Shuman at Beverly Cove summers, at Boston during the winter.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE

So many would-be patrons could not gain admittance to the Boston Opera House when Mme. Schumann-Heink sang there in "Il Trovatore" a week ago, that in response to many requests and in deference to out of town opera-goers who find it more more convenient to attend an afternoon performance, Director Russell has arranged to have the great contralto sing once more at a special matinee on Wednesday, Feb. 12. (Lincoln's birthday). "Haensel und Gretel," one of the most popular operas in the repertory will be the bill and Mme. Schumann-Heink will take the part of the Witch, in which she is inimitable.

"Djamileh" (pronounced Zham-ee-lay) a one-act opera by Bizet will be sung for the first time in America on Friday night and will be the outstanding novelty in the week's repertory.

Mme. Weingartner-Marcel will create the role of Djamileh, a slave and associated with her will be Leon Laffitte, the noted French tenor, Ernesto Giaccone and Edward Bourquin. There will be a ballet and solo dance as well. Mr. Weingartner will conduct.

As the opera is short it will be followed by "I Pagliacci," in which Mme. Melis will sing Nedda.

On Monday evening "Tristan und Isolde" will be given its last performance under Mr. Weingartner's baton.

On Wednesday evening and again on Saturday afternoon will come repetitions of Mozart's melodious "Don Giovanni" which has been the artistic success of the season. On both occasions the same great all-star cast will appear.

On Saturday evening there will be another special Weingartner performance when popular prices will prevail in the balconies. "Otello," Verdi's masterpiece will be sung.

The orchestral concert on Sunday afternoon again will enlist the entire orchestra under the leadership of Mr. Weingartner.

When the wine enters the secret goes out.

BELASCO PLAY AT SALEM

"THE WOMAN", NOW PLAYING AT PARK THEATRE, BOSTON, BILLED AT EMPIRE THEATRE

What is termed by some the best play that has ever left the workshop of the famous David Belasco, "The Woman," is to appear shortly at the Empire Theatre, Salem. It is now enjoying a good run at the Park Theatre in Boston, playing to crowded houses eight times a week. "The Woman" is a strong drama based on political intrigue in Washington, D. C. and with a capable company of players, is easily one of the best attractions that will visit Salem this season. The Salem engagement will be directly after the company closes its run in the Hub.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE

Miss Billie Burke has made a tremendous hit in "The Mind the Paint Girl" at the Hollis Street Theatre, Boston. The newspapers are full of her praises and the public is flocking to see her.

The play is by Sir Arthur Pinero, one of the greatest dramatists of the day, and it tells an extremely interesting story of the private life of a young actress in London. The girl—Lily Parradell—has forced her way from the humblest origin to a foremost place on the stage. When the play begins she is the principal girl at the Pandora Theatre, a playhouse devoted to musical comedy. She is pretty, generous, mercenary, quick-tempered, forgiving, self-sacrificing—just a girl, like thousands of others. In the play she is forced to choose between two men—one of them a lord. Of course, this being a pleasant play, she gets the man she really loves and everybody is satisfied—except the other fellow and, as Lily's H-less old mother sagely remarks, "E'll get 'is reward 'erafter."

The engagement at the Hollis which begun on Monday evening last—is for three weeks, with matinees as usual on Wednesday and Saturdays, including one on February 22.

If you want to get a local livery stable keeper angry ask him if he wants to buy a rooster. Recently this knight of the whip and harness thought that he would enter the business of raising hen fruit. Being of a frugal disposition, he thought that he might partially solve the question of the high cost of living with his scheme, so he purchased a rooster and some hens whose pedigrees would perhaps bear inspection. After a while most of his hens died, and when he blustered around and tried to separate the diseased hens from the rest of the hen family, he made such a commotion that his rooster dropped dead. Just ask him if he wants to buy a rooster. You are apt to get a very cordial reception. He will tell you where you can spend the rest of the winter.

The smoldering anger and a growing sense of fairness combined at length in the determination to take her brother and his wife to task for the morning's outrage, let the consequences be what they might. When she joined the people downstairs before dinner there was a red spot in each cheek and a steady look in her eyes that caused the duke to neglect woefully the conversation he was carrying on with Mrs. Odwell.

Dinner was delayed for nearly half an hour while four of the guests finished their "rubber." Penelope observed that the party displayed varying emotions. It afterward transpired that the hunters had spent most of the afternoon in her ladyship's distant lodge playing bridge for rather high stakes. Little Miss Folsom was pitifully unresponsive to the mirth of Mr. Odwell. She could ill afford to lose $600. Lady Bazelhurst was in a frightful mood. Her guests had so far forgotten themselves as to win more than $1,000 of the Banks legacy, and she was not a cheerful loser, especially as his lordship had dropped an additional $500. The winners were riotously happy. They had found the sport glorious. An observer given to deductions might have noticed that half of the diners were immoderately hilarious, the other half studiously polite.

Lord Bazelhurst wore a hunted look and drank more than one or two highballs. From time to time he cast furtive glances at his wife. He laughed frequently at the wrong time and mirthlessly.

"He's got something on his mind," whispered Odwell in comment.

"Yes; he always laughs when there is anything on his mind," replied Mrs. De Peyton. "That's the way he gets it off."

After dinner no one proposed cards. The party edged off into twos and threes and explained how luck had been with or against them. Penelope, who could not afford to play for stakes and had the courage to say so, sat back and listened to the conversation of her brother and the group around him. The duke was holding forth on the superiority of the Chinese over the Japanese as servants, and Bazelhurst was loudly defending the Japanese navy.

"Hang it all, Barminster, the Japs could eat 'em up!" he proclaimed. "Couldn't they?" to the crowd.

"I'm talking about servants, Cecil," observed the duke.

"And shoot? Why, they're the greatest gunners in the world. By Jove, I read somewhere the other day that they had hit what they shot at 3,000,000 times out of—or, let me see, was it the Prussians who fired 3,000,000 rounds and"—

Penelope Started and Flushed.

"Oh, let's change the subject," said the duke in disgust. "What's become of that Shaw fellow?" Penelope started and flushed, much to her chagrin. At the sound of Shaw's name Lady Bazelhurst, who was passing with the count, stopped so abruptly that her companion took half a dozen paces without her.

"Shaw? By Jove, do you know I'd completely forgotten that fellow," exclaimed Cecil.

"I thought you were going to shoot him or shoot at him or something like that. Can't you get him in range?"

"Oh, I wasn't really in earnest about that, Barminster. You know we couldn't shoot at a fellow for such a thing"—

"Nonsense, Cecil," said his wife. "You shoot poachers in England."

"But this fellow isn't a poacher. He's a—a gentleman, I daresay—in some respects—not all, of course, my dear,

"Gentleman? Ridiculous!" scoffed his wife.

"I—yes, quite right—a ridiculous gentleman, of course. Ha, ha! Isn't he, Barminster? But with all that, you know, I couldn't have Tompkins shoot him. He asked me the other day if he should take a shot at Shaw's legs, and I told him not to do anything so absurd." Penelope's heart swelled with relief, and for the first time that evening she looked upon her brother with something like sisterly regard.

"It didn't matter, however," said Lady Evelyn sharply. "I gave him instructions yesterday to shoot any trespasser from that side of the line. I can't see that we owe Mr. Shaw any especial consideration. He has insulted and ignored me at every opportunity. Why should he be permitted to trespass more than any other common lawbreaker? If he courts a charge of birdshot he should not expect to escape scot free. Birdshot wouldn't kill a man, you know, but it would"—

But Penelope could restrain herself no longer. The heartlessness of her sister-in-law overcame her prudence, and she interrupted the scornful mistress of the house, her eyes blazing, but her voice under perfect control. Her tall young figure was tense, and her fingers clasped the back of Miss Folsom's chair rather rigidly.

"I suppose you know what happened this morning," she said, with such apparent restraint that every one looked at her expectantly.

"Do you mean in connection with Mr.—with Jack the Giant Killer?" asked her ladyship, her eyes brightening.

"Some one of your servants shot him this morning," said Penelope, with great distinctness. There was breathless silence in the room.

"Shot him?" gasped Lord Bazelhurst, his thin red face going very white.

"Not—not fatally?" exclaimed Evelyn, aghast in spite of herself.

"No. The instructions were carried out. His wound in the arm is trifling. But the coward was not so generous when it came to the life of his innocent, harmless dog. He killed the poor thing. Evelyn, it's—it's like murder!"

"Oh," cried her ladyship, relieved.

"He killed the dog. I daresay Mr. Shaw has come to realize at last that we are earnest in this. Of course I am glad that the man is not badly hurt. Still, a few shot in the arm will hardly keep him in bounds. His legs were intended," she laughed lightly. "What miserable aim Tompkins must take."

"He's a bit off in his physiology, my dear," said Cecil, with a nervous attempt at humor. He did not like the expression in his sister's face. Somehow, he was ashamed.

"Oh, it's bad enough," said Penelope. "It was his left arm—the upper arm, too. I think the aim was rather good."

"Pray, how do you know all of this, Penelope?" asked her ladyship, lifting her eyebrows. "I've heard that you see Mr. Shaw occasionally, but you can't be his physician, I'm sure."

Penelope flushed to the roots of her hair, but suppressed the retort which would have been in keeping with the provocation.

"Oh, dear, no!" she replied. "I'm too soft hearted to be a physician. I saw Mr. Shaw just after the—ah—the accident."

"You saw Saw—I mean you saw Shaw?" gasped Bazelhurst.

"She sees him frequently, Cecil. It was not at all unusual that she should have seen him today. I daresay he waited to show you his wound before going to a surgeon."

Penelope could not resist the temptation to invent a story befitting the moment. Assuming a look of concern, she turned to her brother and said: "He is coming to see you about it tomorrow, and he is coming armed to the teeth, attended by a large party of friends. Mr. Shaw says he will have satisfaction for the death of that dog if he has to shoot everybody on the place."

"Good Lord!" cried the duke. There was instant excitement. "I believe the wretch will do it too."

"Oh, I say, Bazelhurst, settle with him for the dog," said De Peyton nervously. He looked at his watch and then at his wife. The entire party now was listening to the principal speakers.

"Nonsense!" exclaimed Lady Evelyn. "He won't come. It's all bluster. Don't let it frighten you, Cecil. I know the manner of man."

"I wish you could have seen him this morning," murmured Penelope, thoroughly enjoying the unexpected situation. Her conscience was not troubled by the prevarication.

"By Jove, I think it would be wise to send over and find out what he valued the brute at," said Cecil, mopping his brow.

"Good! We'll send Penelope to act as ambassador," said her ladyship. "She seems to be on friendly terms with the enemy."

"To act as ambassador from Cowardice Court?" questioned Penelope loftily, yet with cutting significance. "No, I thank you. I decline the honor. Besides," with a reflective frown, "I don't believe it's diplomacy he's after."

"I say, what the deuce do you suppose the confounded savage has in mind?" exclaimed the duke. "I've heard of the way these cowboys settle their affairs. You don't imagine"—and he paused significantly.

"It looks like it's going to be a rather disagreeable affair," said De Peyton sourly.

"Good heavens! What are we to do if he comes here with a lot of desperadoes and begins to shoot?" cried Mrs. Odwell, genuinely alarmed. "I've read so much of these awful mountain feuds."

"Don't be alarmed. Lord Bazelhurst will attend to the gentleman," said Lady Evelyn blandly. His lordship's monocle clattered down and the ice rattled sharply in his glass.

"To—to be sure," he agreed. "Don't be in the least worried. I'll attend to the upstart. What time's he coming, Pen?"

A door banged noisily near by, and every one jumped as though a gun had been fired. While the "Ohs!" were still struggling from their lips Hodder, the butler, came into the room, doing his best to retain his composure under what seemed to be trying circumstances.

"What is it, Hodder?" demanded her ladyship.

"The cook, your ladyship. She's fallen downstairs and broken her leg," announced Hodder. He didn't betray it, but he must have been tremendously surprised by the sigh of relief that went up on all sides. Lord Bazelhurst went so far as to laugh.

"Ha, ha! Is that all?"

"Oh, dear, I'm so glad!" cried Miss Folsom impulsively. "I was frightened half to death. It might have been Mr."—

"Don't be silly, Rose," said Lady Bazelhurst. "Where is she, Hodder?"

"In the laundry, your ladyship. There are two fractures."

"By Jove, two legs instead of one, then. Worse than I thought," cried Bazelhurst, draining his glass.

"Send at once for a doctor, Hodder, and take her to her room. Isn't it annoying?" said her ladyship. "It's so difficult to keep a cook in the mountains."

"Don't see how she can get away without legs," observed De Peyton.

"I'll come with you, Hodder. Perhaps I can do something for her," said Penelope, following the butler from the room.

"Don't take too many patients on your hands, my dear," called the mistress, with a shrill laugh.

"Yes. Remember tomorrow," added the duke. Then suddenly, "I believe I'll lend a hand." He hurried after Penelope rather actively for him.

CHAPTER V.

"I shall go tonight."

LORD BAZELHURST visited his wife's room later in the night, called there by a peremptory summons. Cecil had been taking time by the forelock in anticipation of Shaw's descent in the morning and was inclined to jocundity.

"Cecil, what do you think of Penelope's attitude toward Mr. Shaw?" she asked, turning away from the window which looked out over the night in the direction of Shaw's place.

"I didn't know she had an attitude," replied he, trying to focus his wavering gaze upon her.

"She meets him clandestinely and she supports him openly. Isn't that an attitude, or are you too drunk to see it?"

"My dear, remember you are speaking of my sister," he said with fine dignity but little discrimination. Besides, I am not too drunk. I do see it. It's a damned annoying attitude. She's a traitor, un'stand me? A trait-to-tor. I intend to speak to her about it."

"It is better that you should do it," said his wife. "I am afraid I could not control my temper."

"Penelope's a disgrace—an absolute disgrace. How many legs did Hodder say she'd—she'd broken?"

"Oh, you're disgusting!" cried Lady Evelyn. "Go to bed! I thought I could talk to you tonight, but I can't. You scarcely can stand up."

"Now, Evelyn, you do me injustice. I'm only holding to this chair to keep it from moving 'round the room. See that? Course I c'n stan' up!" he cried triumphantly.

"I am utterly disgusted with you. Oh, for a man! A man with real blood in his veins, a man who could do something besides eat and drink at my cost. I pay your debts, clothe you, feed you—house your ungrateful sister—and what do I get in return? This!"

Lord Bazelhurst's eyes steadied beneath this unexpected assault, his legs stiffened, his shoulders squared themselves in a pitiful attempt at dignity.

"Lady Bazelhurst, you—you"—and then he collapsed into the chair, bursting into maudlin tears. She stood over by the dressing table and looked pitilessly upon the weak creature whose hiccupping sobs filled the room. Her color was high, her breathing heavy.

There came a knock at the door, but she did not respond. Then the door opened quietly and Penelope entered the room, resolutely, fearlessly. Evelyn turned her eyes upon the intruder and stared for a moment.

"Did you knock?" she asked at last.

"Yes. You did not answer."

"Wasn't that sufficient?"

"Not tonight, Evelyn. I came to have it out with you and Cecil. Where is he?"

"There!"

"Asleep?" with a look of amazement.

"I hope not. I should dislike having to call the servants to carry him to his room."

"I see. Poor old chap!" She went over and shook him by the shoulder. He sat up and stared at her blankly through his drenched eyes. Then, as if the occasion called for a supreme effort, he tried to rise, ashamed that his sister should have found him in his present condition. "Don't get up, Cecil. Wait a bit and I'll go to your room with you."

"What have you to say to me, Penelope?" demanded Evelyn, a green light in her eyes.

"I can wait. I prefer to have Cecil—understand," she said bitterly.

"If it's about our affair with Shaw it won't make any difference whether Cecil understands or not. Has your friend asked you to plead for him?"

"Does he expect me to take him up on your account and have him here?"

THE U. S. M. C. CASE

The decision of the United States Supreme Court this week that the United Shoe Machinery Co. was not in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law lends a hopeful view to the case of the Beverly concern. The United Shoe will be obliged, however, to stand trial on the remaining indictment which affects the "tying" clauses. The clause in question refers to the charge that the Beverly concern tied up the manufacture of various shoe machines in such a way that it constituted a monopoly and thereby eliminated competition.

The result of the trial of the company on this last indictment is doubtful, but the judgment of the Supreme Court on the other indictment would indicate that the charge on the one remaining would not be sustained.

Besides adding an entirely new scope to the Sherman anti-trust law and drawing a distinct line between size and competition in such controversies, the decision of the Supreme Court will give an added impetus to the business at the plant of the United Shoe in Beverly. For some time business at the plant has been exceedingly dull, orders of any size having been postponed in their completion. As a result hundreds of men were thrown out of employment at the beginning of the suit against the company. Now, with the partial settling of the suits by the government, it is expected that business will be resumed at the plant with greater vigor than ever. Now that the doubtful and most important points in the case have been settled by the court, there will be no need of even a temporary cessation of business at the plant, and a few weeks will probably see a full resumption of active industry. The fact that things have been satisfactorily settled will mean much for Beverly and the surrounding cities and towns, from which hundreds of men have sought employment at the United Shoe Company plant.

THE GARMENT WORKERS' STRIKE

In this period of social unrest and the retrogression of humanitarian measures by employers of labor, strikes are almost a daily occurrence. The latest strike to come to the attention of the public, and one that is indeed worthy in its object, is that of the 6000 garment workers of Boston, who have left their establishments as a protest in conjunction with the strike in New York of the workers in the same trade.

Higher wages and better working conditions quite naturally form the bones of contention which the workers are fighting out with their employers, and if some of the reports of the garment workers in Boston and New York are true, they should receive both. It is indeed appalling when one considers that in many cases hundreds of girls and young women work sixteen hours a day for a weekly wage that hardly provides proper nourishment and a place to call a home. Conditions in the majority of the 180 shops and clothing establishments in Boston are so bad as to promote disease and prevent the workers from giving their employers a full return for their labors.

With the joint strike of the Boston and New York workers, however, the strikers bid fair to make considerable progress in their desires, for the reason that the business will be completely tied up and the expert help necessary to the carrying on of the business cannot be obtained in such large numbers on short notice.

GETTING WORSE

The pardon issue is one that has been giving the people considerable thought of late in this commonwealth, and if the movement is not soon checked it promises to run mad. For the past two years the number of pardons granted has exceeded any similar period in the history of the state.

Too much time is wasted in harping on capital punishment and not enough in trying to stop the bad habit of promiscuously granting pardons. And one thing that makes a bad matter worse is the excuse that is now invariably set up that the prisoner is sick and of course he must be pardoned. What are prison hospitals for? Are they not as good as those outside our houses of correction? Besides casting a slur on the hospital surgeon and his facilities, the sick plea raised by pardon howlers makes an excuse that is not valid.

After the ice king, Morse, buncoed the physicians and fooled President Taft it seemed that there would be an extended cessation of pardon granting on the plea of sickness, but it has broken out with vigor in this state, and all that is needed is a little influence and money to expend to gain liberty after committing a capital crime.

SPORTING INSTINCT WORLD WIDE

What is probably the most noticeable instinct common to all nations is the sporting instinct. The Olympic games provides an instance where representatives of all the countries of the world meet on a common basis and contested in feats of physical prowess and agility. A sound contention of Professor James that some other outlet would have to be found for the immense energy which went to prepare for war would lead one to believe that the world of sports provides the opportunity to get away from warring tendencies, to obtain relief from the monotonies of the commercial world, and in a sense, to take in the greater proportion of the whole human race.

The playground has been the means of providing this relief from waste physical expenditure and its results have been universal. There is such an organized method of industry and commercialism all over the world today that there should be some equally spontaneous and universally popular relief from the ordinary daily grind common to the majority of humanity. The world of sports provides this outlet for everyone of energetic nature and its organizations should increase so as to be enjoyed by all.

Motion picture managers are anxious to get a bill through the Legislature which will allow them to exhibit continuous reels of pictures for one hour. Frequenters of motion picture houses would hardly welcome such an innovation and the strain on the eyes of a spectator for an hour at a time would seem unwise. At present there is a twenty-minute limit on motion picture films, and if the public's views on the matter were concerned it would probably be found that they would not care to ruin their eyesight by watching a continuous motion picture exhibition of sixty minutes in length.

If the Motor Boat Muffling association of this state have their way the North and South shores will no longer be bothered with offenders of the muffling law. The association is now seeking to have a law passed over the one now on the state books making the violation of the law punishable by a fine of not over twenty-five dollars.

CANDIDATE FOR WATER BOARD

Manchester, Feb. 5th, 1913.
To the Citizens of Manchester:

Gentlemen:—In coming forward as a candidate for the Water Board, I do so at the solicitation of several citizens. My experience in this line of work, appertaining to the Water Department, qualifies me to serve on the board in a practical and business-like manner and for the best interests of the town, I feel. I ask for the hearty support of the citizens at the polls for election to the Board for the ensuing term.

Respectfully yours,

JOHN F. SCOTT.

The more pains you take with your eating the fewer you will have afterwards.

The Political Pot

Everybody is wondering just what made the Political Pot "bust." That it did meet such a fate everybody admits, and now some of the political doctors are trying to pick up the broken parts and put them together again. They have until Monday noon, March 3d, to do so,—three weeks from next Monday. From our own observations we think it is a hopeless job, this trying to patch things up. The people are awake to the need of a change.

$ ? $

We are wondering, like others, to just what extent the town horses were used the last year in private work. It is against the law to use municipal equipment for private purposes, yet we notice the highway department sent a bill last week for work done last spring in spreading crushed stone on a private avenue, and the bill was paid last Friday.

$ & $

If the writer of the communication on dredging, received this week from Boston, will sign his name to the same and will tone it down somewhat we may consider printing it in our next issue. We do not care to take the responsibility of such articles.

$ & $

Several candidates have taken out papers this week, which puts a more definite touch on the coming town election. Nathan P. Meldrum has papers out for the office of selectman, and also for assessor for three years. John Scott, the plumber, has papers out for the water board for three years. George E. Hildreth is also a candidate for re-election.

x—x

George R. Dean has stated definitely that he will be a candidate for selectman, and from the expressions of opinion we hear his changes look extremely good. Mr. Dean has been connected with Smith's Express Co for the last ten years.

x—s

It is reported that Allen S. Peabody will also be a candidate for the board of selectmen.

The painters' union had a rabbit stew at their headquarters Monday night, with Charles O. Howe as "chef."

The Manchester Launch club is trying to arrange a pool tournament with The Manchester club. The latter will consider the matter at its meeting to-night.

Supt. of Streets Crombie informs us that up to the present time his department has been called upon to spend less money for cleaning away snow this winter than any year for a great many years. While nearly half of the regular appropriation of $2,000 was spent last winter after the fiscal year closed on Feb. 1, not more than $100 had been spent this winter up to Monday's storm. The only snow of the winter previous to this week came during the Christmas holidays.

Miss Sarah Sjolund left this morning for Chicago to join her sister Miss Agnes Sjolund, and she plans to make her home in that city for the present, at least. Through the influence of Mrs. Russell Tyson of the Manchester summer colony Miss Sjolund will do sewing in private families. She is the oldest of the four motherless girls—the youngest of whom, Adele, died last fall in Chicago shortly after she took up training for a nurse in the same hospital where Miss Agnes Sjolund and Miss Mabel Lodge have been for the last three years. Her many friends wish her every success and happiness in her new undertaking.

Nearly a full quota of its members were out Monday night to the Dutch Supper and entertainment of the Manchester club, there being about 60 of the 75 members present. The evening had been arranged in place of the annual banquet of the club. A splendid entertainment was furnished by a reader and impersonator, and a baritone soloist. A piano demonstrator was also present and performed some stunts on the piano, as well as furnishing the music for a good sing previous to the supper. The Dutch supper proved a successful innovation. An efficient committee standing on one side of a long table in the card room doled out a dish of eatables from a varied assortment of very palatable dishes.

Mrs. Harlan Preston and family plan to move to Beverly next Monday, where Mrs. Preston recently bought a house. Her house on Brook street was sold a few weeks ago to Michael Kelliher.

Miss Mabel W. Lodge plans to leave Chicago for home next week, for a three or four months' rest before taking up her work again, training for a nurse. She was recently operated upon and is now convalescing.

Mrs. T. W. Long's invitation dancing party in the Town hall Monday evening was one of the prettiest parties of the winter and was largely attended, despite the storm. It was the last party previous to the Lenten season. A number came from Beverly Farms, Magnolia and Gloucester. The matrons were Mrs. Frank G. Cheever, Mrs. Wm. W. Joseph and Miss Ruth Blaisdell. The decorations were extremely pretty. The chandeliers were festooned in green boughs, the lights being covered with red crepe paper. The end of the hall where the matrons sat was a bower of flowers and decorations. Scores of pretty red tulips in a bed of artificial grass made a very pretty setting. A border of artificial rhododendrons surrounded the entire hall. During the intermission dainty refreshments were served. A six-piece orchestra furnished the music. The dance order contained sixteen numbers.

We read in the Springfield papers occasionally of Prof. W. S. C. Russell, who formerly was principal of the Story High school of this town. Mr. Russell is at the head of the science department of the Springfield High school. He has been quite successful with his lectures on Iceland, his study of that country forming some valuable data on the geological features of the country. Mrs. Russell, who accompanied her husband on his last trip, has also been lecturing on Iceland this winter. Prof. Russell plans another trip to Iceland next summer, and as before, will accompany an exploration party from England as geologist. Mrs. Russell plans to spend the summer in study in Southern France. Stanton Russell, who was a mere baby when he left here, is now on his second year in the Springfield High school, and is preparing for college.

ANNUAL GUEST NIGHT

MANCHESTER WOMAN'S CLUB HOLDS SUCCESSFUL FUNCTION IN TOWN HALL

The annual guest night of the Manchester Woman's club held in the Town hall, Wednesday evening added another to the successful occasions which have brought together such a representative gathering of the townspeople. It was the fifth such event, held under the auspices of the club, and in many respects it was the most successful.

Nearly two hundred people were present—members of the club and their guests. Shortly before eight Mrs. D. T. Beaton, the president, stepped upon the platform and extended words of welcome, well chosen. After giving notice of two important meetings in which the club members would be interested, to be held in Boston, she announced as the entertainers of the evening the University Male Quartet of Boston, assisted by a reader, Miss Edith Barnes Arey.

The quartet has been heard in Manchester before, being here four years ago at the annual guest night of the Woman's club. They sang in much favor again this year and were warmly applauded after each number.

Their first number was "When the Corn is Waving." Miss Arey then recited Richard Harding Davis' one-act playlet "Miss Civilization," in which she impressed her hearers by her unusual talent. The quartet followed with another selection, "On the Sea," by Dudley Buck, and as an encore they sang that catchy melody "Brotha Noah."

A baritone solo "On the Road to Mandalay" by Arthur K. Bayley of the quartet was rendered with much expression. As an encore Mr. Bayley sang "Absence." The quartet followed with a medley of southern tunes. Miss Arey's second reading, "The Arnspicker Chickens" was no less effectively given than her first. She was called back for an encore, when she recited a cute little poem by Edmund Vance Cook, entitled "The Sin of the Coppenter." The quartet then rendered "Honey I Wants Yer Now," and was followed by Leon E. Baldwin, tenor, who sang "Maid of Malabar." The quartet sang "Sunset," and as an encore "Three Little Piggies." Miss Arey's closing number was an Irish monolog, "An Irish Mother," which made a great hit. The quartet closed with Buck's "Good Night."

The entertainment lasted a little over an hour and a half. Tables in the rear of the hall were laden with food—salads, croquets, ices, etc., and the gentlemen assisted in serving the ladies. Schlehuder of Lynn was the caterer. Mrs. Geo. S. Sinnicks and Mrs. Ellery H. Rogers poured coffee.

The committee in charge of the affair was the reception and hospitality committees of the club, Mrs. Fred J. Merrill being chairman of the latter, and Mrs. Geo. W. Blaisdell of the former. The ushers also assisted,—Mrs. Ellery H. Rogers, (chairman), Mrs. M. E. Gorman, Mrs. G. A. Knoerr, Mrs. John C. Mackin and Mrs. Frank G. Cheever.

Letters remaining unclaimed at the Manchester P. O. for week ending Feb. 1, 1913. David Bates, Thomas I. Briggs, A. Grenier, Mrs. Annie Gilvey, Abe White.—S. L. Wheaton, P. M.

George Killam had a narrow escape from burning alive on Saturday last when his clothing took fire from a lighted torch. He had been working on a car at the building off Central street used by Kenneth Walcott as a garage and his clothing was somewhat soaked with oil. Without any warning whatever, his clothing blazed up. He saw that it was useless to fight the fire without help so he jumped overboard drowning out the flames. It was a very narrow escape.

REBEKAH GARDEN PARTY

Plans are progressing for the Rebekah Garden party, to be held in the Town hall, Manchester, on the evenings of Feb. 20, 21 and 22, and a Sunlight party on the afternoon of the 22d. The various committees are working with a will and hope to make the affair a success financially and socially.

One feature of the first evening will be the auctioning off of a very pretty handkerchief just received from Mrs. Taft, wife of the President. This will be sold to the highest bidder, instead of being placed on sale at one of the booths, with other gifts and articles.

The entertainment feature of the first evening will be a cantata, "The Living Flowers," given by a group of young men and women from Rockport. On the evening of the 21st the entertainment feature will be a reader from Boston, with other attractions. On the afternoon of the 22d from 2.30 to 5 there will be a Sunlight Party especially for the children. There will be an entertainment after which the children will dance. A pretty souvenir will be given each child who attends.

Admission each evening will be 10 cents; afternoon 10 cents. Mrs. Flora S. Hersey is chairman of the committee in charge.

Miss Mary Morley and Miss Esther Northrup of the Story High school, are recovering from the mumps.

Miss Molly McNeary, the clerk at Miss E. A. Lethbridge's dry goods store, is enjoying a few weeks' vacation, part of which she is spending with relatives in Neponset and part with Mr. and Mrs. William Plumb, formerly of this town, in Cambridge.

Mrs. William Annable and daughter Marion have just concluded a pleasant week-end visit with the latter's grandmother, Mrs. J. C. Elliott on Vine street. William Annable was down over Sunday the guest of his mother, Mrs. Elliot, also.

Miss Grace Merrill spent the week-end at home with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Merrill, Bridge street. She had with her a class-mate at the Walnut Hill school for girls, Miss Margaret Rue.

The next meeting of the Brotherhood of Manchester will take place at the vestry of the Baptist church, Feb. 11. It will be a "ladies' night." All members are urged to bring one or more lady friends. A program will be carried out by the Everett orchestra and reader. Refreshments will be served during the evening. Members will be expected to give their usual offering and for each lady they bring a donation of 15 cents is expected to be given toward expenses of the evening.

OLD TOM OF LOCAL "TOM AND JERRY" FAME GONE

"Tom," one of the favorite pair of fire horses, the first and only pair ever owned by the Town of Manchester, broke his leg in some manner on Friday evening of last week, in the basement of the fire house. He was shot the following morning by Dr. Rordan, to end his suffering. He had been taken from his stall to be watered and in turning around to get back to his stall he twisted his leg in such a manner as to break it, though it was not known at the time that his injury was of such a serious nature. "Tom" and "Jerry" his partner were bought eleven years ago last November and the two have always been great favorites. A few years ago when the town voted to buy an auto wagon to replace its horse-equipped wagon, it was decided, through sentiment more than anything else, to keep "Tom" and "Jerry," and to give them a home in the basement of the engine house. They have been used since then by the highway department, though under the control of the fire engineers. "Tom's" remains have been sold to a fertilizer concern.

It may not be generally remembered that the fire horses were bought eleven years ago as the result of a petition to the town signed by nearly all the townspeople. This agitation was started after the disastrous fire followed by a gas explosion at the James Means house, Smith's Point, when the department was slow in arriving because of not having horses at the station to give prompt service. The Misses Bartlett of the Old Neck colony and the late Samuel Knight were instrumental in starting the petition, which the writer had the honor of circulating all over town for signatures. The horses were bought that fall.

The February Magazines

Some Features of a Few of Them, by "R. T. G."

The "World's Work" is full of good reading. In the "march of events" part of the magazine a number of interesting things may be found. "Socializing Country Life," "A Housekeepers League," "Rich Men as Ambassadors" and "Getting Books to the People" may be mentioned. The last article in the above list tells of the good work done by a woman in Hagars-town, Maryland. She started some years ago to carry books to the people living up in the mountains near that town. At first they did not care for the books, but now they are in great demand. Last year the horse and wagon she had used for sometime was destroyed by a train and now she uses an automobile. "The New Freedom" by Woodrow Wilson is well worth reading. "The Bacteria of Bad Business" by Dr. John R. Williams is a study of Rochester's milk supply. Much information is given about the handling of milk.

Those wishing to know more about our English language will learn something by reading "Scotticisms and Americanisms" by Thomas R. Lonnabury in "Harper's Magazine." In "A Cure for Civic Myopia" by Robert W. Bruere a great deal is told about our Federal government that everyone interested in the welfare of our country should know. A number of good stories also may be found in this magazine.

"Scribners" for February is good from cover to cover. "Discovering America by Motor" is a well illustrated paper giving a good description of a rather unusual automobile experience. "The Automobile and its Missions" tells of the various kinds of work the motor car is made to do at the present time. All Americans are proud of the work the government has done in building the Panama Canal. "Sanitation of the Isthmus" by Joseph Bucklin Bishop goes far to explain our success at Panama. It tells what splendid results were accomplished in the protection of the health of those working on the "big ditch." The failure of all other attempts to cut a canal across the Isthmus was due to a large extent to its unsanitary condition.

A series of papers are now running in "Scribners"—"Germany and the Germans from an American Point of View." They are written by Price Collier, author of "England and the English from an American Point of View." Berlin is the subject for this month.

"A Flier in Longevity" by Wallace Irwin is the opening story in "McClures." It is a good story.

Gilbert K. Chesterton the brilliant writer in the Illustrated London News and author of many books has another of his "Father Brown" detective stories in this magazine for February. "The Strange Crime of John Bou-lois" is the title of the story. This author is considered the best detective story writer in England and one of the "Father Brown" series will appear each month for sometime to come.

Those believing that the world is getting better should read "Advertising Goodness" by Gerald Stanley Lee in Everybody's. This is followed by rather a pessimistic article on the value of mineral springs in the treatment of disease by Woods Hutchinson, entitled "Taking the Waters, The Humbug of Hot Springs."

"Current Opinion" formerly "Current Literature" gives one of the best monthly reviews of the politics and news of the world that we get in any of the magazines. If a person did not read anything else but its "Review of the World" each month he would be kept well posted on what is being done on this little planet of ours. "A Last Look at Helen Gould, Spinster" gives many facts about this noble American woman. "Years of Discretion — a play of Cupid at Fifty" is a very amusing little play with a good moral lesson. It is given in full in "Current Opinion" for this month. Many other topics are treated in a manner to appeal to the reader.

There are three good articles in the Canadian Magazine, — "The Shell Mines of Prince Edward Islands," "Merchandising on the Frontier," and "The Montreal Opera Company."

Those interested in recent literature should peruse the "Bookman." It gives much information about the new books and present day writers. It also reviews some eight or ten books each month.

"Vicarious" in the "Atlantic" is a bright little story. "The Machine Trainers" and "The Social Order in an American Town" are two thought-providing papers in this month's "Atlantic."

In the above notes but very few of the numerous good things to be found in the magazines have been mentioned.

Manchester Brotherhood Meeting.

"The Living Temple" Subject of Dr. Nicola's Talk.

A large gathering of men was present at the meeting of the Brotherhood or Manchester Monday evening. After the regular order of business was transacted, the president introduced as the speaker of the evening Benjamin E. Nicola, M. D., Supt. of the Attleboro Sanitarium.

Dr. Nicola's talk was very interesting and he took for his subject, "The Living Temple." He said in part: "We learn by a very slow process that every man has his own personal influence over another person. We find that our influence can be cast over our boss, as we call him, or our brother workman or our neighbor. Therefore we should be very careful lest we send forth a bad influence over someone. The great trouble today is that we do not understand our bodies. We forget that our body is a Living Temple.

"We are too careless of our life. We should not shorten our lives. Because one man can drink and smoke and then live to be 70 or 80 years of age. We all can't do it. Where one man can do this there are hundreds who cannot.

"We should all live as God means for us to live. If we did this there would not be so many suicides. There are more suicides in this age than ever before and why? Because they have not the right view of life. They do not understand the body. A man has no more right in the sight of God to take his own life than a man has right to do things that are wrong and contrary to God's will. A man should live his natural life and the older he grows the more devout christian he should be.

"Your body is the Holy Temple; it is the worship place where God dwells. When you enter a place of worship you have a different feeling than you have when you enter a place of amusement. Well, it is because you recognize that there is a vast difference in the atmosphere. It seems very different from elsewhere and because we think, it is different. We should think the same about our bodies. The body is the Gospel of God. What a different body we would have had, had we not let sin dull it, yet, we should remember that, Christ came into the world a ransom for many. It is our privilege to imitate Christ. The world is careless concerning these things. The world seems to forget that the body is the Holy Temple."

Mr. Nicola at this point explained at length the average years of life and other points that he came in contact with at his sanitarium. He explained that the habit of smoking causes the heart to beat ten times a minute faster than it should. There is no change for him to live his natural life. "The ordinary man wants to have a good time," he said, "a late dance or a little drinking party, he goes on for 40 or 50 years in this way. All of a sudden he finds himself going to doctors for health. He gets better and goes away and does the same thing over again until the end comes. It doesn't pay to ruin one's life by habits. One can enjoy this life by remembering that the body is the temple of God and by doing things that are right in the sight of God his body will be a Holy Temple."

MANCHESTER

John Carter has a position with a State street, Boston, concern as book-keeper.

We are pleased to see Mr. Henry Dennis of West Manchester out again after being confined to his home for several weeks with a severe cold.

Mr. and Mrs. John Knight of Essex are spending February in town, as is their custom, with the latter's mother, Mrs. Abigail Gentlee, School street.

INCREASES HIS BUSINESS IN ROCK- PORT

J. A. Lodge of the Breeze, who bought the Rockport Review last February from Chas. M. Stevens, has just leased Mr. Stevens' printing plant, the only printing establishment on Cape Ann, outside of Gloucester. The plant has been moved into new quarters in the Postoffice block. Much of the larger work which cannot be conveniently handled in Rockport will be done at the Breeze plant in Manchester, where the Rockport paper is being printed.

WILL TELL ABOUT EARTHQUAKE

The Manchester club will have a sort of Ladies' Night next Wednesday evening when the members are privileged to invite the ladies to a talk which Mr. William Hooper is to give at the Chapel, on the Messina earthquake, when Mr. and Mrs. Hooper did so much for the relief of sufferers. The talk will be informal and will be illustrated by stereopticon.

MANCHESTER

Miss Anna Maslin is having a fortnight's vacation from her duties as telephone operator at the Manchester exchange. She is spending the time with relatives in Dorchester.

Miss Helen Cheever is giving a party in honor of her birth-day this evening. About 25 of her young friends have received invitations. Dancing will be enjoyed.

About 20 of the Story High school pupils under the chaperonage of Miss Bella C. Porter, Miss Lilla Alger and Miss Blanche Bragdon, will attend "The Merchant of Venice" at the Shubert theatre, Boston, tomorrow.

The new regalia of the Red Men has arrived and will be used for the first time next meeting when new candidates will be given the adoption degree.

MRS. DANIEL WADE

Mrs. Daniel Wade passed away last Saturday morning, Feb. 1, at her home on Union street, Manchester, after a week's illness with pneumonia.

Mrs. Wade was born in Alma, Albert Co., N. B., in 1842, and was at the time of her death a little over 70 years of age. her maiden name was Margaret Rossiter. She married Daniel Wade 46 years ago. About 25 years ago the family moved to Cambridge, and later they came to Manchester, where they have made their home since.

Mrs. Wade was a woman of noble upright living, and was of the type of Christian women who live for their family and for the good of those with whom they come in contact. She leaves one sister in St. John, N. B., a brother in Albert Co., N. B., and two sons, John of this town and David of Boston; also 11 grandchildren, one of whom is Lagory Wade, who has made such a success as a trombonist.

Funeral services were held Monday morning at 9 o'clock at the Sacred Heart church, with requiem high mass by Rev. Fr. Sullivan. Interment was in Roxbury (Calvary cemetery), where her daughter, Mrs. James Pidgeon formerly of Manchester is buried.

MANCHESTER

A meeting was held at Lee's hall last evening by the N.S.H.S. to ascertain if the public in general is willing to have a space of grounds in the town placed at the disposal of the local school children for garden purposes. In all large cities a parcel of land is put aside for the use of school children so that they may become garden growers and also learn more about the fruits of nature. It was thought that a small appropriation might be made at the coming March meeting for this work. Prizes will be given at the annual fairs for the best fruits and flowers. The various organizations of the town were represented at the meeting.

One of our young men, Master Joseph Dodge, is becoming a wireless expert. A fine new outfit has been installed the past week, at his home on School street. Messages are being sent and received by him at his leisure moments to his school chums in distant parts of the town. A number of other young men about town are also interested in this work, among them being Master Erickson, McKinnon, and James. They all have complete working instruments.

Mrs. Mary Stanley, who underwent a serious operation at Boston some weeks ago, is slowly improving at the Dr. Adam's Nervine Hospital at Jamaica Plain.

The S. of V. extend to the W. R. C., G. A. R. and citizens of the town a cordial invitation to be present at a Lincoln Memorial service to be held at the Town hall Thursday evening, Feb.

Notice To Voters REGISTRATION

Office of the Board of Registrars of Voters.

Manchester, Mass., Feb. 5, 1913.

Notice is hereby given that the Board of Registrars of Voters will be in session at the office of the Board of Selectmen on Tuesday, Feb. 11, from 7 till 8 o'clock P. M., on Wednesday, the 19th, from 7 till 8 o'clock; also on Friday, Feb. 21st, from 12 a. m. to 10 p. m., for the purpose of receiving evidence of the qualification of persons claiming a right to vote at the election to be held on Monday, March 3, 1913, and of correcting the list of voters.

See that your name is on the Voting List of your town; if not there call at the office of the Board of Registrars on the days above mentioned, and be registered, or you cannot vote. Bring with you a certificate from the assessors or a tax bill or notice from the collector of taxes, showing that you have been assessed a poll tax as a resident of the town of Manchester.

All persons whose names are stricken from the voters' lists for any lawful reason, will, before they can again have their names placed upon said lists, be required to register their names at the time hereinbefore stated in like manner as new voters.

Naturalized citizens, presenting themselves for registration must bring their naturalization papers with them.

If a qualified voter of this town whose name was on the voters' list last year, and who has been assessed for the current year, finds after the close of registration that his name is not placed on the voters' list of the current year, by reason of having been omitted by clerical error or mistake, he may upon personal application, have his name placed upon the voting list, or, if application be made on the day of election, he may have a certificate to vote.

No name can be added to the voters' list (except to correct omissions made by clerical error or mistake) after ten (10) o'clock of the evening of Friday, Feb. 21st, at which time registration closes.

By order of the Board of Registrars of voters.

W. J. JOHNSON,
J. H. RIVERS,
EDWARD CROWELL,
ALFRED S. JEWETT.

WENHAM

On Sunday morning Rev. F. M. Cutler, minister of the village church, will preach on "The Lenten Season and Its Lesson." Sunday school at noon. Y.P.S.C.E. meeting at 6. Instead of the usual 7 o'clock service the department of Social Service will conduct a no-license rally in the Town hall. Mr. Daniel A. MacKay of Roxbury will speak. There will also be a special musical program. Ladies as well as gentlemen will be welcome at this meeting. The churches of Wenham and Hamilton have been invited to unite for the occasion.

Church night on Thursday at 7.30 will be observed by a meeting to study the mission text book on China, under the auspices of the department of missions.

The Ipswich troop of boy scouts visited Wenham last Saturday and received a cordial welcome. Rev. Mr. Allen, scoutmaster, came with the lads. Athletic contests were held upon the school play-ground between the visitors and the local troop, resulting in some victories for each side, with a preponderance in favor of Wenham.

Wenham scouts visited Salem Monday evening, to see companies C and D of the 2d Corps drill before the U.

S. Army inspector. Wenham is proud of her member in Co. C, Ernest Homan. Miss Jennie Eaton, treasurer of the Y.P.S.C.E. reports the following results of the series of stereopticon entertainments. Receipts $51.79, expenses $12.76, profit $39.03. This profit was more than enough to pay for the new lantern. And in addition a committee of the young people have become skilled operators of the stereopticon.

For 1913 the W.W.W.W. will be served by the following officers, chosen at a recent meeting: Chester Cook, president; Mrs. George Wilson vice-president; Mrs. Luther Batchelder, secretary; and Mrs. S. Brown treasurer. The secretary's report told of the good times the "4 Ws" had during the year past. $50 was in the treasury, with all bills paid. The seven men who arranged the pie supper, are to serve as entertainment committee during the ensuing six months. A sick committee was appointed consisting of Miss Luel Cook, Miss Lucy Brown, Mrs. H. Brown, Mrs. George Perkins. Meetings are held on the second and fourth Wednesdays of the month, in the evening, at the chapel.

BEVERLY FARMS

A sale of home cooking will be held in G. A. R. hall tomorrow afternoon at 2.30 o'clock. The sale is under the management of the Sewing circle connected with the W. R. C.. The money thus received is much needed by the ladies for a worthy object.

So many members of John West colony, Pilgrim Fathers, desire to attend the entertainment at the school house tonight that only a short business meeting commencing at 7 o'clock will be held.

Mrs. John Bolam spent a part of this week visiting her daughter, Mrs. Frank Preston at Allston.

At the meeting of the city council last Monday evening Alderman Hull offered an order appropriating $1,000 for edge stone to be used at Beverly Farms in connection with the construction of gravelled side walks. He also offered an order carrying an appropriation of $1,000 for drainage and improvements at the playground. Both orders were referred to the finance committee.

Samuel F. Collamore has resumed his duties as janitor at the Beverly Farms school after an absence of three weeks due to illness.

The male members of Miss Jane M. Watson's Monday evening dancing class tendered to the ladies at this week's gathering a sheet and pillow case party. The affair was a very enjoyable one. The hall was prettily decorated. Refreshments were served.

The base ball committee of the Beverly Farms Athletic club are forming plans to present an entertainment which in part will be a take off on an old-fashioned town meeting, followed by dancing. The event will take place in April and is being presented for the purpose of securing funds to give a financial start to baseball for the coming summer.

WENHAM.

Mrs. Priscilla S. Dodge will be receiving congratulations next Tuesday upon the occasion of her 87th birthday.

Mr. Elmer E. Clarke and Joseph F. Lynch attended the banquet of the E. Councillors of eastern Massachusetts O. U. A. M. at Salem last week.

A pie supper was enjoyed by the West Wenham Willing Workers last Thursday, served by a committee of the male members, Chester Cook, George Wilson, Harlan Brown, S. Brown, Luther Batchelder, Elmer Pierce and J. F. Lynch. The fifty or more members who partook, pronounced it "the best ever."

BEVERLY FARMS

Last Wednesday evening Rev. C. S. Pond delivered at the Baptist church an address on "St. Stephen, the first martyr of the Christian church,"—the second in the course of mid-week lectures on the early history of the church.

It will be of interest many Beverly Farms people to know that Mrs. Annie M. Hoyt, wife of the late Rev. Edwin R. Hoyt a former pastor of the local Baptist church, is now residing at Manhattan, Mont.

The boys of the Pastors Hour met in the chapel of the Baptist church last evening for the usual devotional and instructive service, which was followed by a social hour, at which time there was a gymnastic drill under the direction of physical training instructors from the Beverly Y. M. C. A. A number of ladies of the church have interested themselves to help the boys to procure a stereopticon outfit, and are to hold a food sale and entertainment on the evening of St. Valentine's day. Should the outfit be procured it will be available for all the work of the church.

Rapid progress is being made on the addition to the Baptist church, which includes the addition of two rooms each in size, 9x11 feet. George W. Larcom is the contractor.

The Girls' club of the local Baptist church will meet at the church next Tuesday evening for their work night.

There will be a social meeting in the Baptist church next Thursday evening for the Italians of the Civic class. A short address will be given on some instructive subject, followed by a musical program which will include singing in Italian. After the meeting the members will be taken to the local branch of the public library and instructed in the methods of taking out books. Through the foresight of Miss K. P. Loring a large number of books printed in Italian have been placed in the library. Many plans are being made for the benefit of this class, including an illustrated lecture on tuberculosis, and an address on the history of the United States. Both of these events will take place very soon.

Mrs. William H. Day of Hart street has entered the Beverly hospital for treatment.

Cards have been received this week by Beverly Farms friends of Mrs. Benj. Ober and Mrs. Jas. D. Hooper from Tijuana, Mexico.

Miss Barbara Daniels is expected home tomorrow from the Beverly hospital where she has been under treatment.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE

Kathryn Kidder, the famous legitimate star, who has made the character of "Madame Sans Gene" known from the Atlantic to the Pacific Coast, will make her debut as a vaudeville head-liner at B. F. Keith's Theatre next week. For her vaudeville tour Miss Kidder has selected a one-act playlet entitled "The Washerwoman Duchess," based upon an incident in the life of the Emperor Napoleon and Mme. Sans Gene. The engagement of Miss Kidder to play her famous role at B. F. Keith's Theatre is one of the big events of the year in vaudeville. For the past few seasons Miss Kidder has been starring at the head of her own organization in the legitimate, and she has not been seen in the East for several years.

Professor Ota Cygia, the court violinist to the King of Spain, who has captivated all New York with his wonderful technique and masterly command of the violin, will make his first Boston appearance; Max Hart's Six Steppers, composed of four brothers and two sisters, will present a series of terpsichorean specialties; and others yet to be announced, will complete the bill.

Harmony Guild held a very enjoyable book meeting at the chapel Monday evening. While the attendance was small, considerable business was transacted. It was voted to purchase two oak hymn indicators for the Congregational church. Arrangements were completed for guest-night. Members' tickets are 15 cents; guests' 35 cents. Out-of-town talent will be provided and a caterer will furnish the refreshments. After concluding the business, the president turned the meeting over to the entertainment committee. Each member present represented a book and considerable amusement was caused by guessing the titles. Other interesting book contests and games had been provided. Refreshments of punch and fancy crackers were served.

The Ladies Social circle will meet with Mrs. Edward Haraden, Bridge street, next Wednesday evening.

LITERARY CONFIDENCES

Percollum—It's no light job, let me tell you, to write a descriptive poem 1,500 words long, even about a golden wedding. When I had finished this on an old chap, I was all in.

SOCIETY NOTES

Mrs. James McMillan has closed her house on Vermont avenue, Washington, for the season, and sailed on the Mauretania Wednesday, from New York, for England, for a visit with Sir John and Lady Harrington, the latter Mrs. McMillan's daughter. She will remain in England until late June, when she will come direct to "Eaglehead," her beautiful summer estate at Manchester-by-the-Sea. The house at Manchester will be opened the first of June.

The important society item of the week was the announcement by Miss Alys Meyer, the younger daughter of Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Geo. von L. Meyer of Hamilton and Washington, of her engagement to Lieut. Com. Christopher Raymond P. Rodgers, a young naval officer, in command of the U. S. S. Sylph, detailed for the use of the presidential family. He is at present detailed as one of the naval aides at the White House. He is the son of Col. Alexander Rodgers, U. S. A., retired. The Secretary and Mrs. Meyer entertained a large number of guests at a birthday luncheon Sunday at their home in Scott circle, Washington, and the occasion was of double significance, for it was not only the celebration of the birthday of Miss Alys Meyer, but was made an occasion to announce her engagement.

The marriage in Princeton, N. J., Monday of Mrs. Cleveland, widow of former President Grover Cleveland, and Prof. Thomas J. Preston, is of much interest to North Shore summer residents, many of whom have met the bride on many occasions in the last few years during her visits at "Look-out Hill," with Mrs. John Hays Hammond. Prof. and Mrs. Preston have gone to Florida for the rest of the winter.

Mrs. John Hays Hammond, who with Mr. Hammond has been entertaining extensively in Washington this winter, left Tuesday for Palm Beach and Miami, Fla. On Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. Hammond gave a dinner at the capital in honor of Ambassador and Mrs. James Bryce.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE

The return of two of the most popular prima donnas on the entire roster of the company,—Mme. Edvina and Miss Mary Garden, will make the coming week a notable one at the Boston Opera House. On Monday evening Mme. Edvina will come back for one performance as Maliella in "The Jewels of the Madonna." The tuneful Wolf-Ferrari opera has become the greatest popular success in the repertory and at its last performance all records for receipts were broken.

On Wednesday evening Miss Garden will make her only appearance for the season as Carmen, in the like titled Bizet opera. The role of the vixenish cigarette-girl is one which the famous soprano has made her very own and when she introduced it here last season, was conceded generally to be one of the greatest in the gallery of portraits which she has created.

On Friday evening will come the first performance for this season of Puccini's "The Girl of the Golden West." Mme. Carmen Melis, the creator of the part here, will appear as the girl and Zenatello, by many considered the greatest tenor singing in opera today, will be the road agent Dick Johnson.

On Saturday afternoon Mme. Wein-gartner-Marcel will make her only appearance as Aida. After she sang the role here last season for the first time on any stage, she gave it many times in Europe and in Hamburg where she appeared to the Redames of Caruso, the great tenor said that hers was the greatest Aida he ever had heard.

For Saturday evening a special performance of "Louiso" is announced with Miss Garden in the title part and Charles Dalmores as Julien. It will be interesting to gain the acquaintance of another Louise, although Miss Garden's portrayal is familiar to a certain portion of the opera-going public, since she sang the part here during a Hammerstein season five years ago.

On Sunday afternoon, Feb. 23, Mme. Lina Cavalieri will make her first appearance of her American concert tour at the Boston Opera House.

Every man thinks he knows a lot about a woman until he marries one.

SOCIETY NOTES

Dr. J. Henry Lancashire and family of Detroit have leased the estate of the late R. C. Hooper at West Manchester for the coming season. This is one of the largest and most attractive summer estates on the whole North Shore. Since the death of Mr. and Mrs. Hooper some five or six years ago it has been occupied very little. The only daughter, Mrs. Lathrop Brown, wife of the new congressman from the St. James section of Long Island, has lived on the North Shore very little since her marriage. Last year the Leonard Cotton Hannas of Cleveland occupied the house for a 10-week season. Dr. and Mrs. Lancashire intend to make a long season of it on the North Shore, as they will come early and stay late as usual, and they will no doubt do considerable entertaining during the season. The Hooper estate, so-called, is located on Chubb's Point, the extreme southerly point of Manchester, overlooking the Beverly Farms shore, and Mystery and Bakers Islands. It is off this point that the Manchester Yacht club fleet is moored, and up the shore a half-mile the President's yacht "Mayflower" has been stationed the last three summers. Many of the large yachts are anchored just off the shore during the summer for weeks at a time. There is a beautiful large greenhouse on the property and a large stable and garage is also located on the estate. The Lancashires occupied the Howard cottage at West Manchester last season. Mrs. Lancashire and Miss Lancashire are sailing on the Adriatic next Tuesday (the 18th) for Naples, and upon their return they will come direct to Manchester. Ammi W. Lancashire sailed Saturday of last week for Panama and South America for a six weeks' trip. The married daughter, Mrs. E. ## SOCIETY NOTES

Misses Harriot and Margaret Curtis have just returned to Boston after a week's visit in Washington with their brother, James F. Curtis and bride (Laura Merriam), who are soon to start for a tour around the world, at the conclusion of which they are to take up their residence in Boston.

Mrs. John Caswell was hostess Monday for a luncheon at her home on Marlborough street, Boston. It was given for debutantes.

One of the pleasantest functions of the week in Boston society, was the informal dance which Mrs. Wright Fabyan gave Monday night at her Back Bay residence for her daughter, Miss Eleanor, who was one of the most successful of the winter's debutantes. Only the younger set was bidden.

CONTRACTORS GETTING TOGETHER

The North Shore contractors, from Salem to Gloucester, are to form an association after the plan of the Master Builders' association, to co-operate against labor conditions which threaten to develop along the shore in the spring.

Plumbers and carpenters have already notified the master plumbers and contractors that they will ask for an increase, and it is expected that other lines will follow. Practically all the trades along the North Shore are well organized and the contractors unite in stating that conditions have reached that point where further demands can not be granted without crippling business.

In some cases local contractors who employ union men have lost good contracts through the ability of Boston contractors who run open shops to bid at lower figures. A sympathetic strike at one of the big shore houses is said to have helped along the plan.

AUTO BURNED AT FARMS

The Beverly Farms fire department was called out Sunday night just before 11 o'clock for a burning automobile on the Manchester road, opposite the Tweed estate. The machine was owned by Dr. Cleary of Boston, and with him was John Leahey of the Farms. The men had stopped to make some minor repairs when there was an explosion and flames immediately communicated to the wood work and the upholstery of the machine, and about everything inflammable was burned. There was something of a mix-up on the alarm. The

MISS BILLIE BURKE AT THE HOLLIS

A new comedy by Pinero, the foremost dramatist in England today, and Miss Billie Burke, one of the most charming actresses on the American stage, are both potent attractions in the theatre world and combined—well, they're irresistible. That is the way it seems, anyway, to anyone who has observed the audiences—their size and their enthusiasm, too—at the Hollis Street theatre, Boston, since Miss Burke has been appearing there in "The 'Mind the Paint' Girl," Pinero's latest comedy. The pretty actress scored a big hit on her opening night and ever since the theatre has been crowded. It was perhaps the most genuine triumph Miss Burke has ever won in Boston, although she has always been a favorite there and her opening nights have always been gala events. This time, though, it was something more. This time the audience applauded her not only because she was pretty and sweet and young and girlish and had kittenish little ways, but because besides all that in the big scene of the play in the third act she proved herself an actress of real power—an actress capable of expressing and of making the audience feel real and deep emotions of several different kinds.

The engagement will close on Saturday—Washington's birthday.

BUT SHE COULDN'T SEE IT

"What you see in that creature to admire I can't imagine," said Mrs. Dubbleigh. "Why, she's all made up! Her hair, her figure, her complexion—every bit of her is artificial!"

"Well, what of it?" retorted Dubbleigh. "If the world admires self-made men why shouldn't it admire self-made women?"—Stray Stories.

The average man is willing to confess a fault he hasn't got.

Real Estate and Improvements ... Up and Down the North Shore ...

One of the largest jobs undertaken on the Shore for several years is that at the George R. White estate, Smith Point, Manchester. Nearly 200 men are employed there this winter—many of them men who would otherwise be without work in the dead of winter. The job means much to Manchester as thousands of dollars are being put in circulation through it. Part of the work is being done by a Boston contractor, one not within the fold of the labor union. Consequently the other contractors are working under considerable difficulties.

been written but Mrs. Gaskell's is undoubtedly the best. It may now be obtained at the library.

Geoffrey Chancer, "Father of English Poetry" was born in 1340 and died in 1400. He was buried in the south transept of Westminster Abbey, known as the Poets Corner, being the first literary man so honored. He did not have a college education but must have been a great reader for he seems to have been familiar with most of the literature of his time. He had a position at court and was sent on a number of continental embassies, the most important being that to Italy. While in Italy he is supposed to have met the poet Petrarch. He was the first great English poet. Spencer called him "that welles of Englishe undefyled." He wrote when our English language was in the formative period and many words are unintelligible to the modern reader without the help of a glossary. Artemus Ward said of Chaucer "that he was a great poet but he could not spell."

A number of attempts have been made to put the poetry of Chaucer into modern English, but with rather poor results, and consequently to the average reader, Chaucer has remained a closed book. Recently two writers, John S. P. Latlock—author of "The Development and Chronology of Chaucer's Works"—and Percy McKaye—author of "Canterbury Tales" and "Jeanne D'Arc"—have given us a prose version of Chaucer's poetical writings, "The Modern Reader's Chaucer."

The authors have tried to convey the sense of the original as well as they could. They have put this author's works in such a form as should make them more familiar to the ordinary reader, than they are at present. This book is a fine example of good book making. It is well printed and contains over thirty full-page colored illustrations. —R.T.G.

New Books at Manchester Library

The "Manual Training Magazine" was taken at the Manchester Public library with the hope that the boys in the class for manual training in our schools would call for it and receive help and inspiration from the many good articles to be found in it. So far it has been taken out very little and a good opportunity to get some very useful information is being neglected. At the back of the magazine is a very useful "readers' guide" to articles in other periodicals on the subject of the manual arts.

The library has just been presented by the publishers, Doubleday, Page & Co., with a copy of "The Stock Exchange from Within" by William C. Van Antwerp. I do not suppose there is any well known subject upon which the ordinary man has such vague ideas. Anybody reading this book will be well repaid for the time spent in so doing. "The Functions of the Stock Exchange," "The Uses and Abuses of Speculation," "The Bear and Short Selling," "Relationship Between the Banks and the Stock Exchange" and "Publicity in Exchange Affairs; Cautious and Precautions" are the headings of interesting chapters. An appendix gives "Report of the Governor's Committee on Speculation in Securities and Commodities." This committee was appointed by Hon. Charles E. Hughes when Governor of New York. This report of over thirty pages treats the subject from almost every standpoint. The reading of this book leads one to the conclusion that the Stock Exchange is not a gambling institution but a very necessary adjunct to the business of any country.

Mrs. Elizabeth Gaskell, author of that famous classic of English village life, "Cranford," wrote a biography of Charlotte Bronte—author of one of the best known and most read of English novels, "Jane Eyre." A number of books on the life of this well known English novelist have

"Yes, real old oak!" Mrs. Persprad purred. "Of course, it cost a great deal; but still a good hallstand—"

But just as Mrs. P— was coming to the thrilling part of the description she was interrupted. In the drawing room where she, and her lady friends were sitting, burst Freddy, the 5-year-old son of the house.

His face was flushed with excitement and his cap was still on his head.

"Freddy," his mother said in gentle reproof, "what did I buy the new hall-stand for?"

For an instant Freddy was astonished, amazed.

"Well," he jerked out at last, "you bought it for two dollars, off the old secondhand man. But—" and Freddy looked annoyed—"you told me not to tell anybody about it!"—Exchange

Cowardice Court

By GEORGE BARR M'CUTCHEON

Copyright, 1906, Dodd Mead & Co.

"I was jesting when I said he would come tomorrow," said Penelope, ignoring the thrust and hurrying to her subject. "I couldn't go to sleep tonight if I neglected to tell you what I think of the outrage this morning. You and Cecil had no right to order Tompkins to shoot at Mr. Shaw. He is not a trespasser. Some one killed his dog to-day. When he pursued the coward a second shot was fired at him. He was wounded. Do you call that fair fighting? Ambushed, shot from behind a tree. I don't care what you and Cecil think about it, I consider it despicable. Thank God, Cecil was not really to blame. It is about the only thing I can say to my brother's credit."

Lady Bazelhurst was staring at her young sister-in-law with wide eyes. It was the first time in all her petted, vain life that any one had called her to account. She was at first too deeply amazed to resent the sharp attack.

"Penelope Drake!" was all she could say. Then the fury in her soul began to search for an outlet. "How dare you? How dare you?"

"I don't mean to hurt you. I am only telling you that your way of treating this affair is a mistake. It can be rectified. You don't want to be lawless; you don't understand what a narrow escape from murder you have had. Evelyn, you owe reparation to Mr. Shaw. He is"—

"I understand why you take his side. You cheapen and degrade yourself and you bring shame upon your brother and me by your disgraceful affair with this ruffian. Don't look shocked. You meet him secretly, I know. How much further you have gone with him I don't know. It is enough that you"—

"Stop! You shall not say such things to me!"

"You came in here to have it out with me. Well, we'll have it out. You think because you're English, and all that, that you are better than I. You show it in your every action; you turn up your nose at me because I am an American. Well, what if I am? Where would you be if it were not for me? And where would he be? You'd starve if it were not for me. You hang to me like a leech—you sponge on me—you gorge yourself!"

"You'd starve if it were not for me."

"That is enough, Evelyn. You have said all that is necessary. I deserve it, too, for meddling in your affairs. It may satisfy you to know that I have always despised you. Having confessed, I can only add that we cannot live another hour under the same roof. You need not order me to go. I shall do so of my own accord—gladly." Penelope turned to the door. She was as cold as ice.

"It is the first time you have ever done anything to please me. You may go in the morning."

"I shall go tonight!"

"As you like. It is near morning. Where do you expect to go at this hour of the night?"

"I am not afraid of the night. Tomorrow I shall send over from the village for my trunks." She paused near the door and then came back to Cecil's side. "Goodby, Cecil. I'll write. Goodby." He looked up with a hazy smile.

"G'night," he muttered thickly.

Without another word or so much as a glance at Lady Bazelhurst, Penelope Drake went swiftly from the room. The big hall clock struck the half hour after 11. Some one—a woman—was laughing in the billiard room below. The click of the balls came to her ears like the snapping of angry teeth. She did not hesitate. It was not in her nature. The room in which she had found so much delight was now loathsome to her. With nervous fingers she threw the small things she most cherished into a bag—her purse, her jewels, her little treasures. Somehow it seemed to her as if she were hurrying to catch a night train, that was all. With her own strong young arms she dragged the two huge trunks from the closet. Half an hour later they were full and locked. Then she looked about with a dry, mirthless smile.

"I wonder where I am to go," she murmured, half aloud. A momentary feeling of indecision attacked her. The click of the balls had ceased, the clock had struck 12. It was dark and still, and the wind was crying in the trees.

"She won't go," Lady Bazelhurst was saying to herself as she sat, narrow eyed and hateful, in her window looking out into the night. "Life is too easy here." The light from the porch lanterns cast a feeble glow out beyond the porte cochere and down the drive. As she stared across the circle the figure of a woman suddenly cut a diametric line through it and lost itself in the wall of blackness that formed the circumference. Lady Evelyn started and stared unbelievably into the darkness, striving to penetrate it with her gaze. "It was she—Penelope," she cried, coming to her feet. "She's really gone—she meant it."

For many minutes she peered out into the night, expecting to see the shadow returning. A touch of anxious hope possessing her, she left the window and hurried down the corridor to Penelope's room. What she found there was most convincing. It was not a trick of the lanterns. The shadow had been real. It must be confessed that the peevish heart of Lady Bazelhurst beat rather rapidly as she hastened back to the window to peer anxiously out into the somber park with its hooting owls and chattering night bugs. The mournful yelp of a distant dog floated across the black valley. The watcher shuddered as she recalled stories of panthers that had infested the great hills. A small feeling of shame and regret began to develop with annoying insistence.

An hour dragged itself by before she arose petulantly, half terrified, half annoyed in spite of herself. Her husband still was sitting in the big chair, his face in his hands. His small, dejected figure appealed to her pity for the first time in the two years of their association. She realized what her temper had compelled her to say to him and to his sister. She saw the insults that at least one of them had come to resent.

"I hope that foolish girl will come back," she found herself saying, with a troubled look from the window. "Where can the poor thing go? What will become of her? What will every one say when this becomes known?" she cried, with fresh selfishness. "I—I should not have let her go like this."

Even as she reproached herself a light broke in upon her understanding; a thought whirled into her brain, and a moment later a shrill, angry, hysterical laugh came from her lips.

"She knew where she could go! How simple I am. Shaw will welcome her gladly. She's with him by this time—his doors have opened to her. The little wretch! And I've been trying so hard to pity her." She laughed again so shrilly that his lordship stirred and then looked up at her stupefied, uncertain.

"Hullo!" he grunted. "What time is it?"

"Oh, you're awake, are you?" scornfully.

"Certainly. Have I been dozing? What's there to laugh at, my dear?" he mumbled, arising very unsteadily. "Where's Pen?"

"She's gone. She's left the house," she said, recurring dread and anxiety in her voice. A glance at the darkness outside brought back the growing shudders.

"What—what d'ye mean?" demanded he, bracing up with a splendid effort.

"She's left the house, that's all. We quarreled. I don't know where she's gone. Yes, I do know. She's gone to Shaw's for the night. She's with him. I saw her going," she cried, striving between fear and anger.

"You've—you've turned her out?" gasped Lord Bazelhurst numbly. "In the night? Good Lord! Why—why did you let her go?" He turned and rushed toward the door, tears springing to his eyes. He was sobering now and the tears were wrenched from his hurt pride. "How long ago?"

"An hour or more. She went of her own accord. You'll find her at Shaw's," said her ladyship harshly. She hated to admit that she was to blame. But as her husband left the room, banging the door after him, she caught her breath several times in a futile effort to stay the sobs and then broke down and cried, a very much abused young woman. She hated everybody and everything.

CHAPTER VI.

In Which Dan Cupid Trespasses.

LADY BAZELHURST was right. Penelope was making her way through the blackest of nights toward the home of Randolph Shaw. In deciding upon this step, after long deliberation, she had said to herself: "Randolph Shaw is the only real man I've seen since coming to the mountains. I can trust him to help me tonight."

It was fully three miles to Shaw's place, most of the way over the narrow valley road. She knew she would encounter but few tortuous places. The last half mile, however, was steep rugged and unfamiliar to her. She had ventured no nearer to his home than Renwood's deserted cottage, lying above and to the south of the road, almost at the base of the long hill on whose side Shaw had built his big home. To climb that hill was no easy task in daylight; at midnight, with the stars obscured by clouds and treetops there was something perilously uncertain in the prospect.

Only the knowledge that patience and courage eventually would bring her to the end made the journey possible. Time would lead her to the haven; care would make the road a friend; a stout heart was her best ally. Strength of limb and strength of purpose she had, in use and in reserve. No power could have made her turn back willingly. Her anxious eyes were set ahead in the blackness. Her runaway feet were eager in obedience to her will.

"Why couldn't I have put it off until morning?" she was saying to herself as she passed down the graveled drive and advanced to meet the wall of trees that frowned blackly in her face. "What will he think? What will he say? Oh, he'll think I'm such a silly, romantic fool! No, he won't. He'll understand. He'll help me on to Plattsburg tomorrow. But will he think I've done this for effect? Won't he think I'm actually throwing myself at his head? No, I can't turn back. I'd rather die than go back to that house. It won't matter what he thinks. I'll be away from all of it tomorrow. I'll be out of his life, and I won't care what he thinks. England! Goodness! What's that?" She had turned a bend in the drive, and just ahead there was a light. A sigh of relief followed the question. It came from the lantern which hung to a stake in the road where the new stone gate posts were being built by workmen from town. Bazelhurst Villa was a quarter of a mile, through the park, behind her; the forest was ahead.

At the gate she stopped between the half finished stone posts and looked ahead with the first shiver of dismay. Her limbs seemed ready to collapse. The flush of anger and excitement left her face. A white, desolate look came in its stead. Her eyes grew wide, and she blinked her lashes with an awed uncertainty that boded ill for the stability of her adventure. An owl hooted in mournful cadence close by, and she felt her hair was going straight on end. The tense fingers of one hand gripped the handle of the traveling bag, while the other went spasmodically to her heart.

"Oh!" she gasped, moving over quickly to the stake on which the lantern hung. The wind was rushing through the treetops with increased fervor, the air was cool and wet with the signs of rain, a swirl of dust flew up into her face, the swish of leaves sounded like the splashing of water in the air. Holding her heart for minutes, she at last regained some of the lost composure. A hysterical laugh fell from her lips. "What a goose! It was an owl, and I've heard hundreds of them up here. Still, they do sound different outside of one's own room. It's going to rain. What wretched luck! Dear me, I can't stand here all night! How black it is ahead there! O-o-o-h! Really, now, it does seem a bit terrifying. If I only had a lantern it wouldn't be so!" Her gaze fell upon the laborers' lantern that clattered aimlessly, uselessly against the stake. An instant later she had jerked it from its fastenings with a cry of joy. "I'll send it back when they go for my trunks. What luck!"

Without a second's hesitation she started off briskly into the woodland road, striding along with the splendid swing of the healthy Englishwoman who has not been trained to dawdle. Her walking skirt gave free play to her limbs. She was far past the well known "line in the road" before she paused to take a full breath and to recapitulate. Her heart beat faster, and the sudden glow in her cheek was not from the exercise. Somehow, out there alone in the world, the most amazing feeling of tenderness sped on ahead to Randolph Shaw. She tried to put it from her, but it grew and grew. Then she blushed deep within herself, and her eyes grew sweet with the memory of those stolen, reprehensible hours along the frontier. Something within her breast cried out for those shining, gone by moments, something seemed to close down on her throat, something flooded her eyes with a softness that rolled up from her entire being. Their line! Their insurmountable barrier! An absurd yet ineffable longing to fall down and kiss that line came over her with compelling force.

AUTOMOBILE LAWS

It is of course foolhardy to allow a man under the influence of liquor to operate an automobile. But it is almost as foolish to plan legislation for the prohibition of these specific offenses and believe we have solved the problem of a proper regulation of the pleasure vehicles. If there was but a trifle more enforcement of the present laws and less agitation for new statutes governing the operation of autos there would be less chance for a guilty person to obtain a loophole for escape.

Those interested in the auto laws of this state could do much by leaving the present laws alone with the exception of seeing that they were enforced. The "ounce of prevention" is contained in the existing auto rules and if some careless chauffeur knocks a man down with his machine and drives off it is no reason for someone a show of getting legislation to cover running the Legislature and making an accident of that specific nature. There are laws enough, and if they were enforced there would be no need of more.

Every session of the Legislature sees some new measure introduced on the same subject. An illustration of this is the bill making it unlawful to operate an automobile equipped with a device with which the operator can cut off the tail lights. There is already a law on the statute books regarding this offense, which would lead one to believe that rigid enforcement and a prompt trial of all offenders is what is really needed among automobilists.

DANGERS OF A SUMMER-WINTER

Massachusetts has enjoyed a winter that has been decidedly summery, but her residents are beginning to pay for it with severe colds and illness contracted because of the sudden changes in temperature.

One lesson that this freaky winter should have taught most people is the foolhardiness of wearing too much clothing in such mild weather as we have enjoyed this winter. At the unseasonable period just past the ill effects of too much clothing have been noticeable and the resulting colds and sickness have been more predominant than ever.

The wearing of heavy fur overcoats and the thickest of winter clothing during the changeable period we have experienced this winter is just as much a source of sickness as an insufficiency of clothing.

CORN FLAKES VS. THE U. S.

The Sherman anti-trust law has been kicking up quite a fuss among "malefactors of great wealth" and the government's Department of Justice has been hauling over the coals all of the alleged monopolies it can lay its hands on. But there is one suit instituted by the government that seems to most people to be entirely misplaced. We refer to the suit against the Kellogg Toasted Corn Flake Co., of Battle Creek, Mich.

As perhaps most of the public know, this company has protected everyone handling its product by demanding one price for its corn flakes. It has refused to sell to big mail-order houses and some of the big middle men whose competition with the small merchant has in the sale of many goods, made the latter sell without profit. Now, when the Kellogg company comes along and gets what the public considers a fair price for its product and keeps it there, Uncle Sam steps in and pronounces it a trust.

We fail to see the monopoly. There are over a hundred brands of corn flakes on the market, and the housewife is not obliged to buy Kellogg's unless she wishes to. We cannot understand how the Kellogg company has placed an unreasonable restraint upon the traffic in its product. It has a right to ask a fair price and keep it at that figure. The merchants who sell Kellogg's all over the country stand with the company, because it has kept the price up for them. If the government decides against them it means the destruction of the wonderful campaign made by the Kellogg concern. They deserve to win the suit against them.

BRYAN IS "PLACED"

It seems entirely probable that when President Wilson announces definitely whom he has selected in the cabinet the name of William J. Bryan will be found against the berth of Secretary of State. Up to this time Mr. Wilson has said that Bryan is the only man whom he has considered for the position. He is not exacting in the qualifications for the office, apparently, political reasons seemingly directing his selection.

Outside of his reputation as a candidate for the President of the United States and of a lecturer and personal publicity promoter there is but little of Mr. Bryan akin to affairs at Washington. If appointed to the cabinet, his actions will probably be unique, to say the least and his infinite industry and perseverance will not be found lacking.

One might search in vain for a nobler document than Capt. Scott's message to the world in the face of death and disaster. He was a loser, but a heroic one.

NOTICE FROM THE UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

The Department of Agriculture is getting ready to fill requests for the basket willow cuttings grown last year on its experimental farm at Arlington, Va. Distribution of these cuttings takes place early in March each spring, to farmers and others who wish to make trials of basket willow on lands too wet for other crops. From 50 to 100 cuttings are given each person.

The distribution is not a mere giving away of Government material to persons who desire to get something free; because it is required that each recipient of cuttings shall make a report of the treatment given and the results obtained. Several select varieties are included in each set that is distributed, and the aim is to secure information as to the best variety for each locality, since no kind can be relied upon to yield maximum results over a wide range of territory.

In the basket willow investigations carried on at the Arlington Farm, Arlington, Va., and at Ames, Iowa, by the Forest Service, particular attention has been given to the development of American species for basket making purposes. The European species now commonly used have never proved themselves entirely adapted to American conditions and are as a rule less thrifty than the native species. At present there is at Arlington a willow garden containing nearly 500 lots gathered from all parts of the country and representing practically every species and variety found in the United States and Canada.

A system of selection which has been carried on for several years is already indicating which strains show the best basket willow characteristics for American conditions.

HE KNEW

It was the opening of the winter session and the teacher was making up her list of pupils.

"Well, my boy," said she to one youth, "what is your name?"

"Tom," ma'am said the boy promptly.

"That does not sound well," she said; "you should always give the full name. You should have said, 'Thomas.' And what is your name?" she asked, turning to the second boy.

Flushed with the consciousness of having learned something new the young man arose and said proudly: "My name is Jackas."—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Political Pot

Only a few new candidates for any of the offices have appeared this week. No change is made in the list running for selectmen. The old board,—E. S. Knight, Horace Stanley and F. G. Cheever—have two men out against them,—Nathan P. Meldrum and George R. Dean. It looks pretty easy for the two new men, and from the sentiment expressed on all sides the only chace for any member of the old board to win out again this year is given to Frank G. Cheever. It looks very much as though next year's board would be made up of N. P. Meldrum, George R. Dean and Frank G. Cheever.

For assessor Frank G. Cheever, the member whose term expires this year, is a candidate for re-election, and he has running against him Mr. Meldrum, Albert Harraden, and M. E. Gorman.

George E. Hildreth has running against him for the water board John F. Scott, the Beach street plumber. Both have many friends who are working in their interests.

Albert Cunningham is the only man after the School Committee job. His term expires this year.

FLOOD THE FLATS

Editor, North Shore Breeze:

Dear Sir: The time for the Annual Town meeting is drawing near, a time when all who have the best interests of the town at heart should put on their thinking caps and see what can be done to make this beautiful town by-the-sea more popular as a summer resort than it is today. As a resident of more than fifty years I wish to say that I do not leave or enter the town by rail that I do not earnestly wish that the matter of permanently flooding our flats could be hastened. How much it would enhance the beauty and utility of our new park, now well under way! Let us bury whatever petty jealousies exist. We need our summer visitors, they also need us. It is mutual. If we knew them and they knew us, as each one knows his own self, we could quickly get together, giving an impetus to the town, such as it has never known before.

The continuous covering of the flats would make Manchester a more formidable rival of Newport than ever.

Isn't it possible to do something noticeable in this line this year?

A very noticeable improvement has been made by the Boston & Maine in removing the high board fence separating its property near Beach street from J. S. Reed's. For years Mr. Reed's garden, in season, has been one of the prettiest spots in Manchester. So pretty, in fact, that magazines have published pictures of it. The removal of the fence will at least add to the attractiveness of this place. The fence blew over during the big wind storm last month. It was replaced, but since then it has been removed and a wire fence now separates the B. & M. property from Mr. Reed's.

William H. Anderson of the Hotel Warren, Worcester, and friend Claude Campbell of Lynn spent Sunday with the former's grandmother, Mrs. J. C. Elliott on Vine street.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred K. Swett left Monday for New York whence they departed Tuesday by rail for Key West and on to Cuba by boat. They will be in Cuba about two weeks, and expect to return to Manchester about the first week in March.

The new wagon of the forest fire warden has arrived and has been put into commission. It is kept in the rear of the fire department building. It is of a light construction and the body part is partitioned off for fire extinguishers, pails, axes, hose, shovels, and brooms. It has large lights on either side and a large gong is on the dash board. The fire warden will no doubt have great use for it the coming season as forest fires are frequent at that time of the year.

Annual Roll-Call and Supper of Baptist Church, Manchester.

The annual roll-call and supper of the Baptist church, Manchester, took place last Friday evening, at the vestry. Supper was served at 7 o'clock, consisting of cold meats, beans, salads, and pastry. The blessing was asked by Rev. Mr. Harris.

Following the supper came the roll-call, after which informal addresses were made. W. W. Main, secretary of the Baptist Sunday School association was the first speaker. He said that it was always with great pleasure that he accepted an invitation to visit the church in Manchester. "As we listen to the various passages of scripture read here tonight," he said, "we cannot help realizing what a great power the word of God is in this world of ours. Memories roll back upon us tonight as we look about and see the missing faces of many of our old church members, yet we believe we are still marching on and forward like a mighty church of God. Beautiful as the record is today we are looking forward for even a broader and more beautiful record. We Baptists, three million strong, are doing our work nobly both at home and in foreign lands. We are like the flag at my side. Our church stands for the same principles, inspiration, sacrifice, service and liberty. The church is surely built upon all of these principles and it shall ever stand as a challenge to all just as our old glory stands for principle and service."

Deacon Willis A. Pride of Beverly Farms followed, saying that he had come down to extend the good will of the Farms' church, which he said was a sister to the local church. He went back to the time when the Bingham, Willmontons, Cheevers and others were present at these roll-calls, but most all had gone to their reward in heaven, since he had been at the gatherings.

Charles Fleming of Salem followed, in his usual witty strain of speech. He related numerous stories and closed by saying we should be serious as well as jolly on such occasions as these. He spoke of the history of missions and said that some 100 years ago the mission enterprise really started, and we have been enlisting men into the service ever since.

Rev. A. G. Warner closed the evening session with a few remarks upon the needs of the church. "Blessed be the Tie That Binds" was sung by all in closing.

MANCHESTER CLUB HOLDS SUCCESSFUL "LADIES NIGHT."

The Manchester club held another very successful affair on Wednesday evening of this week when the members were privileged to invite the ladies to a sort of "Ladies Night" (informal) at the Congregational chapel to hear William Hooper of West Manchester tell of the Messina Earthquake. Mr. Hooper was in Rome at the time of this great calamity and was one of the famous Relief Committee of the United States that chartered a steamer and went to the rescue of the sufferers.

As a further entertainment feature the committee of the club had the Mendelssohn Trio of Salem, composed of Misses Minnie and Adeline Chapman, violinist and 'cellist, respectively, and Miss Elizabeth Putnam, pianist; also Mr. Johnson, who gave a demonstration on a piano, which the club may later buy.

Mr. Hooper prefaced his hour's talk on the earthquake by a series of pictures showing scenes in Messina and vicinity prior to and after the quake, as well as pictures of the Bion, the German ship chartered by the Relief Committee. Instead of giving an off-hand reminiscent talk on his experience as a member of the committee, Mr. Hooper read a paper prepared by Commander Belknap and read by the latter before a woman's club recently. The paper was very instructive and interesting as to the details of that terrible calamity and the magnificent work of the Americans in giving prompt relief to the sufferers, from the time the ship was chartered and loaded with provisions and clothing until some 2000 houses had been erected in Messina and vicinity for the shelter of the victims.

The selections by the Mendelssohn trio were as follows: "Cujus Anamam," by Jul Weiss; "Fifth Nocturne," by Leybach; "Romance of a Rose," by O'Connor, and "King Mydas Overture," by Eildenberg.

The committee in charge was composed of William Hawkesworth, (chairman); J. N. Lipman, I. E. Irish, Harry Hooper and George R. Dean. Ice cream and fancy crackers and cakes were served after the entertainment. About 125 attended.

On Tuesday, Feb. 18, Miss Ellen Paine Huling will speak on "Labrador Through a Woman's Eyes," at the Manchester Woman's club. Miss Huling is bringing photographs, curios and Eskimo costumes collected in her four visits to the far north which will add interest to her lecture.

Dr. Southand of Wellesley Gives Another Talk Before Arbella Club on Personal Hygiene.

Dr. Southand of Wellesley was in Manchester Tuesday and gave the second of a series of three talks before the girls of the Arbella club at their semi-monthly meeting in the Congregational chapel. There was an attendance of about 70, despite the snow-storm. The president, Miss Mildred Peart presided, and announced as the first number of the afternoon a piano solo by Miss Antoinette Vidal, who rendered with excellent expression "Silvery Waves." Dr. Southand was then introduced. She talked for more than half an hour, giving the young women some very good advice on the care and treatment of the skin. Following Dr. Southand's talk Miss Vidal rendered another piano solo, "Queen of Night." As an encore she rendered, "On the Waves."

At the social hour which brought the afternoon to a close Miss Beth Jewett was hostess.

As Dr. Southand will be unable to come on the next regular meeting day of the club, Feb. 25, the date will have to be changed. A notice will be sent to the members later.

Letters remaining unclaimed at the Manchester P. O. for week ending Feb. 8, 1913. Miss Augusta Anderson, Mrs. Fred Boynton, Rev. Braden, John F. Coughlin, Mrs. Gurdon S. Howe, Peter Healey, Mrs. Benj. Irwin, James Jefferson, Charles E. Kimball, Mrs. Charles Richardson, Mrs. Shea, Snodgrass Clothing Co., (fourth class), James Malcolm.—S. L. Wheaton, P. M.

A charge of 15 cents will be made for each guest. The entertainment will be by the Everett orchestra of Everett, and their reader. There will be refreshments.

LINCOLN HONORED

Lincoln was honored by the patriotic organizations of Manchester,—the W.R.C., S. of V. and G. A. R., when exercises were held last night in the Manchester Town hall. The program consisted of vocal solos and a stirring patriotic speech by William D. Brooks, superintendent of schools of Natick. There were vocal solos by Mrs. Frank G. Cheever of Manchester and Mrs. Stanwood of Gloucester. Miss Margaret Flaherty of Gloucester who has been heard with so much favor in Manchester in the past, gave several readings. Mrs. Martha Stanwood, a grandmother of Louis Hutchinson of the S. of V., read a comic story which made a great hit. She did remarkably well for one who is 76 years old. Rev. A. G. Warner pronounced the benediction. Harry R. Floyd presided.

W. R. C. ENTERTAINMENT

An entertainment was given in the Town hall Wednesday evening under the auspices of the Manchester W. R. C. A program of vocal and instrumental music was given prior to the presentation of a farce, "How the Story Grew," in which the following characters appeared:

Mrs. Brown,	Mrs. Nellie Smith
Mrs. Green,	Mrs. Carrie Cook
Mrs. Bean,	Mrs. Mary Lane
Mrs. Rice, Miss Theresa D'Entremont
Mrs. Doolittle,	Mrs. Mary Lucas
Mrs. Snow,	Miss Annie Younger
Mrs. Taylor,	Mrs. Isabelle Stanley
Mrs. White,	Mrs. Mary Allen

As the name suggests the story of the farce was that of "gossip," and it was full of humor from start to finish, as many funny complications arose as the play advanced. All the parts were well taken.

The rest of the program included: Piano solo, Miss Lillian Lucas; singing, "Doan ye Cry ma Honey," High School Girls' Glee club; reading, Miss Beatrice Brown of Salem; vocal solo, Miss Cornell of Beverly Farms; piano solo, Miss Latons; vocal solo, Mrs. Frank G. Cheever; reading, Miss Brown; vocal solo, Miss Cornell; song, glee club.

The readings of Miss Brown and the selections by the Glee club were especially well rendered, and all the numbers of the program were well given.

The entertainment was given for the benefit of the relief fund of the W.R.C. Mrs. J. S. Reed was chairman of the committee in charge. Dancing brought the evening to a close, with music furnished by Arthur Lodge, pianist, and Joseph Carey, violinist.

Mother (entering bedroom)—Why children, what are crying for?

Bobby—I wanna dink.

Mother—Well, I'll get you a drink. Elsie, what are you crying for?

Elsie—You didn't hear Bobby, mamma, so I was helping him cry.—

"How did you like the actor who played the king?"

"Ever since I saw him I've been in favor of a republic."—Fliegende Blätter.

A FAMILIAR QUOTATION

ORIGIN OF "NOTHING VENTURE, NOTHING GAIN," TRACED TO POET

Answering a query as to the correct form of the quotation, variously expressed, "Nothing venture, nothing win," or "Nothing venture, nothing gain," the Chicago News says:

Strictly speaking, neither is correct as a quotation. The original phrase was used by the English poet Thomas Tusser, who died in 1580, in his "Five Hundred Points of Good Husbandry" he said, "Naught venture, naught have," but much use has changed the phrase to a more euphonious form. Of the two forms named "Nothing venture, nothing win," is the one more generally accepted. Bartlett in his well-known dictionary of quotations gives it as a proverb, but he does not give "Nothing venture, nothing gain."

BRIGHT DEFINITION

A teacher asked a boy the difference between an island and a peninsula. The boy replied "Take a glass of water and a glass of milk. Catch a fly and put it in the water; it will be an island, because it is entirely surrounded by water. Put it in the milk and it will be a peninsular, because it is nearly surrounded by water."—Judge.

It must have been a pleasing surprise to Timothy Sullivan and his daughter, Miss Mollie Sullivan, former residents of Tappan street, Manchester, when they attended a moving picture show in Seattle, Wash., one night last week, to see a picture cast on the screen showing Baker's Island with its light houses, and again in a few minutes to see the Manchester and Beverly Farms shore with its background of wooded hills dotted with houses here and there. In a letter to a friend in Manchester Miss Sullivan tells of the pleasure afforded them. She had read previously in the Breeze of the motion picture company that camped on Mystery Isle late last fall and it all came to her in a moment. Miss Sullivan expects to come east next June to spend the summer in Manchester.

Tonight in the Town hall the February party of the Winter Series will be held. It will be a costume party and will be in many respects the prettiest of the series.

The following note written by ex-Chief of Police Urquhart of this town was noted in the N. Your help has added greatly to the efficiency of my department." Mr. Urquhart sent the operators a large box of confectionery. He is still Chief of the Arlington police force.

JOE MITCHELL CHAPPLE'S TALK ON PROMINENT MEN HIGHLY INTERESTING

Joe Mitchell Chapple, editor of the National Magazine, was in Manchester last Friday evening and entertained at the Town hall in the third of the series of entertainments in the Manchester club course. His "Flashlights of Prominent Men" were indeed flashlights such as nobody but one thoroughly acquainted with the persons alluded to could portray. Mr. Chapple spoke of his acquaintance with several of the leading men of the last generation, by way of introduction, and then gave his audience an opportunity to call for names. Quick as the name was spoken Mr. Chapple would flash off a picture and character study of the man, touching on those little intimacies such as only one with personal knowledge could do. His knowledge of such men is truly wonderful and comes through his years of newspaper and magazine work in Washington and all over the country. Mr. Chapple came to Manchester direct from a 2700-mile journey across the country. He had talked two nights previous in Chicago. Though he complained of being tired he nevertheless was overflowing with his subject and rightly his method of entertainment is called "flashlights." His talk was greatly enjoyed. It lasted two hours, at the conclusion of which everybody was so anxious to meet Mr. Chapple he missed the last train to Boston and had to remain in town over night, a guest of Editor Marshall of the Cricket.

When you meet a sad looking man it's easy to acquire full details of his troubles.

The cold weather the past ten days has changed the ice men's hair back to normal color, and it is safe to conjecture that they have been the happiest men in the community. The Manchester Ice Co. plans to start cutting this morning—and, might we add, we don't blame them if they work over the Sabbath.

That J. Frost Hubbard, formerly in the meat and provision business in Manchester, is meeting with success in the West is evidenced by the following item clipped from the Los Angeles Tribune of Feb. 1: "Thursday evening, at the Hollenbeck hotel, President J. F. Hubbard of the Gem Furniture store, tendered a dinner to its entire staff of employes, as has been the custom of this firm for several seasons. The sales, delivery, warehouse and advertising departments were represented, and in addition several guests of the occasion were present. A social time was enjoyed. The Gem Furniture store has just closed one of the most successful and prosperous years of its history, and has increased its business during the last twelve months practically eighty-five per cent of the previous year's business. The Gem not only does a large local home-furnishing business, but conducts a large and growing mail order trade with out-of-town patrons all over the southwest."

Notice To Voters REGISTRATION

Office of the Board of Registrars of Voters,
Manchester, Mass., Feb. 5, 1913.

Notice is hereby given that the Board of Registrars of Voters will be in session at the office of the Board of Selectmen on Tuesday, Feb. 11, from 7 till 8 o'clock P. M., on Wednesday, the 19th, from 7 till 8 o'clock: also on Friday, Feb. 21st, from 12 a. m. to 10 p. m., for the purpose of receiving evidence of the qualification of persons claiming a right to vote at the election to be held on Monday, March 3, 1913, and of correcting the list of voters.

See that your name is on the Voting List of your town; if not there call at the office of the Board of Registrars on the days above mentioned, and be registered, or you cannot vote. Bring with you a certificate from the assessors or a tax bill or notice from the collector of taxes, showing that you have been assessed a poll tax as a resident of the town of Manchester.

All persons whose names are stricken from the voters' lists for any lawful reason, will, before they can again have their names placed upon said lists, be required to register their names at the time hereinbefore stated in like manner as new voters.

Naturalized citizens presenting themselves for registration must bring their naturalization papers with them.

If a qualified voter of this town whose name was on the voters' list last year, and who has been assessed for the current year, finds after the close of registration that his name is not placed on the voters' list of the current year, by reason of having been omitted by clerical error or mistake, he may upon personal application, have his name placed upon the voting list, or, if application be made on the day of election, he may have a certificate to vote.

No name can be added to the voters' list (except to correct omissions made by clerical error or mistake) after ten (10) o'clock of the evening of Friday, Feb. 21st, at which time registration closes.

By order of the Board of Registrars of voters.

WENHAM

Notable birthdays in February will afford the theme for the morning sermon at the village church Sunday by Rev. F. M. Cutler. At 11.45 a. m., there will be an additional service especially for boys and girls, with music by the girls' choir, and a story by the minister. Boy scouts will attend in uniform. Sunday school at 12.15. Y.P.S.C.E. at 6. A Lincoln day service will be held at 7, with a stereopticon lecture on Lincoln's life.

Wednesday afternoon at 4 the Ladies' society will hold their regular meeting. They will serve a public supper at 6, followed by an entertainment in the form of a "stunt party."

Daniel A. MacKay of Roxbury addressed a large audience at the no-license rally last Sunday evening. While the usual criticism was in order that a larger proportion of voters should be present, still the voters were efficiently represented by their wives who reported at home afterwards. A special choir organized by Miss Alice Patch rendered musical selections. Mr. MacKay urged the importance of no-license work in such a town as Wenham, where saloons are not yet established. Representatives of the liquor trade are constantly trying to secure admission, often working underhandedly. Unless the evils of license are taught, young men go forth from town to work in larger centers with no adequate conception of the saloon's destructive power. Such young men are in danger of giving way when tempted. Rev. F. E. Fribley was present and assisted in the exercises. The Union church and the Episcopal church of South Hamilton accepted invitations to participate in the rally. A citizens' no-license committee was organized at the close of the meeting, to consist of some of the voters present.

For Wenham, at least, the ice famine is broken. Local ice-dealers are happy.

Saturday afternoon the Y.M.C.A. boys took advantage of the perfect skating conditions at Wenham Lake, to meet a team of Danvers Unitarians at hockey. The local team consisted of George Landers, captain; L. Tarr, N. Tarr, Carey, Batchelder, Taylor and J. Flynn. The score was 2-1 in Wenham's favor. The same afternoon John Perkins skated from N. Beverly to Hill's ice-house, a distance of 11-4 miles, in 4 minutes. The world's record for that distance is over 3 minutes.

BANQUET OF BASEBALL ENTHUSIASTS AT BEVERLY FARMS

A most enjoyable occasion, and one attended by more than 100 baseball fans was the banquet held last evening in Marshall's hall, Beverly Farms, tendered by the Beverly Farms Athletic club to the members of last year's ball team. The special guests included Mayor Herman A. MacDonald; Secretary Herman Nickerson of the Boston Nationals; "Stuffy" McInnes, the star first-bagger of the Philadelphia Athletics; Peter Bayson of Beverly; Manager Ralph Stanley of the Manchester team; Alderman Hull; Wilbur E. MacDonald, who did the advertising for last year's ball games, and others.

Lawrence J. Watson, 2d, was the presiding officer and introduced as the first speaker Stephen J. Connolly, who acted as toastmaster and whose introduction of the speakers was done in a most pleasing and entertaining manner. Besides a splendid program of entertainment the following responded when called on for remarks: Mayor MacDonald, Alderman Hull, Herman Nickerson, "Stuffy" McInnes, Peter Bayson, Manager Augustine Callahan, Howard E. Morgan, John M. Publicover, Charles F. Day, Wm. F. McDonald and L. J. Watson, 2d.

The occasion showed that Beverly Farms' sentiment for the encouragement of the great national game for the coming season will not be lacking and that everything will be done to place the team, which had such a remarkable record last year, at the head again next season.

WENHAM.

Wenham sympathy goes out in full measure to the Bragdon children, who lost their father by railroad accident, a few months ago, and whose mother died last week. They are left, while not old enough to support themselves, with no one to care for them except an aged grandmother. Kind friends and neighbors are administering temporary assistance.

It is far worse for a woman to marry a man she can't love than it is for a man to love a woman he can't marry.

BEVERLY FARMS

At the meeting of the base ball committee of the Beverly Farms Athletic club held a few evenings ago, Augustine Callahan was elected manager for the coming season. Mr. Callahan was the manager of last year's team which made a record of 15 games won out of 18.

Edward Higgins, after an absence of 18 years was at the Farms last Sunday renewing acquaintances. He was the guest of John C. McCarthy. Mr. Higgins conducted a bakery at the Farms while he resided here. He has been located a greater part of the time since leaving here at Denver, Col.

Mrs. L. S. Ordway has the sympathy of her friends over the loss of her sister, Mrs. Crockwell, who passed away in Peabody the latter part of last week.

Robert the young son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Gunnivan of West street is reported to be quite ill with pneumonia.

Mrs. Patrick Connell left yesterday for a two weeks' visit with relatives at her former home in Cohasset.

Quite a number from the Farms plan to attend the annual banquet of Liberty Lodge of Masons in Beverly Saturday evening, Feb. 22.

Work is progressing on the new addition to the Beverly Farms Baptist church. The alterations and improvements consist of a new Baptistry and two new rooms, the latter will be used for many purposes, including that of the robing room, a choir room and also as a retiring room for the minister. The rooms will also be used for committee meetings. They can be heated without heating the rest of the building and will be very convenient. The work will cost about $1,000.

Mrs. McDonnell of Clinton is visiting her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. James E. McDonnell, Haskell street.

The entertainment at the School Assembly hall last Friday evening was thoroughly enjoyed by a large audience. The program was a musical one and consisted in part of piano selections by Mrs. J. Langdon Frothingham of Boston, songs by Floyd Neal and choruses by the school children. Each number was liberally applauded.

Many besides members of the church availed themselves of the privilege of hearing a most interesting lecture on "Socialism" by Rev. N. R. Walsh at the evening service Wednesday evening at St. Margaret's church.

The sprite dance was rudely disturbed Monday night about 9.30 when the lovers of the Turkey Trot and Bunny Hug found that there was a brisk fire in progress directly beneath them in Varney's drug store. It is thought that some patron of Saint Nicotine had carelessly left a cigaret stub on the floor, and that this was swept up and placed into a barrel of waste where the blaze was discovered. The fire was easily extinguished with chemicals, but little damage being done.

The picture committee of the Farms Baptist church purchased and placed on the walls of the children's department three new carbon reproductions of religious paintings which are Plackhurst's "The Good Shepherd," "The Nativity" by LeRolle and "Christ and the Doctors" by Hoffman. The pictures are framed uniformly and in harmony with the general finish of the room.

At last Wednesday's meeting in the series of lectures being conducted by the pastor at the Baptist church, on the Life of St. Paul, the subject was "Philip the Apostle." One evening of last week was devoted to a social gathering and instruction class for Italians. The music committee of the church with the assistance of the choir is planning a service of music to take place in the form of a Vesper service Sunday evening, Feb. 23rd. Sunday morning the pastor will preach on "The Manliness of Jesus Christ and the Manly Qualities he required of his Disciples."

The boys of the Pastor's Hour of the local Baptist church are to hold a food sale and play at the chapel this evening. A silver collection will be taken at the door. The affair has been arranged by a group of ladies of the church, of which Mrs. F. W. Varney and Miss Susan Bennett are committee chairmen. The proceeds will be used toward the purchase of a stereopticon outfit.

BOSTON THEATRE

"The Garden of Allah" enters upon the sixth week of a limited engagement at the Boston Theatre Monday. The play is a dramatization of the novel of that name by Robert Hichens. Mary Anderson Navarro, is a co-author of the play. As everybody knows, Mary Anderson de Navarro has been from childhood a devotee of the Roman Catholic church, and it is due to her belief that Hichens' great story, "The Garden of Allah" contains a powerful argument for the sacredness of monastic vows, and their ringing call to the soul to leave the joys of the flesh and return to the cloistered spiritual solitudes of the monastery, that resulted after nine years of thoughtful work in placing "The Garden of Allah" upon the stage. The stage has never seen such a succession of marvels as are shown in "The Garden of Allah." Before a word of the play is spoken, the curtain is unrolled upon a scene in mid-desert, in which a caravan of horsemen, camel-drivers, donkeys and goats, with a long train of Bedouins and Berbere, file across the stage, pausing only for the Mohammedan's daily prayer at sunrise. Amid the groaning of camels, the wailing of children, the bray of tired donkeys and the bleating of goats and sheep. The curtain is dropped and rises again upon an entirely different scene, in which the first act proceeds.

THOMAS A. EDISON'S WONDERFUL TALKING MOVING PICTURES TO BE EXHIBITED AT B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE

Without question the most notable capture ever made by Mr. B. F. Keith for his vaudeville circuit, is the arrangement entered into recently by the "Father of Vaudeville," by which he has contracted to place in all the B. F. Keith theatres throughout the United States the latest and most wonderful invention of the celebrated wizard, Thomas A. Edison. This is Mr. Edison's latest and in many respects his greatest invention, the Kinetophone, or talking motion pictures. This scientific miracle is a perfect combination of his two former triumphs,—the moving picture and the talking machine. The new kinetophone simultaneously projects sound and motion, producing an effect that is really remarkable. It is difficult to believe that the action depicted upon the screen, with the accompanying dialogue, music, and other sounds, are not reality itself. The two functions of this wonderful invention are so perfectly synchronized that the talking moving picture is the marvel of the mechanical world, as well as a source of amusement to the amusement-seeking public. Just as Mr. Keith was the first manager to see the possibilities of Mr. Edison's biograph, and the first to exploit it in New England, so has he secured the first rights to exhibit this latest marvel. The wonderful talking pictures will be shown for the first time in Boston at B. F. Keith's theatre within the next few weeks. The electricians are hard at work installing the machines, and the exact date will be announced shortly in the daily papers.

WHAT IS MEANING OF WORD CADDY?

(1) Is it a corruption of the word "caddy" meaning one who holds the "tee"?

(2) Or is it the diminutive of cad—a small cad?

(3) Or is it from "Kados," the Doric form of the Greek word "Kodos," meaning "one who suffers sorrow or affliction; one who mourns; one who attends a funeral procession"?

(4) Or is it from another Greek word, "Kados," which may mean either "a collecting box" or "a cask containing liquor"?

Some people are as unpopular as a last year's popular song.

A girl doesn't think much of her parents' idea of marriage.

EMPIRE THEATRE, SALEM.

The Lonergan players, the new permanent stock company, will begin an unlimited season at the Empire theatre, Salem, Monday evening, Feb. 17. Since the first announcement some days ago of the coming of this attraction, the box office at the Empire has been besieged with inquiries, as to the personnel of the company, the plays to be presented and other details.

This is the best kind of evidence that there is a demand locally for a company to present the big plays at a moderate price. Lester Lonergan, who directs this company, in addition to one of the Lowell Opera house, is enthusiastic about its merits. Mr. Lonergan has had a long experience in the leading companies in this country, including a two years' engagement in New Bedford. In speaking of the Salem company, Mr. Lonergan was most enthusiastic. He feels certain that Salem is to have an acting company that will rank with any in this country, and only the big plays that have enjoyed long runs in the $2 theatres, with first class companies, will be played.

Grace George's success, "A woman's way," has been selected as the opening bill.

SOCIETY NOTES

Washington B. Thomas of Pride's Crossing has sold the auxiliary schooner "Arbella" to Captain McClurg of Chicago. She was taken from her mooring at Neponset this week and was started on a trip to Bermuda.

◆◆◆

Miss Rosamond Bradley, Miss Alice Cotting, Miss Elizabeth Porter and Mrs. Chas. A. Porter of the Prides-Beverly Farms colony are numbered among those on a yachting cruise to the West Indies and the Panama Canal. They sailed on the Laurentic recently from New York and are due back March 9.

◆◆◆

Norman Prince sailed from New York last Saturday on the Philadelphia for Southampton. He will go to Pau, Southern France, to join his parents who sailed in the late autumn after closing their North Shore estate.

◆◆◆

Miss Katherine Ayer of Boston and Pride's Crossing, who went to New Orleans for the Mardi Gras carnival on Shrove Tuesday, was one of the attendants of the Queen of Rex, impersonated by Miss Dorothy Wilmot, at the "Comus" ball, which, as usual, was given in the old French Opera House. Miss Wilmot's gown was a wonderful piece of art and handwork, the mantle alone, it is said, having cost of a couple of thousand dollars. She has been a frequent visitor of the Ayers on the North Shore.

◆◆◆

When President Taft retires his wife will carry with her one of the handsomest tokens ever presented to a resident of the White House. Just what form the gift will take is as yet not known, but the general belief is that it will be a Tiffany necklace of unique design and great value. It is thought that the presentation will be made when the President and Mrs. Taft leave the Congressional club after the reception to be given in their honor on Feb. 28. The gift will represent the unanimous good will of Washington's official and unofficial citizenship. Miss Mabel Boardman and her sister, Mrs. W. Murray Crane are among those instrumental in bringing this about.

SOCIETY NOTES

Mrs. Wm. D. Sohier of the Beverly Cove colony, sailed on the Berlin last Saturday from New York for Europe via the Mediterranean route.

◆◆◆

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Cabot were among those motoring down from Boston, to their Manchester estate over the last week-end.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE

Farewells are the order of the day at the Boston Opera House, now that the season is fast speeding toward its close. Last Monday Mme. Edvina sang for the last time and sailed for Europe the following morning. This Saturday evening Miss Mary Garden in "Louise" will make her final appearance for the season, leaving immediately after to join the Philadelphia-Chicago Opera Company on its tour to the Pacific coast.

Next week it will be the turn of Mme. Weingartner-Marcel, Felix Weingartner and Vanni Marcoux to say good bye. All three will make their last appearance on Wednesday night, when "Faust" will be sung for the first time this season.

Monday will also be a Weingartner night, as Mme. Weingartner will sing the title role in "Djamileh," a short opera by Bizet, the composer of "Carmen," which will be given its American premiere at that time.

"Djamileh" will be followed by "Pagliacci" in which Mr. Zenatello will sing Canio as he alone can.

On Friday evening Miss Frieda Hempel, the Berlin coloratura soprano whose debut in "The Barber of Seville" a few weeks ago was one of the season's notable events, will return to sing Violetta in "La Traviata."

On Saturday afternoon there will be another matinee of "The Jewels of the Madonna."

The week-end popular performances with the prices of seats reduced in every part of the house, will be resumed on Saturday night, when "Rigoletto" will be sung.

On Sunday Feb. 23d, the soloists at the afternoon concert will be Mme. Lina Cavalieri, Lucien Muratore, and Aline van Baorensen the pianist.

SOCIETY NOTES

Beyond question, a larger number of prominent women of Boston, New York, Philadelphia and other places will appear in the ring showing dogs at the all-breed show of the Eastern Dog club, to be held in Mechanic's Building, Boston, Feb. 25-28, than ever before in Boston. Mrs. Malcolm Whitman, who was Miss Jennie Crocker, San Francisco's greatest heiress, and owner of Wonderland kennels, brought from the Western Coast in a special car at the time of her marriage to the Brookline man, will show several dogs. Miss Hope Gaston, daughter of Col. W. A. Gaston, is the youngest owner and exhibitor. She will personally show her Pekinese that was bought for her by her father while the family were in China last year. Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, of New York, wife of the celebrated illustrator, will show her great assembly of White West Highland terriers. Miss Edith Deacon of Boston and Newport, after the death of her fiance, George Lee Peabody, went in to some extent in the dog show game, and last year her fox terriers cleaned up at the Newport show. She will have her dogs in competition in Boston. Mrs. Robert Jordan, like many other women, favors the Pekinese, and she will show that breed. Others who are prominent and will show dogs are Mrs. Arnold Lawson, Mrs. Herbert Mason of Ipswich and Boston, Mrs. Harold W. Read of Cambridge, Miss Maud Kennedy of Long Island, N. Y.; Mrs. A. Henry Higginson, Mrs. George H. Post, of Bronxville, N. Y.; Mrs. Rainey of Huntington, Long Island, N. Y.; Mrs. Gaspar Bacon, daughter-in-law of Robert Bacon, former ambassador to France; Miss Elsie Dorr of Boston, Mrs. J. L. Frothingham of Beverly Farms, Mrs. Jack Minturn of Syosset, Long Island, N. Y.; Mrs. Hollis Hunsnewell of Wellesley.

Augustus P. Loring of Pride's Crossing, who spends a part of each summer at one of the many little islands on the Maine coast, has had a 33-ft. government launch converted into a cargo boat for use in carrying supplies to the island. Power will be supplied by a 25-h. p. motor.

THE RAMBLER

Little things that create favorable impressions are often overlooked by men who in most things are considered exacting. A printed letter head from a local business man lies before me as I write, and I wonder why such a specimen of the printer's art, or, rather, lack of art, could be accepted by any observing person. It has a smeared, smoochy look and is printed with too much impression. It may seem like a trifling matter to some, but in these days when good printers are available to all, there is no excuse for accepting such poor work. It is, of course, possible to overdo the matter of your business letter heads, but the average person today knows a good thing when he sees it, and oftentimes forms an opinion of a business house and its system by just such little things as stationery. It pays to go to a real printer rather than the sort that throws cheap ink at a cheaper quality of paper and palms it off as a letter head.

"The newspapers all over the country that are charging Salem with opposing the erection of the Hawthorne memorial are not aware of the fact that there has not been the slightest attempt at organized opposition to the movement. Salem is broad and charitable enough to appreciate genius and ability. Simply because one correspondent has persisted in hammering the proposed memorial, it is not right to declare that the community as a whole is in opposition. When that memorial is unveiled, Salem will demonstrate to the world that she can rise above the pettiness that marks some individuals and communities."

—Salem News.

I believe that the fellow who sent me that paper from Palm Beach did so with malice aforethought. Think of receiving a suggestion from that balmy, charmy, palmy beach at a time when we poor northerners are living the lives of esquimaux! After hoofing my way to the postoffice long before the sun had peeped up, with no accompaniment other than the grating, grinding, whining sounds of the milk wagons' wheels on the snow covered ground, I picked this strange paper from my morning mail. Even then it seemed warm with the glow of a southern sun. After several stabs with my benumbed fingers it was opened for inspection. Coming from Florida you can imagine the sort of airy, fairy summer-like news it contained. I will reproduce one little paragraph from that publication that made me feel like the kid at the candy store window when he made the remark that "it's hell to be poor." In describing the beauties of Palm Beach and vicinity this paper went on to say:

"It is fanned by gentle breezes from gulf and ocean and tempered by winds that blow over tropic seas. It is the heaven-blessed land of sea and sunshine. It is the country of the long-leaf pine and a land where—" Well, I read as far as that, had another shiver all to myself, went out and found the Breeze thermometer flirting with the figure that represents my income tax, and now I am willing to leave it to my readers, if it isn't a raw deal to send such literature into this Arctic atmosphere.

Her head grew light with the thought of those moments when their horses stood with muzzles together as if kissing by proxy—the flush grew deeper, though her blood went cold and she trembled.

A pitiful confusion seized her, an inexplicable timidity crept into her heart, replacing the bold assurance that had been recklessly carrying her on to him. It was as though some one had whispered the truth into her ear and she was beginning to believe.

From that moment her courage began to fail. The glow from her lantern was a menace instead of a help. A sweet timorousness enveloped her and something tingled—she knew not what.

Spattering raindrops whizzed in her face, ominous forerunners from the inkv sky. The wind was whistling with shrill glee in the treetops and the treetops tried to flee before it. A mile and a half lay between her and the big cottage on the hillside—the most arduous part of the journey by far. She walked and ran as though pursued, scudding over the road with a swiftness that would have amazed another, but which seemed the essence of slowness to her. Thoughts of robbers, tramps and wild beasts assailed her with intermittent terrors, but all served to diminish the feeling of shyness that had been interfering with her determination.

Past Renwood's cottage she sped, shuddering as she recognized the stone steps and path that ran up the hillside to the haunted house. Ghosts, witches and hobgoblins fell into the procession of pursuers, cheered on by the shrieking wind that grew more noisome as her feet carried her higher up the mountain. Now she was on new ground. She had never before explored so far as this. The hill was steep and the road had black abysses out beyond its eedgs.

She was breathless, half dead from fatigue and terror, when at last her feet stumbled up the broad steps leading to his porch. Trembling, she sank into the rustic bench that stood against the wall. The lantern clattered to her feet, and the bag with her jewels, her letter of credit and her curling irons slid to the floor behind the bench. Here was his home! What cared she for the storm?

Even as she lay there gasping for breath, her eyes on the shadowy moon that was breaking its way through the clouds, three men raced from the stables at Bazelhurst Villa, bent on finding the mad young person who had fled the place. Scarcely knowing what direction he took, Lord Bazelhurst led the way, followed by the duke and the count, all of them supplied with carriage lamps, which at any other time would have been sickening in their obtrusiveness. Except for Lady Evelyn the rest of the house slept the sleep of ease.

Gradually Penelope recovered from the effects of the mad race up the hill. The sputtering flame in the lantern called her into action. Clutching it from the floor of the porch, she softly began a tour of inspection, first looking at her watch to find that it was the unholy hour of 2. Had some one yelled "Boo!" she would have swooned, so tense was every nerve. Now that she was here, what was she to do? Her heart came to her mouth, her hand shook, but not with fear; a nervous smile tried to wreak disaster to the concern in her eyes.

The house was dark and still. No one was stirring. The porch was littered with rugs and cushions, while on a small table near the end stood a decanter, a siphon and two glasses. Two? He had said he was alone except for the housekeeper and the servants. A visitor, then. This was not what she had expected. Her heart sank. It would be hard to face the master of the house, but—a stranger? Cigarette stubs met her bewildered, troubled gaze—many of them. Deduction was easy out there in the lonely night. It was easy to see that Shaw and his companion sat up so late that the servants had gone to bed.

Distractedly she looked about for means of shelter on the porch until daylight could abet her in the flight to the village beyond. The storm was sure to come at no far distant time. She knew and feared the violence of the mountain rains.

"By all that's holy," came in a man's voice, low toned and uncertain. "It isn't a dream, after all!"

She turned like a flash, with a startled exclamation and an instinctive movement as if to shield herself from unbidden gaze. Her lips parted, and her heart pounded like a hammer. Standing in the doorway was Randolph Shaw, his figure looming up like a monstrous, wavering genie in the uncertain light from the shaking lantern. His right hand was to his brow, and his eyes were wide with incredulous joy. She noticed that the left sleeve of his dinner jacket hung limp and that the arm was in a white sling beneath.

"Is it really you?" he cried, his hand going instinctively to his watch pocket as if doubting that it was night instead of morning.

"I've—I've run away from them!" she stammered. "It's 2 o'clock. Don't look. Oh, I'm so sorry now! Why did I?"

"You ran away?" he exclaimed, coming toward her. "Oh, it can't be a dream! You are there, aren't you?" She was a pitiable object as she stood there, powerless to retreat, shaking like a leaf. He took her by the shoulder. "Yes, it is you. Good Lord, what does it mean? What has happened? How did you come here? Are you alone?"

"Utterly, miserably alone! Oh, Mr. Shaw!" she cried despairingly. "You will understand, won't you?"

"Never! Never as long as I live. It is beyond comprehension. The wonderful part of it all is that I was sitting there dreaming of you—yes, I was. I heard some one out here, investigated and found you—you, of all people in the world. And I was dreaming that I held you in my arms. Yes, I was. I was dreaming it!"

"Mr. Shaw! You shouldn't!"

"And I awoke to find you—not in my arms, not in Bazelhurst Villa, but here—here on my porch."

"Like a thief in the night," she murmured. "What do you think of me?"

"Shall I tell you—really?" he cried. The light in his eyes drove her back a step or two, panic in her heart.

"I suppose you think I'm perfectly crazy."

"N—no, no—not now!" she gasped, but a great wave of exaltation swept through her being. He turned and walked away, too dazed to speak. Without knowing it, she followed with hesitating steps. At the edge of the porch he paused and looked into the darkness.

"By Jove, I must be dreaming," she heard him mutter.

"No, you are not," she declared desperately. "I am here. I ask your protection for the night. I am going away—to England—tomorrow. I couldn't stay there—I just couldn't. I'm sorry I came here—I'm"—

"Thank heaven, you did come," he exclaimed, turning to her joyously. "You are like a fairy—the fairy princess come true. It's unbelievable! But—but what was it you said about England?" he concluded, suddenly sober.

"I am go-going home. There's no place else. I can't live with her," she said, a bit tremulously.

"To England—at once? Your father—will he?"

"My father? I have no father. Oh!" with a sudden start. Her eyes met his in a helpless stare. "I never thought. My home was at Bazelhurst castle—their home. I can't go there. Good heavens, what am I to do?"

CHAPTER VII.

"They are after me!"

LONG afterward she recalled his exultant exclamation, checked at its outset—recalled it with a perfect sense of understanding. With rare good taste he subdued whatever it was that might have struggled for expression and simply extended his right hand to relieve her of the lantern.

"We never have been enemies, Miss Drake," he said, controlling his voice admirably. "But had we been so up to this very instant I am sure I'd surrender now. I don't know what has happened at the villa. It doesn't matter. You are here to ask my protection and my help. I am at your service, my home is yours, my right hand also. You are tired and wet and—nervous. Won't you come inside? I'll get a light in a jiffy and Mrs. Ulrich, my housekeeper, shall be with you as soon as I can rout her out. Come in, please." She held back doubtfully, a troubled, uncertain look in her eyes.

"You will understand, won't you?" she asked simply.

"And no questions asked," he said from the doorway. Still she held back, her gaze going involuntarily to the glasses on the table. He interpreted the look of inquiry. "There were two of us. The doctor was here picking out the shot, that's all. He's gone. It's all right. Wait here and I'll get a light." The flame in her lantern suddenly ended its feeble life.

"Dark as Egypt, eh?" he called out from the opposite side of the room.

"Not as dark as the forest," Mr. Shaw.

"Good heavens, what a time you must have had. All alone, were you?"

"Of course. I was not eloping."

"I beg your pardon."

"Where were you sitting when I came up?"

"Here—in the dark. I was waiting for the storm to come and dozed away, I daresay. I love a storm, don't you?"

"Yes, if I'm indoors. Ah!" He had struck a match and was lighting the wick of a lamp beside the huge fire place.

"I suppose you think I'm perfectly crazy. I'm horrid."

"Not at all. Sit down here on the couch, please. More cheerful, eh? Good Lord, listen to the wind! You got here just in time. Now, if you'll excuse me I'll have Mrs. Ulrich down in a minute. She'll take good care of you. And I'll make you a nice hot drink too. You need it." In the door of the big living room he turned to her, a look of extreme doubt in his eyes.

"By Jove, I bet I do wake up. It can't be true." She laughed plaintively and shook her head in humble self abasement. "Don't be lonesome. I'll be back in a minute."

"Don't hurry," she murmured apologetically. Then she settled back limply in the wide couch and inspected the room, his footsteps noisily clattering down the long hallway to the left. She saw, with some misgiving, that it was purely a man's habitation. Shaw doubtless had built and furnished the big cottage without woman as a consideration. The room was large, comfortable, solid. There was not a suggestion of femininity in it—high or low—except the general air of cleanliness. The furniture was rough hewn and built for use, not ornamentation. The walls were hung with English prints, antlers, mementoes of the hunt and the field of sport. The floor was covered with skins and great "carpet rag" rugs. The whole aspect was so distinctly mannish that her heart fluttered ridiculously in its loneliness. Her cogitations were running seriously toward riot when he came hurriedly down the hall and into her presence.

"She'll be down presently. In fact, so will the cook and the housemaid. Gad, Miss Drake, they were so afraid of the storm that all of them piled into Mrs. Ulrich's room. I wonder at your courage in facing the symptoms outdoors. Now I'll fix you a drink. Take off your hat—be comfortable. Cigarette? Good! Here's my sideboard. See? It's a nuisance, this having only one arm in commission; affects my style as a barkeep. Don't stir; I'll be able"—

"Let me help you. I mean, please don't go to so much trouble. Really I want nothing but a place to sleep to-night. This couch will do—honestly. And some one to call me at daybreak, so that I may be on my way." He looked at her and laughed quizzically. "Oh, I'm in earnest, Mr. Shaw. I would not have stopped here if it hadn't been for the storm."

"Come, now, Miss Drake, you spoil the fairy tale. You did intend to come here. It was the only place for you to go, and I'm glad of it. My only regret is that the house isn't filled with chaperons."

"Why?" she demanded with a guilty start.

"Because I could then say to you the things that are in my heart—aye, that are almost bursting from my lips. I—I can't say them now, you know," he said, and she understood his delicacy. For some minutes she sat in silence, watching him as he clumsily mixed the drinks and put the water over the alcohol blaze. Suddenly he turned to her with something like alarm in his voice. "By George, you don't suppose they'll pursue you?"

"Oh, wouldn't that be jolly? It would be like the real story book—the fairy and the ogres and all that. But," dubiously, "I'm sorely afraid they consider me rubbish. Still"—looking up encouragingly—"my brother would try to find me if he—if he knew that I was gone."

To her surprise, he whistled softly and permitted a frown of anxiety to creep over his face. "I hadn't thought of that," he observed reflectively. Then he seemed to throw off the momentary symptoms of uneasiness, adding, with a laugh: "I daresay nothing will happen. The storm would put a stop to all idea of pursuit."

"Let them pursue," she said, a stubborn light in her eyes. "I am my own mistress, Mr. Shaw. They can't take me, willy nilly, as if I were a child, you know."

"That's quite true. You don't understand," he said slowly, his back to her.

"You mean the law? Is it different from ours?"

"Not that. The—er—situation. You see, they might think it a trifle odd if they found you here—with me. Don't you understand?" He turned to her with a very serious expression. She started and sat bolt upright to stare at him comprehensively.

"You mean—it—it isn't quite—er"—

"Regular perhaps," he supplied. "Please keep your seat. I'm not the censor. I'm not even an opinion. Believe me, Miss Drake, my only thought was and is for your good."

"I see. They would believe evil of me if they knew I had come to you," she mused, turning quite cold.

"I know the kind of people your sister-in-law has at her place, Miss Drake. Their sort can see but one motive in anything. You know them, too, I dare say."

PARENT-TEACHER ASSOC.

ANNUAL MEETING HELD WEDNESDAY EVENING

The annual meeting of the Manchester Parent-Teacher association was held Wednesday evening at the Price Primary school. After the reading of the records by Secretary Miss Lila Goldsmith, Mrs. Hattie Baker, the president, called on Mrs. D. T. Beaton, who is vice-president of the Mass. Branch of the Congress of Mothers, to say something on Founders Day of the association, which was observed Feb. 17.

In presenting her report for the year Miss Goldsmith said that the local association was organized in Feb. 1910, and it now has a membership of 115. Treasurer F. J. Merrill reported the expenditures of the year as $35.61, and a cash balance of $27.01.

The following officers were elected: Mrs. Hattie Baker, president; Miss Theresa Walsh, vice-pres.; Miss Lila G. Goldsmith, secretary; F. J. Merrill, treasurer. Program committee:

Mr. Mackin, A. Cunningham, Miss E. Gertrude Gray, Miss Edna Parker, Mrs. A. G. Warner; social committee, Mrs. George Northrup, Miss Lilla Algers, Mrs. George Evans, Mrs. Alfred Parsons, Mrs. Thomas Baker, Mrs. Frank A. Rowe, Mrs. Chas. W. Fritz, Mrs. C. M. Dodge, Mrs. Robert Baker and Miss Lena Jones; invitation committee, Mrs. James Salter, Mrs. Charles E. Bell and Mrs. John Baker.

On motion of A. L. Saben the thanks of the society was extended to all the officers of the last year for carrying through the work so successfully.

An invitation was read from the Arbella club to attend their meeting to be held next Tuesday at four o'clock in the Town hall.

Miss Antionette Vidal rendered two piano solos, with much expression,—“The Queen of Night,” and “Silvery Waves.”

It was voted to appropriate $5 for the Child Welfare campaign of the Congress of Mothers.

The president called on John Chapman, president of the North Shore Horticultural society, to explain the plan of the society to interest the school children in gardens. He said the members of the society had thus far been doing most of its work among themselves, holding discussions, exhibitions, and the like, and now they wanted to do something to help others. It was the plan to have a parcel of ground set aside and divide it up into small parcels some 8x12 feet and let the children have an opportunity to do work for themselves. Prizes would be offered the children at the exhibitions of the society.

Eric H. Wetterlow spoke along the same line, and expressed the hope that all would do their best to bring this thing about. The children ought to be taught how to plant and till the soil.

The social hour followed, ice cream and cake being served.

HATTIE PARSONS ALLEN

Miss Hattie Parsons Allen died last Saturday, Feb. 15, at her home on Bridge street, Manchester, at the age of 67 years. Miss Allen had suffered a shock the previous Sunday while attending the Congregational church.

Miss Allen was born in Manchester in May, 1846, the daughter of the late Henry Parsons Allen, who was engaged in the furniture manufacturing business in Manchester. She was a direct descendant of the William Allen who was one of the original settlers.

For forty years Miss Allen sang in the Congregational church choir, under the late David B. Kimball. She was a member of the church and its many affiliated organizations, and she was always actively and sincerely interested in church work.

She is the last of her family, her nearest relatives being a first cousin, Mrs. Isaac Richardson, and a second cousin Benjamin L. Allen of Manchester. There are two other cousins, Mrs. Erward Flint in Cambridge, and Edward Potter in Boston.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at the Congregational church, which was crowded. Rev. C. Arthur Lincoln, formerly a pastor here, now of Lowell, and Rev. A. G. Warner of the Baptist church, officiated. Mr. Lincoln paid a splendid tribute to the deceased.

A quartet consisting of Mrs. A. E. Hersey, Mrs. Harry Davis, F. J. Merrill and A. L. Saben, sang several selections. There was a profuse display of flowers. Burial in Union cemetery.

INDICTING COMMON SENSE

(From the Railway Age Gazette).

The grand jury that is investigating the New England railroad situation continues from time to time to indict President Mellen of the New Haven, and President Chamberlin of the Grand Trunk. Every time it indicts them it also indicts common sense. It indicts economy and efficiency in railway operation. It indicts the economic opinion of the age. Either that, or it indicts the Sherman anti-trust law, the Congress that passed it, the Congresses that have failed to amend it, and the public opinion that has elected and sustained these Congresses. The Railway Age Gazette has already commented on the relations of the New Haven and New England. We are here concerned with the question of a competitive railroad system in New England versus a co-ordinated, unified one.

Competition was to be produced by the construction by the Grand Trunk of the Southern New England into a territory practically all of which was already well supplied with mileage. The new line for a long time would have been a bridge across New England. It would have been expensive to build. It would have lacked adequate feeders. It would have had few tracks into industries. Therefore, it would seem that it would long have been unprofitable. President Hays of the Grand Trunk thought it desirable to build it. President Chamberlin, who succeeded him, did not. He believed it better for the Grand Trunk to get in over the New Haven's tracks. If the Southern New England should be built, there would be a new railroad which the traffic of New England would have to support. It is fairly obvious that it costs more to support two railroads than one. If a railroad opens new territory the traffic created, and which otherwise would not be developed, will support it. If it enters old territory already having a large mileage of railway it must live by attracting traffic already moving, or that would move, by the existing lines. In the former case it renders a public service. In the latter case it causes economic waste. The Grand Trunk extension seems, in the main, to fall within the latter category.

There are some things that would be worse than excessive railroad competition and the economic waste that it causes. One of these would be an unregulated railroad monopoly which was inefficiently managed, was arbitrary with the public and gave it poor service for which it charged high rates. The New Haven is not inefficiently managed. Its rates are not excessive. It is not unregulated, and if the public interest requires further regulating of it, this can be done. Its management has been somewhat arbitrary, but regulation and public opinion can curb this. Its service has been good in most ways and deficient in others, but will not be improved by its dismemberment. On the contrary, the railway service of New England will not be made the best it can be, or, in the long run, improved at all, by breaking up the New Haven system and developing general competition. The best service can be secured at the least cost by completing the co-ordination and unification of the existing New England railroad system. These things would make it practicable to adapt the service of each community to its needs, to route traffic by the most direct lines, to develop terminals where most needed.

This kind of co-ordination, unification and development, while incompatible with competition in construction, is not incompatible with some competition in service. Mr. Mellen's theory is that the New Haven is a great terminal yard which all the railroads that want to enter New England should be allowed to use with their trains. He would let the Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific in from Canada on the same terms. He would let the railways of the United States in on the same terms. There would be no difficulty in carrying out this plan if Mr. Mellen's terms to the other railways should be reasonable; and the fact that the Grand Trunk shows willingness to accept them indicates that they are. The advantage of competition in service would be secured, while the disadvantage of economic waste by competitive construction would be avoided. This is not merely Mr. Mellen's plan. It is opposed by those who study and discuss the New England railroad situation as agitators, but endorsed by those who study and discuss it disinterestedly and with public spirit. One of these is Professor Bruce Wyman, of the Harvard Law school. Professor Wyman says in an article in the Boston Transcript of January 29: "Believing in unification of our railroads as I do, I am convinced that we can get better service from a single system than we could ever hope for from separate roads."

But whatever thoughtful men who devote their lives to the study of subjects such as this may believe, a large part of the public still believes that we should go on regulating railways, both by laws that aim to compel them to compete and by administrative bodies that make it hard or impossible for them to compete. The public still believes that it can perform the great equestrian feat of riding two horses running rapidly in opposite directions. Many public men still think so too. So long as the public and public men so think, doubtless we shall keep on our statute books utterly inconsistent laws for the regulation of the railroads. And so long as this is the case the grand juries will continue to grind out true bills indicting common sense.

DAVID LIVINGSTONE

Coming Centenary of Great Explorer-Missionary.

The coming centenary of the birth of one of the world's greatest missionaries, brings to mind the fact that it is about a century ago that America first began to take a systematic interest in foreign missions. It is rather interesting to know that one man—Adinoram Judson—took part in bringing about the organization of two great missionary societies.

Judson with three other young men made application to the Congregational Association of Massachusetts for funds to carry the Gospel to the heathen. The result of this application was the organization of the American Board of Foreign Missions of the Congregational church. Judson was sent out to India by this board in 1812. Shortly after reaching Burmah he joined the Baptist denomination and the American Baptist Missionary society was organized to help support him in his work.

This society is making great preparations for celebrating the centenary of its birth next year. They are going to charter a vessel and a large company will visit this year the missionary fields of the world.

They will hold special services in Burmah in commemoration of the one hundred years work in India of this society. After touring the world they will return to Boston in May 1914 where a great centenary celebration is planned.

David Livingstone was born in Scotland, March 19, 1813. Even as a boy he was a great lover of nature. It is said of him that "before the age of ten he had wandered over all the Clyde banks about Blantyre and had begun to collect and wonder at flowers and shells."

He had also received a prize for being able to repeat the 119 Psalm "with only five hitches." He had a tender heart and was very fond of his mother and tried to help her in many ways. He used to often sweep the house for her. He was very thorough in his work. His mother said when sweeping the room he would sweep "even under the door-mat."

At ten years of age he began work in a cotton mill. There was at that time no law against child labor. The hours were long, for he started work at six a. m., and left off work at 8 p. m. With his first week's wages he bought a Latin grammar. He persevered so well that he was reading Virgil and Horace before he was sixteen. He was always very much interested in science and when he became a spinner in the mill at nineteen he saved money so he could attend lectures at Glasgow University on medicine Greek and Divinity.

A missionary society was started in the village and became much interested in missions. At first he wanted to go on his own responsibility as a medical missionary to China.

He changed his mind and applied to the London Missionary society for work in the foreign field and was accepted. He received his medical degree from Glasgow University and on Dec. 8, 1840, started for Africa. His decision to go to the "dark continent" had been brought about through the influence of Dr. Moffat the great missionary to Africa.

A few years later he married Mary Moffat, the daughter of the missionary. He spent his whole life in Africa except for two visits home. He was lost for several years in the heart of the continent and found by Henry M. Stanley. He would not return with him choosing rather to stay and try and complete some work he wished to accomplish. Stanley was the last white man who saw him alive.

He was at Ilala on his way to explore the source of the Nile when he died. He was found dead kneeling by his bed.

David Livingstone was one of the world's great men. He did more than any other man in stopping the traffic in slaves in Africa. He explored the river Zambesi and discovered the Victoria Falls. He hardly ever failed to overcome the hostility of the native tribes in his work among them for he was a very loveable man. His native servants thought so much of him that they spent three months in carrying his body from the centre of the continent to Zanibar. From there it was taken to England by "a Ship of the Line." His bones now rest in Westminster Abbey. It is said that no tomb in the Abbey is so often visited as his. Next month the missionary societies and the scientific societies will meet to do honor to his memory. And what a change has come over the world during the past hundred years in regard to its attitude to missions. Last year "the churches of Christendom" gave over $30,000,000 for missions and of this amount over half was given by the United States and Canada.

Those interested in the life of the great missionary to Africa may learn much about him by reading "David Livingstone" by Thomas Hughes. This small book gives the principal facts of his life. "Missionary Travels and Researches in South Africa," written by Livingstone himself makes very fascinating reading. He also kept journals during part of his travels. These have been published under the title of "Livingstone's Last Journal."

The standard life of Livingstone by "Blakie" has just been ordered for the library and we hope to have it in a few days. There are also articles on Livingstone in the various encyclopedias to be found at the library. With the help of the above-named books one may learn much about this heroic character.

ON THE "GOLD COAST"

A reason for the high cost of living that is rightly termed peculiar by the Salem News, although indorsed by that paper, is indeed novel, to say the least. To quote the Witch City journal: "Wealthy summer residents who come to the North Shore from New York, Pittsburg, Chicago and other centres of wealth, set the pace for costs of high living along the 'gold coast' of the North Shore."

It is claimed that the "pace set" by our wealthy visitors has a marked influence upon the permanent residents of the Shore, in that "they find their standards of living judged by the standards set by men of wealth."

The residents of any community should welcome any raise in the standard and reputation of their town, no matter whence comes the incentive. And it is safe to say that any influence which the wealthy summer residents have made upon the permanent residents on the Shore has not been detrimental to the interests of the latter. It is sometimes a good thing for small townships to have high standards to measure up to. It keeps them from getting into a rut, and to have the North Shore anything but what it now is, a beautiful summer resort, would be a slighting rebuke to Nature's gifts.

The summer residences built by and peopled by those on the so-called "gold coast," do not raise false ambitions in the breasts of the permanent citizens; they rather give them an added reason for being proud of their towns. The "permanent" residents have much to thank the wealthy summer residents in this section, for if a higher standard of living is apparently set, it is confined within the limits of those who can best afford such a standard. There is no fear of the permanent residents "apeing the luxuries" of the wealthy people. Their motives in life and mode of living are not unlike those of other persons in the same surrounding environment. It is hard to see where the wealthy residents' presence raises the general high cost of living. Of course there might be something said of the "cost of high living."

THE VALUE OF LIBRARIES

"Read some books for no other earthly reason than you want to, and the man who does not want to read at all—may the Lord have mercy on his mind!" was the counsel of President Faunce of Brown University to some students who were looking for advice in connection with their college training. This man of letters demonstrated to his charges that they could in the long run get more out of the college library than would be possible from the lecture room or laboratory. And in like manner every man, woman and child should realize that a college university extension course is really open to him in a good public library.

Every good library in a city or town is really giving the advantages obtained in the average university extension course. There is of course that lack of proper guidance and selection of proper books for study which goes with the extension course. But many libraries are now giving this guidance to their patrons, so that a great deal more can be gleaned from the volumes which interest the student than if he had no outside aid whatever.

It is this guidance which makes the resident course at a university so helpful. His selections of books and his interpretation of their varied meanings are so carefully looked after that he gets much more good out of his studies. The frequenter of the average public library is of course without guidance of any sort and gets but comparatively few privileges.

But the resident of any city or town should not neglect too much the library course. It is his as long as he pleases to take it, and his hundreds and thousands of teachers are within the leaves of the books without money and without price. It is his own fault if he ignores his chance.

THE BLUFFING PREACHER

A rabid, notoriety-seeking minister of the gospel is about the most despicable character that the world affords, and we have had an instance of this type in the "Rev." Cady of Boston, who has been filling the newspapers full of his rantings on the management of affairs at the State Prison in Charlestown. Apparently District Atty. Pelletier saw the bluff that the minister was getting publicity on, and he very effectively squelched the unworthy divine by summoning him to his office and making him prove his charges or be "en silence."

We had enough of muck-raking ministers during the Ettor trial at Salem, and such outbursts as that of Dr. Cady are apparently uncalled for, inasmuch as he has been unable to prove a single assertion that he made. The preacher is supposed to be well booked on preaching, teaching and counseling charity, but he had better read up the libel laws before he ventures further into his "reform" work. When Dr. Cady talks as he has he is to be placed in a certain list of "undesirables" we have heard about before.

TO HELP THE CONSUMER

Wisconsin never seems satisfied to let things drift. The higher cost of living is felt as acutely there as anywhere else, and a movement has already developed in the Legislature at Madison to try to correct part of the evil by law.

A bill now before the lower house provides that the State Industrial Commission shall prepare and publish a list of persons who wish to buy produce from the farmers direct. The list is to be made up from applications filed by such persons on blanks provided by the State. An effort will be made to confine the list to those who are responsible and will deal in good faith. The bill provides that any farmer who is a citizen of Wisconsin can obtain the list, and by this means can open a direct avenue to purchase through the parcel post or other means.

It will be interesting to see how this practical experiment will work, if the plan is adopted, in a field with which State governments usually have little to do.

Sylvia Pankhurst is again in the toils. It is a question of whether the government is being protected or is protecting her while she is in jail.

Incidentally, as a matter of information, we learn that the Old Burying Ground lot is still the property of the Town.

EITHER LIVE UP TO THE LAW, OR VOTE "YES," SAYS CORRESPONDENT
Editor North Shore Breeze,

Dear Sir:

Since reading your notes in the "Political Pot," I have thought about the law enforcement in Police circles. It is a fact that nearly every year the voters are called upon to vote for selectmen who apparently must be pledged to this or that candidate for the High Office of the Chief of Police. Do we really need such an official? But to turn an election upon this personal issue is not so bad; the lamentable thing about it all is that really we are insincere about this matter of "No" and "YES" with regard to the sale of liquors. The larger number simply to suppress the open-saloon vote "No," and wish nothing further done with regard to the enforcement of the law covering this result of the vote. Some business men, easing conscience and neglecting principle, are listed on this side, which is not right if we honestly intend our votes to be recorded with the true views of good citizenship in mind.

Otherwise let us vote "Yes," make the license fee high, and then regulate the traffic according to the specific terms which we will then grant.

Why should one store suffer a raid when it is common talk that other places are "easy" when you come to purchase material of a liquid nature?

Let the voters shoulder all the responsibility which is theirs and give the officials to understand that we do not desire or sanction partial enforcement of law.

Be honest in your voting.

CITIZEN C.

Bookkeeper (to boss)—Mr. Grouch, I'm going to get married.

Grouch—Glad to hear it. You won't be so all-fired anxious to get home early.—Business.

MANCHESTER SECTION

Friday, February 21, 1913.

MANCHESTER

The Breeze office will not be open tomorrow, on account of the holiday.

Miss Bertha Haskell arrived home from her trip to Washington last Saturday.

Miss Gertrude Ryan plans to begin training for a nurse at the Lowell General hospital early in March.

Mr. and Mrs. William Allen are at Bolton, Mass., for the holiday the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Randall.

Mrs. Albert Smith returned home from the Beverly hospital last Saturday after an operation, greatly improved.

Miss Anna Maslin, who has been visiting friends at Dorchester, returned to her duties at the telephone exchange Monday.

The many friends of Mrs. Wm. C. Rust are glad to see her out again after a prolonged illness. She is able to walk out a little each day.

The following names were added to the voting list up to last Saturday: William A. Heaman, Alexander D. Gillis, George R. Osborne and George W. Phippen.

Lewis Killam has been granted a state license to raise various kinds of fowl and animals of the woods, such as quail and pheasants. So far as we know this the only such license issued to a Manchester citizen.

Albert Smith, who cut his hand at the lumber camp some time ago by getting his hand caught in the buzz-saw, arrived home from the Beverly hospital Tuesday. Dr. Johnson of Beverly operated upon the man's hand and tied up the cords and made it possible for the young man to once more have the use of his fingers.

Lamson and Hubbard hats for fall and winter at Bell's Beach street store. *

An alarm for fire was sounded at midnight Saturday for a chimney fire at the house occupied by Joseph Francis, Jeffrey's court. The auto truck responded promptly and soon had a stream from the chemical upon the blaze which appeared about the chimney and shingles surrounding same. It seems that a still alarm for the same fire was given at 10.30, but the department was later notified its services were not needed. The damage did not exceed $25.

MANCHESTER.

Miss Marion Scott is able to be out again after a ten days' illness with the grippe.

George Horsford of the New England Telephone Company is spending the week-end visiting friends in Manchester.

Many Manchester Masons will attend the annual banquet and gathering of the order at Beverly tomorrow, Feb. 22.

Miss Molly McNeary has returned from a short vacation which she has been spending in Boston and vicinity and has resumed her duties at E. A. Lethbridge's store.

The High School hockey team was much disappointed when the Essex team did not come over to play the game which had been scheduled for last Saturday afternoon.

It certainly seems that we need a new Town hall much more than we need many other things, is the sentiment of one citizen in speaking of the article in the warrant for a new Town hall.

D. T. Beaton was in charge of a petition circulated last week for the appointment of a committee to look into the advisability of erecting a new Town hall. No suggestion has been made as to location.

George Dow had the misfortune to get a splinter into his finger one day last week, and blood-poisoning set in. Dr. Tyler has taken off the nail and is treating the wound in hopes of stopping the poison.

Green & Swett Co. are to have a large space at the coming Boston Automobile Show. They will exhibit a large variety of automobile supplies. The booth will be in charge of Thomas Quinn, who was in charge of the company's store here last summer.

An article has been placed in the warrant calling for a position to be granted the local W.R.C. for a soldiers monument. Nearly every town and city in our commonwealth has a soldiers monument, and this matter should be given the best possible attention by the voters. The proposed monument will honor the patriotism and loyalty of Manchester's soldiers, for Manchester sent out a most excellent representation of noble citizens and soldiers to the War of the Rebellion.

MANCHESTER

Charles and Harry Hooper are out in a new car, a Cole 1913, this week.

Mrs. T. A. Robbins of Winchester, N. H., was in town Monday visiting friends.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Burchsted are entertaining Mr. and Mrs. Benj. F. Burchsted of East Wenham.

Mrs. Jonathan May and daughter, Ethel of Magnolia, were the week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin L. Allen, Union street.

Mrs. Charles H. Nichols of School street entertained her mother and sister, Mrs. J. S. Sutton and Miss Sutton of Salem, over the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Andrews returned Monday from Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, where they have been spending the winter with their daughter.

Mrs. Mary Stanley arrived home from Dr. Adams Nervine Hospital, Jamaica Plain, last Saturday, after undergoing an operation for head trouble. She is somewhat improved after her twelve weeks' treatment.

The next meeting of the Arbella club will be held in the Town hall, Tuesday afternoon, Feb. 25, at 4 o'clock. Dr. Joel E. Goldthwait of Boston will speak on "The Importance of the Correct Habit of Carriage in the Maintenance of Health."

Emerson and Douglas shoes in winter weights and styles at Bell's Central square store. *

Enoch Crombie and Nathaniel Morgan of Post 67, G.A.R., will attend the annual reunion of their old company of the Civil War, Company G, of the 23rd Mass., which will be held in G.A.R. hall, Beverly, tomorrow.

Miss Gladys Semons gave a party to a number of her friends last Friday evening it being her 18th birthday. Music and dancing were features of the evening's pleasures. Refreshments were served consisting of ice cream and punch. A large birthday cake was cut during the evening. Those present were Misses Dorothy Blaisdell, Helen Wing, Hester Rust, Elsie Northrup, Pauline Semons, Miss Blagden and Miss Ladd; also Gordon Northrup, Gordon Cool, George Beaton, Rufus Long, Arthur Lodge, Frank Knight, Joseph Carey, and Harry McDiarmid.

Costume Party at Manchester a Pronounced Social Success.

The Costume Party held in the Manchester Town hall last Friday evening, as the February gathering of the Winter Series, was a pronounced success. It was by far the best party of the kind held in Manchester within the last ten years.

The Series is a subscription affair and is usually attended by about 30 to 40 couples. There were about 40 couples present last Friday night and twenty-six of them were in costume.

Chairman Alex Robertson of the committee nearly caused heart failure when, at 8.15, he stepped upon the platform and in all seriousness read a telegram from the headquarters of the "musicians' union at Saugus," stating that because of union conditions Long's orchestra would not be allowed to play, but, he added, the party would go on just the same, as an orchestra had been procured from Essex, and just then the "orchestra" entered through the anti-room door and marched around the hall, leading the grand march. Such costumes as the musicians wore were never before seen. Needless to say, it made a great hit.

Following is a list of those present in costume:

Alex Robertson, uniform of lieutenant 2d Corps Cadet; Mrs. Robertson, old French costume (a la Disraeli); Mr. and Mrs. Chas. E. Williams, farmers; Geo. S. Sinnicks, Uncle Sam; Mrs. Sinnicks, Aunt Dina; F. C. Rand, Mexican costume; Mrs. Rand, queen of hearts; Percy A. Wheaton, colored baby; Mrs. Wheaton, colored nurse; Frank A. Rowe, Topsy; Mrs. Rowe, darkie belle; Leon W. Carter, hobo; Mrs. Carter, pickaninny; Frank G. Cheever, scare-crow; Mrs. Cheever, valentine; Chas. E. Bell, clown; Mrs. Bell, old-fashioned costume; Harry T. Swett, colored mammie; Mrs. Swett, sunflower; Herman C. Swett, Mayor Hurley; Mrs. Swett, colonial costume; Alfred C. Needham, Hungarian officer; Mrs. Needham, Spanish costume; Mr. and Mrs. A. G. T. Smith, the Campbell Kids; G. A. Knoerr, Dutchman; Mrs. Knoerr, a modern witch; Mrs. R. T. Glendenning, Mother Hubbard; Walter R. Bell, country boy; Mrs. Bell, Little Red Riding Hood; Wm. W. Hoare, Johnny Bull; Mrs. Hoare, colonial costume; Bert Sinnicks, hod carrier; Miss Nellie Hobbs, housekeeper; Willard Rust, cream of wheat man; Miss Eleanor Donahue (of Chestnut Hill), tennis girl; Miss Ethel Hooper, Puritan maid; I. E. Irish, West Point cadet; Harry Purington, sea man (in oil-skins); Miss Audrey Calden, Swiss costume; Miss Mildred Peart, nurse girl; Harry R. Floyd, clown; Miss Mary Rust, Maude Muller; Miss Gertrude Goldsmith, night; Miss Barnes (guest of Mr. and Mrs. Hutchinson), Little Red Riding Hood; Louis Hutchinson, clown; Mrs. Hutchinson, colored belle; Miss Tarbell (with Mr. and Mrs. Mackin), Quaker maid; Bert Allen, cadet; Miss Berle Heath, valentine costume.

During intermission ices and fancy crackers were served. The dancing kept up until midnight.

MANCHESTER

Miss Alice Barnes of Peabody was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Hutchinson over the last week-end.

Frank Bigwood and family of Chelsea motored to Manchester Sunday and spent the day the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lucas.

Mrs. Edwin P. Stanley is expected home today after a two weeks' visit in New York city. Mrs. Antoinette Rouland of Ohio is returning with Mrs. Stanley for a short visit.

John F. Scott, the Beach street plumber, was presented with a desk chair by some of his drummer friends from Boston on Saturday last, it being the occasion of his birthday.

Arena Annabale and William Pietro came to blows on Pine street today evening. A money loan was the cause of the fracas, and the chief took the two men to court Tuesday to settle the blame of the trouble. Pietro was cut upon the hand while Annabale was struck over the head with a club.

Temperance Lecture at Manchester Baptist Church.

Mr. Albert Saunders of Boston, an attorney-at-law, talked before a large audience at the Manchester Baptist church last Sunday evening on "Temperance." He said in part: "Most of you men, no doubt, go to the polls and vote, but there are men who stay away and say oh! my vote is only one and will not amount to much if I do not vote. It is a grave mistake not to vote. I just came from a place where the license people have recently won over a no-license place into the wet colmun, and why? Because too many stayed away from the polls. The liquor element rush their automobiles, and carriages to and fro for votes, and if the no-license people do not get out and work you will not be able to keep your town in the no-license column.

"Now for another side of the question. Nothing will make a fool out of a man so quickly as rum. Let me draw you some word pictures. A man goes into a saloon to get a drink. He takes it, and starts for the door. The bartender sees he is about to go and says, 'hold on, have a drink on the house.' He takes the drink and most often he is then ready to stay until the close of business. Another picture: A young man, very young, moderately temperate is coming down the street. Speak to him about the glass he takes, and what does he say? I can take a drink, and it doesn't get the best of me. But how about the same young man in a year or two?

"We have greatly stopped the selling of bottled liquors to a drunken person. The bar and bottle bill has done good work during its short time in effect. There were 1700 less arrests last year for drunkenness in this state. Not a very large decrease to be sure, yet is it not worth working to accomplish? Suppose the church should put on its door: 'Only a few added to our membership last year,' or the business man should say 'only $500 gain during the year,' would we not soon be discouraged? Though the decrease was small, yet it was a gain for us and we should put this motto before us: 'Do what we can do,' and not 'what's the use.'

"Even though we do not have liquor troubles in our home we should not sit back and say: oh! let it go, it doesn't bother me. If God has been good enough to keep liquor out of your own personal home let us try to keep it out of some one else's home. We are pretty small in this large world, yet we can all do our little part to help some one else. Therefore friends go to the polls and do your duty to protect our boys and girls, our men and women from this curse which is in our land."

As special musical features of the evening Mrs. J. Warren Lee sang "Dreams of Paradise," with violin obligato by Miss Weeks, who rendered a solo on the violin, "Caviata," by Roff. She also played Hauser's "Berceuse," with Mr. Brown accompanying on the organ. As an offertory selection she played "Meditations" from the opera "Thais."

SPLENDID ENTERTAINMENT ASSURED NEXT WEDNESDAY

The next number in the entertainment course of the Manchester club will be given Wednesday evening, Feb. 26, at 8 o'clock in the Town hall. The entertainment will be a concert by the Pilgrim Quartet of Boston assisted by a reader. Mr. Baker, who pleased the members of the club greatly by his singing at the annual dinner of the club, is a member of this quartet.

It is a matter of regret that so few outside the club membership have availed themselves of the lectures and entertainments offered thus far. The Manchester club has not endeavored to make them a source of financial return, but has on the contrary felt that if they could be made self-supporting, they might be made a feature of the winter season each year and excellent entertainment obtained at cost. The attendance thus far while very good has not been as large as the excellence of the numbers presented deserved. It is to be hoped that there may be a sufficient patronage at the next concert to encourage the Manchester club to continue a good work.

The immigration bill just killed in the House bristled with misinformation and misstatements.

The Town treasurer's books at the close of the year show a balance of $32,979.19 on hand.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Eustis of Marblehead spent yesterday in town visiting friends and relatives.

Bell's stores will close all day Saturday, Feb. 22nd, but will be open in the evening from 6 to 9 o'clock.

A pansy was picked this week in a local garden and brought to this office for exhibition. It was in blossom and picked out of a half-inch of snow.

The members of Allen Relief Corps No. 119 wish to thank all who helped to make their entertainment Feb. 12 a success. Mabel Walen, Corps Secy.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Hutchinson are going to Peabody today to spend the holiday with relatives.

Alfred Hersey is confined to his home on Bridge street with a severe attack of the gripe.

William L. Mitchell, Chief Electrician, U. S. N., is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Mitchell during a leave of absence. He was graduated from the School of Gunnery at Washington, D. C. He has received an appointment on the new battleship Texas.

The following additional voters have been added to the voting list this week: John F. Coughlin, Wm. Melvin, George Burchsted, John P. Corley, Neils Johnson, Wm. W. Scott, Gordon A. Slade, Shirley Stanley. The last opportunity to register before the town meeting will be tonight, until 10 o'clock.

At the meeting of the High School Alumni association held Thursday evening it was decided to hold a reunion dance on the evening of March 28. Each member is to have the privilege of buying one guest ticket in addition to their own ticket. Further details will be given at a later date.

The lamp-lighter's wagon came to grief at West Manchester Wednesday of this week. The wagon was coming out of Jersey Lane, and while turning the corner, the wheels caved in letting the wagon down on the axle and throwing out the driver. The horse stopped of his own free will, and as the driver was uninjured from his fall he went to a stable nearby and got an old wheel put on in place of the broken one, and continued on his route to light up the town.

REBEKAH GARDEN PARTY

SUCCESSFUL AFFAIR HELD IN MANCHESTER

The Garden Party which opened in the Manchester Town hall last night under the auspices of Liberty Rebekah lodge, I.O.O.F., of Manchester, proved a great success. It will be continued tonight and Saturday afternoon.

In keeping with the name the hall is transformed into a garden, with a generous amount of tress, shrubbery, plants, etc., to give a setting to the booths and tables. Japanese lanterns and crepe paper is used effectively in the decorations.

As an opening feature Thursday evening a handkerchief sent by Mrs. Taft, wife of the President, was auctioned off, and was sold to Albert Cunningham, the highest bidder.

The entertainment feature of the opening evening was the cantata of Singing Flowers, furnished by a group of young men and women from Rockport and Gloucester, under the direction of Miss Alice York of Rockport. The program included: Opening chorus: Sun Flower song, Miss Alice Alderman; Red Rose, Miss Ruth Everett; the daisy, Miss Anna Babson; buttercup, Miss Isabel Sherburn; the lily, Miss Alice Lawson; the violet, Allan Brown; tulip, Richard D. Perkins; man in the moon, B. Carlton Brown; the gardener, Harold Odell; violinist, Harrison Pierce. The Spaulding Male Quartet composed of the young men appearing in the cantata rendered several selections, including, "Little Tommy Went A'fishing," "April to November" and "In May Time."

The entertainment Friday evening will consist of readings by Miss Florence Hinckley of the Emerson School of Oratory; violin selections by Ray Frazee, and piano selections by Laurence Howie, of the New England Conservatory.

Saturday afternoon there will be a Sunlight Party for the young folk. The entertainment will start at 2.30. There will be a drill and music, and dancing will continue for an hour and a half. Each child present will receive a souvenir.

The general committee in charge of the affair was Mrs. Alfred E. Hersey, chairman; Miss Jennie Sargent, Miss Alice Haraden, Mrs. F. B. Rust, Mrs. Bert Rogers, Mrs. Mable Crombie and Mrs. Edith Morgan.

The following were in charge of the various tables:

Manchester Woman's Club Hears Miss Huling Lecture on Labrador.

The Manchester Woman's club had the pleasure of hearing Miss Ellen Paine Huling lecture Tuesday, at its regular meeting, her subject being "Labrador, as seen through a Woman's Eyes." During the business session, the president, Mrs. Beaton, announced that Mr. Edward Avis will give his celebrated lecture, "An Afternoon in Birdland," illustrated by stereopticon and music, at the next meeting, March 4, at the Town hall. This is open to the public and children will be admitted for fifteen cents. The Arbella club extended a cordial invitation to the Woman's club to attend its next meeting, Feb. 25, at the Town hall. Mrs. Emma Stanley gave a splendid report of the mid-winter federation meeting. Miss Taylor rendered a vocal solo very charmingly and was warmly applauded.

Miss Huling was then introduced. She described the journey to Labrador and the hardships one must inevitably encounter. A wreck on the Labrador coast excites no surprise as most of the fishermen have been wrecked and everyone who has sailed the coast has at least had narrow escapes.

Many little anecdotes were related by the speaker, which admirably illustrated the traits of the people—their simplicity, ignorance, superstition, bravery and great hospitality.

Miss Huling spoke in glowing terms of that devoted and heroic man whose wise guidance has meant so much to the Labrador people—Dr. Grenfell. He is doctor, parson, master-mariner, magistrate, prophet, champion, director of commercial enterprise. He has established medical missions, co-operative stores, introduced reindeer, built hospitals, an orphanage, a fisherman's home, and even introduced fun.

Miss Huling found the Eskimos to be a brave, curious, good-natured people, who never quite grow up, and who have a singular lack of humor. Misses Helen Knight and Nina Sinicks appeared clad in Eskimo costumes—the winter one of hair-seal and summer one of blanket stuff, both having hoods in which the baby is carried.

Many queer customs of the Eskimos were described. They have a very strict law which forbids remarriage in less than six weeks after the wife's decease. One readily sees why the Eskimo man remarries at once, as he loses in his wife, his butcher, baker, tailor, carpenter and housekeeper. The woman does all the work except hunting and fishing. One of her duties is to chew her husband's skin boots soft after they have hardened from use. When boys come in from fishing, one may see them throw the dead fish-heads at the girls, who receive them much as an American girl receives a box of candy.

To sum up Miss Huling said she was impressed by the grim beauty of the north, the great kindness, courage and hospitality of the people and the self-sacrificing work of the missionaries.

At the close of the meeting the members came forward to view the furs and curios displayed.

Miss Annie Lane was the hostess of the afternoon.

"500 CARPENTERS WANTED" ADV. A JOKE

"WANTED at once 500 carpenters.
—North Shore Builders Association, Manchester, Mass."

This advertisement in the classified column of the Boston Sunday Globe brought scores of men to Manchester on all the morning trains Monday. The men came here apparently eager for work, but inquiry, on their arrival, did not reveal the whereabouts of such an organization. And why should 500 carpenters be needed at any point on the North Shore at this time of year?

Needless to say the men were very much disgruntled to learn they had come to Manchester on a "fool's errand." Fully fifty came to the Breeze office during the day, thinking we could give them some information.

The question is: Who was responsible for the adv. which appeared?

She—Jack, when we are married I must have three servants.

He—You shall have twenty, dear—but not all at the same time.

TENEMENTS WANTED

Scores of families coming to the North Shore for the summer will want tenements and many are already looking about. Get your adv. started in the Breeze early this year. Many look to the Breeze each year for information of this source. The cost is 1c a word a week after the first week.

HEAMAN-PURDY

A pretty home wedding was solemnized Monday evening, Feb. 17, when William A. Heaman and Helene Ross Purdy were married in marriage at the house occupied during the summer by Donald Ross and family, Summer street, Manchester. The ceremony was performed at 6.15 by Rev. Kenneth Ripley Forbes of St. Mary's Episcopal church, East Boston. The young people were attended by a brother of the groom, A. V. Heaman of Boston, and Miss Julia Lawson of Manchester. Only the immediate relatives of the young people attended the wedding and the reception which followed.

The bride wore a gown of blue satin, trimmed with lace, and she carried a bouquet of pink roses. The bridesmaid carried white carnations.

The young couple have the best wishes of their large number of friends in Manchester and along the North Shore.

The groom is of the staff of employees at the Essex County club. They were generously remembered with gifts, including several pieces of gold. For the present they will make their home at 110 Summer street, the home of Supt. Ross of the Essex County club, now in the South for the winter.

MANCHESTER

Walter Leaman of Medford has been spending the week visiting his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman, North street.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Leach of Boston are to spend the holiday in town tomorrow with the former's sister, Mrs. Ellery H. Rogers, North street. Mr. Leach was married in Boston to Miss Ruth Blanchard of Rockland, on Jan. 25.

We note in a recent issue of the Reading Chronicle an item with regard to one who was a resident here several years ago while in the employ of R. C. Allen. His friends will be glad to learn of his good fortune:—"Clarence E. Carter has just succeeded to the civil engineering business of James A. Bancroft, for whom he has been managing engineer for a number of months. It is a half century since Mr. Bancroft established himself in his profession here, and the greater part of the time since hardly a map or plan that had to do with Reading has been drawn that was not his work. He also had a large out of town clientele. Mr. Carter is a graduate of Technology and an associate member of the American Society of Civil Engineers."

ROOMS TO LET!

Have you any? We have already had inquiries from people who are coming to the North Shore for the summer. They look to the Breeze for information as to who has rooms to rent. It would pay you to start your adv. early. It might mean dollars to you in the end. Our rate: 2c a word the first week; 1c a word each week thereafter.

"Stuffy" McInnes of Gloucester dropped around at the Breeze office one morning this week with Dr. Rioridan of the Farms, who is a great friend of the ball player, and who entertained "Stuffy" on the occasion of his recent visit to the Farms to attend the banquet of the Beverly Farms Athletic association. "Stuffy" says he is anxious to begin practice and he certainly looks the picture of health. He is the star first-baseman of the Philadelphia Athletics. The team goes to Texas very soon to start practice.

"We try to raise too many kinds of flowers, and not enough of one particular variety," says Maurice Fuld, of Philadelphia, an expert in horticulture. Mr. Fuld was the speaker at the last meeting of the North Shore Horticultural society, in Manchester. The subject under discussion was the creation of new flowers.

The gardeners along the North Shore, said Mr. Fuld, have a great advantage over others in the way of finding out things about the growth of flowers. We are losing ground in trying to make so many different specimens. Our attempts to "double" flowers is not helping the cause any, yet, for all these drawbacks, we are still making great headway, and great things will yet be accomplished.

TO THE HONORABLE THE JUSTICES OF
THE SUPERIOR COURT WITHIN
AND FOR THE COUNTY OF ESSEX:

RESPECTFULLY libels and represents
Gustaf Emil Sjolund of Manchester, in said county, that he was lawfully married to Matilda Sjolund, now of parts unknown, at Boston in the County of Suffolk and Commonwealth of Massachusetts on the twenty-tieth day of February, A. D. 1904, and thereafterwards your libellant and the said Matilda Sjolund lived together as husband and wife in this commonwealth, to wit, at Manchester, that your libellant has always been faithful to his marriage vows and obligations, but the said Matilda Sjolund being wholly regardless of the same,
at Manchester on the twenty seventh day of February, A. D. 1904, utterly deserted him, and has continued such desertion from that day to the date hereof, being more than three consecutive years next prior to the filing of this libel.

Wherefore your libellant prays that a divorce from the bonds of matrimony may be decreed between your libellant and the said Matilda
Sjolund.

Dated this nineteenth day of February, A. D. 1913.

GUSTAV EMIL SJOLUND.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
Essex, ss. Superior Court, February 20, 1913.

Upon the foregoing libel, ordered,
that the said libellant give notice to said Matilda Sjolund by causing an attested copy of his said libel, and of this order thereon, to be published in the North Shore Breeze, a newspaper printed in Manchester, in the county of Essex, once a week, for three weeks successively, the last publication to be fourteen days at least before the return day of this Court, at Salem, within the county of Essex, on the first Monday of April next, and by mailing, forthwith, by registered letter to the libellee at her last known place of residence, an attested copy of said libel and order thereon: that she may appear at said Salem within one month from said first Monday of April and show cause, if any she has,
why the prayer of said libel should not be granted. Attest,

To the Honorable Board of County Commissioners, County of Essex,
Commonwealth of Massachusetts:

PETITION

Respectfully represent your petitioners, inhabitants and legal voters of the town of Manchester, in said County, that the way in said Manchester, known as Pine street, and lying between and connecting the County road from Beverly to Gloucester, known as Bridge and Central streets in said Manchester, with the southerly terminus of the recently laid out County road from Manchester to
Hamilton at or near the junction of said
Pine street and Pleasant street, is narrow and winding and does not serve the common convenience and necessity of the inhabitants.

Wherefore your petitioners pray that your Honorable Board will widen, straighten, relocate or locate anew or discontinue such portion or portions of the whole of said way from a point at or near the junction of Bennett, Bridge,
Central and Pine streets to a point at or near the junction of Pleasant street, the newly laid out County road from Manchester to Hamilton and Pine street, as shall appear to be required.

On the Petition aforesaid, Ordered, That said petitioners give notice to all persons and corporations interested therein that said Commissioners will meet at the Town hall, Manchester, on Friday, the 28th day of March next at 10:30 A. M., by publishing an attested copy of said petition and of this order thereon in the North Shore
Breeze, a newspaper printed in Manchester, in said county, once a week for three successive weeks, the last publication to be fourteen days at least before the said twenty-eighth day of March. And also by serving the town clerk of the town of Manchester with an attested copy thirty days at least, and by posting up an attested copy thereof in two public places in said town fourteen days at least before the twenty-eighth day of March at which time and place said Commissioners will proceed to view the premises and make such order in relation to the prayer of the said petition as by law they may be authorized to do.

Notice To Voters REGISTRATION

Office of the Board of Registrars of Voters.
Manchester, Mass., Feb. 5, 1913.

Notice is hereby given that the Board of Registrars of Voters will be in session at the office of the Board of Selectmen on Tuesday, Feb. 11, from 7 till 8 o'clock
P. M., on Wednesday, the 19th, from 7 till 8 o'clock: also on Friday, Feb. 21st, from 12 a. m. to 10 p. m., for the purpose of receiving evidence of the qualification of persons claiming a right to vote at the election to be held on Monday, March 3, 1913, and of correcting the list of voters.

See that your name is on the Voting List of your town; if not there call at the office of the Board of Registrars on the days above mentioned, and be registered, or you cannot vote. Bring with you a certificate from the assessors or a tax bill or notice from the collector of taxes, showing that you have been assessed a poll tax as a resident of the town of Manchester.

All persons whose names are stricken from the voters' lists for any lawful reason, will, before they can again have their names placed upon said lists, be required to register their names at the time hereinbe-fore stated in like manner as new voters.

Naturalized citizens presenting themselves for registration must bring their naturalization papers with them.

If a qualified voter of this town whose name was on the voters' list last year, and who has been assessed for the current year, finds after the close of registration that his name is not placed on the voters' list of the current year, by reason of having been omitted by clerical error or mistake, he may upon personal application, have his name placed upon the voting list, or, if application be made on the day of election, he may have a certificate to vote.

No name can be added to the voters' list (except to correct omissions made by clerical error or mistake) after ten (10) o'clock of the evening of Friday, Feb. 21st, at which time registration closes.

By order of the Board of Registrars of voters.

BROTHERHOOD OBSERVES "LADIES NIGHT"

The Manchester Brotherhood held a "Ladies Night" Monday evening at the Baptist church. Some 150 ladies and gentlemen were present. The entertainment of the evening was presented by the Everett orchestra, consisting of violin, flute, piano and reader. Rev. A. G. Warner acted as toast-master of the evening bidding the guests welcome. He prefaced the pleasures of the evening by giving an outline of the brotherhood and its aim. He said: "We were organized last summer, and continued to add new members to our list through the fall, and now in the dead of winter we are prospering with a membership of over 70 men with others yet to join. It is our plan to have a speaker of interest at our meetings and also join in a social and song hour. We are encouraging good fellowship among the men of our town and we will continue to do our uttermost to perfect these plans."

The orchestra rendered "Lutspiel" in a most excellent manner. Miss Elsie McKenzie followed with a reading, "The mooning Vail," and encore "Auntie Dollfull." The orchestra then played "Glorianna," followed by a vocal solo by Miss Marion H. Harding in a most delightful manner. Miss McKenzie gave another selection, "That Hired Girl," followed by a closing selection by the orchestra, "Westward Ho!" The entertainment committee served ice cream and cake at the close of the musical program. A social hour followed.

George S. Sinnicks is to be the speaker at the next Brotherhood meeting, next Monday evening. He will speak on his trip to Bermuda.

WENHAM

Sunday morning the minister, Rev. F. M. Cutler, will preach at the village church. Sunday school at noon. Y.P.S.C.E. meeting at 6. "Current events as seen through religious eyes" will be the theme of the 7 p. m. meeting, when the new Easter-Livingstone music will be sung. Sunday, Feb. 23, will be, all over the world, the day of prayer for colleges.

Messrs. Murphy and Cameron of the Beverly Baptist church were welcome visitors and speakers at the C. E. meeting last Sunday.

Students of the Hamilton high school gave a minstrel show in the Wenham Town hall Tuesday evening.

October 31, 1912, marked the completion of the first year of work by the Hamilton and Wenham visiting nurse, which has now led to the issuing of the first annual report. This work is under the management of Mrs. S. Dacre Bush, Mrs. Edward B. Cole and Mrs. Reginald C. Robins as a committee, assisted by a council comprising Mrs. George Checketts, Jr., Mrs. S. C. Gould, Mrs. J. E. Perron, Mrs. John C. Phillips, Mrs. B. H. Tracy, Mrs. F. P. Trussell, Mrs. John Wallace and Miss Adeline Wilkins. The energy, tact, skill and untiring devotion of the nurse, Miss Jessie M. Johnston, are prime factors in the success of the work. During its first year the work cost $1,200, which came from 250 contributors. Sufficient subscriptions have been received to ensure the future continuance of the enterprise. Robert Robertson put a horse and carriage at the disposal of the nurse; and subsequently Miss Marjorie Thomas and the Edelweis club raised funds and purchased a conveyance. Mr. Perron kindly assists in the upkeep of the horse. Miss Johnston made 1681 calls, usually charging a nominal fee, but giving her services outright in 122 instances. She treated 149 cases, and was able to report decided benefits resulting in 122 of them. A few public-spirited ladies are to be credited with inaugurating this beneficent charity. Now the churches and the general public have become interested, thus assuring permanence for the undertaking.

COULDN'T FORGET

Miss Flitter—Do you think smoking destroys the memory?

Mr. Bluff—No; when a chap gives me a bum cigar I never forget it.

BEVERLY FARMS

The schools close this afternoon for a week's vacation.

The Ladies' Sewing circle was entertained last evening at the home of Mrs. James B. Dow, Hale street.

The members of the Pastor's Hour will meet this evening at 6.45. The entertainment held last week for the purpose of raising funds for the purchase of a stereopticon outfit was quite successful. Another sale will be held later.

At the Baptist church Sunday morning the pastor will preach on "Ambition, is there a place for it in the Christian Life?" The Sunday evening service will be at 5 o'clock. There will be a special musical program and an address by the pastor on "An 'old' name with an 'ever new' meaning." The third address in the mid-weekly course will be given Wednesday evening on "The Conversion of Saul." The regular monthly and covenant meeting will be held Friday evening. A cottage prayer meeting was held at the home of T. H. Styles Monday evening, and will be repeated this Monday at the home of Addison Davis.

BUILDING TRADES ASSOCIATION

The next meeting of the Building Trades Employers of the North Shore will be held at the Beverly Board of Trade rooms, next Tuesday evening, Feb. 25, at 8 o'clock. This meeting is for permanent organization and those who have not yet attended are urged to be present at that time.

George F. Wood spent the week at Danvers. As is his usual custom each year he was in charge of the ice cutting for one of the ice concerns of that place.

John West colony, Pilgrim Fathers, will hold its semi-monthly meeting in Marshall's hall this evening. Gov. L. J. Watron, 2nd, always plans something of interest for these meetings which are largely attended.

The three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McGrail is reported to be ill with pneumonia.

Former councilman George E. Johnson and daughter, Miss Helen Johnson of Chapman's corner will leave Monday for Florida. They plan to be away for several weeks. Mr. Johnson is the father of Mrs. Arthur Standley of Oak street.

The Girls club of the Baptist church will meet next Tuesday evening at the church for work night. On the evening of March 11 they plan to hold a surprise party.

Preston W. R. Corps held an interesting meeting last Tuesday in G.A.R. hall. In the afternoon the Sewing circle connected with the corps met. At 6 o'clock they were joined by members of their families and invited guests and sat down to supper served in the banquet hall. They will also serve supper at their next meeting. In the evening the corps held its regular meeting, at which four new members were admitted. The social hour following the business meeting was thoroughly enjoyed.

Miss Barbara Daniels left Wednesday for a two weeks' visit with friends at Bellows Falls, Vt.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sullivan of Berlin, N. H., have been visitors at the Farms the past week.

Peter Ward has leased the store in the Pierce block on West street which Wilbur J. Pierce is soon to vacate and will move his restaurant and lunch business here about the middle of March. Mr. Ward moves from his present quarters because his business demands more room.

Mrs. Louise T. B. Wyatt and Miss Pearl Wyatt yesterday vacated the estate on West street, which they have occupied for the past 17 years and have taken up their residence with Mrs. Wyatt's mother, Mrs. Bartlett, on Hale street. The property which was recently purchased by James E. McDonnell is immediately to undergo improvements and repairs. The new owners hope to occupy it in about a month's time.

Stephen Edward Cullen, age 55 years, 7 mos. and 16 days, for the past 17 years the driver of Ladder 1 of the Central Fire station, passed away at his home on Butman street, Beverly, last Tuesday evening, after a short illness. He was born at Beverly Farms and for many years lived here, being employed for years on the T. K. Lothrop and Chas. H. Dalton estates. At the latter place he was employed when he received his appointment as driver in the Beverly Fire Dept. While a resident of the Farms he made many friends. He was a member of the Steamer Company and his death is regretted by a large circle of friends. He leaves a widow, one daughter, Mrs. Geo. W. Dudley of Worcester, a son, Fred Cullen who resides at Havana, Cuba, a mother, Mrs. Mary E. Cullen, and a brother William T. Cullen of Beverly. He was a member of the Masons, the Odd Fellows and the Beverly Firemen's Relief association. Funeral services were held at St. Peter's Episcopal church, Beverly, this afternoon and were attended by a large number from Beverly Farms including members of the Fire department.

WEST BEACH CORPORATION MEETING

About 50, the smallest number in years, attended the meeting of the West Beach corporation (Beverly Farms' Town meeting), held in Marshall's hall last Monday evening. The warrant did not call for anything except the transaction of routine business. The meeting was presided over by President James B. Dow, and the records and reports of the board of directors were read by Clerk Charles H. Hull. It was shown that the corporation affairs have been conducted in an economical and business-like way and in accordance with the policies of previous years. The report of the treasurer was interesting. A few of the important items was that the corporation had during the past year reduced its debt over $1700; that the corporation owes $8050; that $1300 had been paid during the year for the Lee and Tweed bath houses which gave all buildings on the property into the hands of the corporation. The city taxed the property for $8,000 value and in turn paid for sand taken from the beach. The income derived last year from rental of the bathing apartments was over $3400. The corporation has on hand at present about $150. The chief expenditures included interest on notes, taxes, salary of police and attendants, beach and property cleaning, repairs on pier and purchase of the Lee and Tweed bath houses.

The old board of officials were re-elected and are as follows: Jas. B. Dow, pres.; Daniel Linehan, vice-pres.; Chas. H. Hull, sec'y.; Elmer Standley, treas.; W. R. Brooks, William H. Gerrish, John H. Linehan, J. M. Publicover and Fred Williams, board of directors.

BEVERLY FARMS

A sudden death which brought sadness to many Farms people was that of George A. West, who passed away suddenly Wednesday morning at his home on Pond street, Beverly, at the age of 59 years. The deceased was best known to Beverly Farms people as the driver of the Marshall & Moulton Express team on the Pride's and Beverly Farms route, having been employed by this firm for over 30 years. He was born in Beverly. Funeral services were held this afternoon from his late home, Pond street.

Miss Catherine McGurr, a sister of Miss Florence Slavin, has been at the Eye and Ear Infirmary, Boston, the past week for an operation on her eye.

Edward Rooney, for many years an employee on the King estate at Mingo Beach hill, while on his way to church last Sunday morning was taken ill on the street at Pride's Crossing and after being treated for a time at the home of former mayor Trowt, was removed to the Beverly hospital.

The committee of the city government on collection of ashes, in the Beverly Farms district, has awarded the contract for this year to Frank I. Lomasney for $500. Mr. Lomasney had the contract last year.

Among the passengers on the incoming Carpathia last Sunday were the wife and five children of Richard Carr, who has made his home at the Farms for the past three years. The reunited family are making their home in one of the Linehan houses at Pride's Crossing.

Miss Jennie Foley of Hoboken, N. J., has been visiting the Misses Joanna and Elizabeth Toomey, Haskell street, this week.

The flag on the Beverly Farms Engine house has been at half mast in respect to the late Stephen E. Cullen, a member of the department.

Miss Alice B. Kenny of Orange, N. J., has been visiting friends at the Farms the past week.

WINTER TELEPHONE DIRECTORY

Delivery of the new winter issue of the Boston telephone directory commenced on Wednesday, February 19, and will be completed on March 1. It will be the largest book of its kind ever published in New England and will be the most widely read, for it is safe to say the book will be consulted nearly a million times daily. In correctness it is almost perfection.

Printing the Boston directory is a tremendous job. The forth-coming issue will number 203,400 copies and each book will have 418 pages, a total of over 85,000,000 pages in one issue and more than a quarter billion pages in the three issues printed every year.

After the copy has been closed for the Boston directory about 25 days are required to print it. Over 500,000 pounds of paper are used and more than 12 miles of wire is required in the binding.

The new directory will contain approximately 40,000 changes in either names, addresses or numbers. The last book issued contained 27,000 changes. The book will have the names of over 6,000 new subscribers and will be 20 pages larger.

Ten years ago only 61,000 copies of the book were printed and 20 years ago there were but 18,000.

BOSTON THEATRE

The stay of "The Garden of Allah" is rapidly drawing to a close, only a few more weeks remain for theatregoers to witness the most resplendent and massive production of all time. The dramatized version of Robert Hichens' celebrated story of the desert, "The Garden of Allah" has made a fine impression at the Boston Theatre. The book has been so widely read and so generally discussed that it is fair to presume that the theatregoing as well as the reading public is familiar with its theme and its portent. When one stops to think of the great scope of the story, the developments of the principal characters, which through the process of suffering and experience, are ripened to their final fruition, and when one still further stops to consider the mass of detail which is woven in the pages of the book, giving a background of such kaleidoscopic effects as to require the broadest of canvases upon which to stretch it, one pauses to wonder how all this can be encompassed within the space of the theatre and the time allotted for the average dramatic presentation. In making the drama, for which the author himself and Mary Anderson are responsible, the selection of scenes was a difficult one and the labor of concentration one of extreme magnitude.

B. F. KEITH'S

Thomas A. Edison's Kinetophone or Talking Motion Pictures will be exhibited for the first time in Boston at B. F. Keith's Theatre, Monday afternoon, Feb. 24. This astonishing invention of Mr. Edison's is nothing more or less than a scientific miracle. For the first week two subjects will be presented, the first entitled "The Lecturer." In this film a lecturer describes in detail the Thomas A. Edison Kinetophone, giving various illustrations of vocal, piano, violin solo, and various other sounds. No human being appears on the stage. The entire lecture, both as regards the vocal description and the practical illustrations, are shown by means of the wonderful talking moving pictures. The second picture is called the "Edison Minstrels." A complete minstrel show, with songs, jokes, music and dancing is presented by means of the talking pictures. This marvelous mechanical device will be surrounded by a splendid vaudeville bill. Rosalind Coghlan will appear in the amusing one-act comedy, "The Obstinate Miss Granger," and many other features yet to be announced.

EMPIRE THEATRE, SALEM

The Lonergan Players, who inaugurated a season of permanent stock productions in "The Woman's Way" at the Empire Theatre, Salem, this week, have "made good" with a vengeance. The company made a good impression this week and its continued success is already proven.

A few weeks ago Julius Cahn, owner of the Empire theatre and incidentally a chain of other high-class houses all over the country, presented the Jefferson Theatre Stock company in several high-grade plays for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not the Salem public desired a first-class stock company as a permanent attraction. The reception accorded that company, which, it will be remembered, was a most gratifying one in every sense, lead Mr. Cahn to promise that as soon as he could assemble an organization of players of equal merit, he would offer a lengthy season at the Empire.

The Result of our buyer's semi-annual visit to the New York market is every day manifesting itself. Soon a lavishing array of Dress Stuffs will be placed before our appreciating patrons, such as WHIPCORDS, DIAGONALS and plain ENGLISH SERGES which will be much to the fore and are regarded by Fashion's whim as a staple fabric for feminine costumes. Various other textures are to be found to make up an alluring variety.

MIXTURES, while they have been in the background for the past season, are revived once more, and will be shown in a new fabric named SCINTELA, owing to its bright crispness and lustre. Two toned stripes are shown in abundance, to replace the plainer fabrics. The variety in color, tone and textures will be such that the most fastidious will not fail to gratify every whim. Due notice will be given of our grand opening and display.

This Teaspoon, shown full size, is of the Fairfax Pattern. Few patterns in recent years have enjoyed the remarkable popularity of this pattern. It is refined, dignified, and extremely simple in design, and it fits in to an unusual degree with the present-day tendency in table appointments and house decorations.

We strongly recommend the Fairfax to those who contemplate starting a pattern of sterling silver. Being of such simple design, it will never go out of style, nor will one ever tire of it. We quote prices below on the most used pieces. We have a complete stock of serving and fancy pieces which we show in our Year Book, a copy of which will be sent upon application.

SOCIETY NOTES

Miss Helen Frick and several of her girl friends came on to Pride's Crossing from New York last Friday in the Frick private pullman "Westmoreland," and remained over the week-end, starting back for New York Tuesday night. Childs Frick joined the party Sunday. The party made their headquarters in the magnificent car, as usual, and also passed some of the time at the gardener's lodge on the estate.

◆ ❖ ◆

Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Boardman and infant son have gone to Washington, from their West Manchester home, to remain over the inauguration, guests of Mrs. Boardman's mother, Mrs. Chas. A. Munn.

◆ ❖ ◆

Mrs. Henry L. Higginson is to give a small dance at the Chilton club, Boston, tonight, from 9.30 until 2 o'clock, in honor of her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Alex. H. Higginson.

Rev. and Mrs. William H. Dewart of Brush Hill road, Milton, and Manchester Cove, are sailing, with their five children, on the Lapland, from New York, March 8, to be gone several months.

Last Friday evening in the Re- Room at the White House Miss Mabel T. Boardman, on behalf of the women of Washington, presented President Taft with a rare pearl scarf pin, and Mrs. Taft with a diamond necklace of pure white stones. The gifts which were in the nature of farewell remembrances to the Tafts, were from a circle of close friends they have made during their long residence in Washington. The presentation was an informal affair.

No date has yet been set for the marriage of Miss Elizabeth P. Lee of Brookline and Beverly Farms, and Harry Pratt McKean, Jr., of Pride's, but in all probability it will be in the early summer on the North Shore. Miss Lee is to serve as bridesmaid at the wedding of Miss Read and Dr. Burnett at Manchester next month, and also at the marriage of Miss Josephine Dorr to William E. Russell, in Cambridge, in early April.

SOCIETY NOTES

The annual Town meeting will attract many people to the North Shore towns next Monday. The summer cottagers are taking a more active interest in town affairs as the years go by, largely from the fact that they are becoming permanent residents in increasing numbers. Herbert Warren Mason is running for selectman of the town of Ipswich this year. At Manchester Gordon Abbott is candidate for the board of trustees of the Memorial Library Bldg. Fund. There are now some 32 members of the Manchester summer colony that vote here and a large number of these will be down next Monday to vote—for one reason to show their disapproval of the actions of the present board of selectmen which resulted in a rigid enforcement of the liquor law at the Essex County club the last summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Abbott, who have been in the South, are expected home today.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE

The Boston Opera Company during the coming week will add to its French repertory another opera which has not been sung in America hitherto,—“La Foret Bleue” (The Blue Forest) by Louis Aubert, one of the foremost among the younger generation of Parisian composers. M. Aubert is known chiefly as a composer of songs and orchestral pieces and “La Foret Bleue” is the first of his operas to see the footlights.

“La Foret Bleue” is an ingeniously contrived combination of the three fairy stories known to every child, “Little Red Riding Hood,” “Hop o' My Thumb” and “The Sleeping Princess” and in it Director Russell thinks that he has discovered an opera which will enjoy popularity as pronounced and as enduring as that of “Haensel und Gretel.”

The repertoire for next week: Monday eve., “The Girl of the Golden West;” Wed. eve., “La Boheme;” Thursday eve., “L'Arlesienne;” Friday eve., “The Jewels of the Madonna;” Saturday, “Lucia di Lammermoor.”

SOCIETY NOTES

Mrs. Walter C. Cabot, who had “Ledge Lawn,” the Randolph Coolidge cottage, so-called, at Manchester, last season, has just leased the same property through the Boardman agency, for the coming season. Mrs. Cabot's winter home is on Heath street, Brookline.

◆ ❖ ◆

The marriage of Helen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Read, and Dr. Francis Lowell Burnett of Beacon street, Boston, will take place a week from next Wednesday, March 12, at the little summer Episcopal church, Manchester-by-the-Sea, which will be opened for the occasion. Directly following the wedding there will be a breakfast at the Read home, Read's Island. Both the wedding and the breakfast will be small affairs, including only the families and intimates. This will be the first of half a dozen or more weddings to take place on the North Shore the coming spring and early summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellery Sedgwick of Mt. Vernon street, Boston, are to spend the summer with their three young children, at Manchester, having leased for another season, the James Means cottage, off Proctor street. (Through the Boardman agency). Mr. Sedgwick is president of the Atlantic Monthly Co.

◆ ❖ ◆

Mr. and Mrs. Eben D. Jordan and Miss Dorothy Jordan are to go abroad about the middle of March to be gone until the latter part of June. On their return they will come to their summer home at West Manchester.

The George von L. Meyers will open their house at Hamilton early this spring. Secretary Meyer is to spend about four weeks on a tarpon fishing trip in Florida when he leaves official life on March 4. The latter part of April the Washington house in Scott Circle will be closed and the family will come to the North Shore. Miss Alys Meyer's marriage to Lieut. Raymond Rodgers, U. S. N., will be celebrated at Hamilton during the spring. These young people are having made for them many entertainments in honor of their engagement.

Eva's Easter Hat.

By Margaret L. Rust.

Eva St. Clare took another look at the beautiful hat she had received from the milliner the day before. It was certainly a beauty and tomorrow was Easter Sunday. Now for another peep at the sky. Yes, it looked like a fine day.

Eva was a pretty girl, tall and graceful, with blue eyes and dark curly hair. This Easter Sunday she intended to look her best. "I'll wear my blue dress and take my pretty sunshade." The bells of Ringway church were pealing forth their Easter chimes.

"Sister," called a sweet little voice, "may I go with you to church? I'll be, Oh, so good." What could Eva do? How could she refuse her little sister's plea? They were already to start when clouds appeared in the sky.

"Eva you must take your umbrella," said Katie, "you know it may rain on your pretty hat."

Yes, it was going to rain, and instead of the pretty sunshade she must take her umbrella. The pastor was just giving out the hymn when they entered the church, and Bob Raingill was at the organ. Yes, and there was his sister Clara. Eva and Katie took their seats and the umbrella was placed at the end of the pew.

The service was nearly over, when Katie whispered, "Where's the umbrella?" "Hush," said Eva, "keep quiet." And in another whisper, "Where's the umbrella?" "Hush, hush."

"Then," said Katie in a loud voice, "where's the umbrella, I say?"

All heads were turned in the direction of the pew where Eva and Katie sat. It was certainly very embarrassing, and it was a great relief to Eva when the service was over. It was raining hard, and they were walking along the road when Bob Raingill overtook them. "Good morning, Miss St. Clare,—let me offer you my umbrella. The color is coming out of yours."

"Oh, how stupid of me. How did I make such a mistake? I took my dark red instead of my black umbrella."

"I know," cried Katie, "you were thinking of Bob." "Is that so, little one? Thinking of Bob, was she?"

"Here we are at home. Good day Mr. Raingill. I hope next Sunday the sun will be shining, and Miss Katie will remain at home."

A few minutes later Eva St. Clare stood before her mirror, and oh what a sight. Her pretty Easter hat was ruined with the dye from the red umbrella. The Thursday following Eva sitting on the piazza saw someone coming down the road. "Hello, Eva here I am" and Clara Raingill waltzed around the piazza. "I have something so funny to tell you that I just put on my hat and ran over here. I don't know what's come over Bob. He goes about whistling and singing all the day through, and he's so polite to us all. "And," said Clara, bursting out laughing, "I was arranging his books and papers in his den and what do you think I saw in the corner of the room? A mouse? Oh no, not a mouse. Well, I saw two mysterious boxes, my curiosity was aroused and I just took a peep. In one box there was a doll and in the other a lady's hat. What can Bob want with a doll and a hat? Oh dear, I hope it isn't brain fever he's going to have."

Once more alone, Eva burst into tears. A doll and a hat in Bob's den—what could it mean? She loved Bob and Katie had let her secret out.

"Oh, here you are, I've been looking for you everywhere. See what the parcel postman brought me, hugging a large doll. "This is the beautifulist dollie in all the world."

"Why, Katie, who sent you that?"

"Don't know, guess Santa Claus, and he sent you one, come and see."

"Oh you dear old Bob, I had my cry for nothing."

A year later on the vine-covered piazza of a pretty country cottage, little Katie St. Clare was playing with her "beautifulist dollie." And at the other end of the piazza Bob and Eva Raingill were laughing over the Easter hat and the red umbrella.

COLONIAL THEATRE

While the progress in the development of motion pictures has been tremendous during the last few years, and has had a decided jump by means of the Edison Talking Pictures, first presented in New York one week ago, it is doubtful if any more complete and elaborate picture play will ever be shown than the one seen at the Colonial Theatre, Boston, for the first time, Monday evening, Feb. 24.

"The Miracle" is a picture play running slightly over two hours. The pictures are colored. They were made from a company of eight hundred actors and actresses who were taken to Austria for the express purpose.

Throughout the engagement at the Colonial Theatre—and the pictures will be there only two weeks—a chorus of one hundred trained voices and an orchestra of fifty musicians will be used. At the Colonial there will be performances every evening including Sunday. Regular matinees.

The Boston Post thinks the plans for a new Harvard square, Cambridge, to be a mixture of "Spanish, Italian, Dutch and Mongrel architecture."

Cherry Feller

I make no doubt the tale is true—
Of Georgie and his little hatchet,
But I would shade it just a bit,
To make the truth more nearly match it.

George had a playfellow named Ike Who loved the blade and oft would snatch it.
To him quoth George, "If you don't leave
My axe alone I bet you'll catch it."

When father saw the mischief done,
Unto his son he would attach it.
Quoth George, "I cannot tell a lie, Ike did it with my little hatchet!"

—Joseph A. Torrey.

PEOPLE OF MASSACHUSETTS

Governor Baldwin of Connecticut quite unwittingly pays this state a compliment when he says that we are more impulsive than the people of Connecticut. This is probably so, and to our credit and benefit. We do not stand for the abuses that are current in the neighboring state, and when there are big matters to come up for our consideration, we do not let them take their own course, as they do in Connecticut.

Almost any railroad or corporation could go into Connecticut, we believe, and buy up the Legislature. Nearly any measure to the benefit of the interests could be railroaded through in that state. Yes, we are impulsive when it comes to defending our rights and trying to get a square deal in matters of politics, and we respect ourselves for it.

CORPORATE HONESTY INCREASING

Major Henry L. Higginson is right when he says that corporate honesty is increasing with the process of time. Perhaps it may be tighter laws which are bringing the big corporations to the straight and narrow path, but it is to be believed that a sense of honesty is beginning to be appreciated and realized as a necessary asset for the successful conduct of any business.

"There has been much talk and criticism of corporations of late years," he says. "I have been concerned with corporations and their officers all my business life, and I will say to you that the men are getting better, and there are less abuses in the conduct of corporations than there were years ago. Particularly in the last dozen of years the conduct of corporation affairs has improved, and a corporation official who feathers his own nest at the expense of the owners of the stock is a rarity and growing rarer."

EMPIRE THEATRE, SALEM

Much of the credit for the great success of "Milestones," which Klaw & Erlanger and Joseph Brooks will produce at the Empire Theatre in Salem on Monday evening, March 3, is due to Mr. Frank Vernon, the famous London producer, to whom the authors, Arnold Bennett and Edward Knoblauch, have inscribed their play. This inscription reads: "To Frank Vernon, for having brought the authors together, instructed them to collaborate on a play and who, when they had obeyed him, put the play on the stage with an art which evoked their liveliest gratitude."

Mr. Vernon is a stage manager and producer. He studied Shakespeare and English literature under Anthony Wilson Davies, the eminent Oxford Shakespeare scholar. As a young man he spent several years traveling in India and the East. He played in London under the management of Sir Charles Wyndham and Sir Herbert Tree. For three years he was leading man for Martin Harvey. Turning to producing, he staged "A Winter's Tale" and "Cymbeline" for Miss Viola Allen in New York; Mr. Arnold Bennett's first play, "Cupid and Common Sense" at the Shaftesbury Theatre in London and "King Lear" at Haymarket Theatre, London. Of late years he has produced most of the plays of the authors of the advanced English school. At present he is associated with Vedrenne and Eadie as their producer in the Royalty Theatre management, London.

Mr. Vernon rehearsed the company that will present "Milestones" here at the Royalty Theatre, and came with it to America.

THE RAMBLER

The ordinary auctioneer will be obliged to go some if he hopes to strike the pace set by Mayor, Director of Public Safety and Auctioneer Hurley of Salem. The other evening he was engaged in the latter capacity before an eager throng, when a woman's suit was passed up for offers. He was right on deck with the introductory "come on" stuff and proceeded to dilate upon the article offered. "Ladies and gentlemen," he said, "here is an exceptionally fine suit for some fortunate buyer. It bears the union label and was manufactured in this country under the stars and stripes of this great union. The wool contained in this suit came from sheep raised in the town of Union and the man in charge was a member of the sheep-tender's union. The cloth was woven in a union factory and the suit manufactured in a union shop located in a building erected by union brick-layers, hod carriers and carpenters working union hours and receiving union wages." Although it was really a two-piece suit, some joker in the rear wanted to know if it wasn't a union suit, but he did not jar the effervescent auctioneer. Gradually the mayor coaxed and convinced the bidders, assuring them that "even the buttonholes were bored in a union factory with a union drill." Just then a woman from Union street bid $3, and the auctioneer, with that gracious salaam, for which he is famous, declared it "sold to this lucky lady here for $3."

Everyone likes a bunco-steerer, but he doesn't like to be buncoed himself. ## Brotherhood Holds Interesting Meeting at Manchester Baptist Church.

The meeting of the Manchester Brotherhood Monday evening, in the vestry of the Baptist church was largely attended and was, withal, one of the most interesting of the winter.

The president, Rev. A. G. Warner presided and in the absence of the secretary, Robt. M. Baker, read the records of the previous meeting. Arthur Walker was elected secretary pro tem. It was voted to hold the next meeting Monday evening March 10th, when Rev. E. J. Van Huiginn of Beverly will be the speaker.

George S. Sinnicks of this town was introduced as the speaker of the evening who gave a graphic and most interesting account of his trip to Bermuda a year ago last fall with the Ancient and Honourable Artillery Company of Boston of which he is a member, first, however, giving a short account of his trip to his old home at the northern extremity of the straits of Belle Isle in Labrador. He referred to this, he said, for the sake of comparison of climate between that country and the semi-tropical conditions at Bermuda.

"It was in June that I sailed from Boston for Halifax, changing steamers there for St. Johns, Newfoundland, then changing again for Port Au Basque, Bay of Islands and thence across to the Labrador shore. As we neared our destination we ran into an immense field of ice and the captain was a good deal puzzled to know what to do. We finally turned back and 24 hours later every particle of the ice field has disappeared, and on the fifteenth day of June, a beautiful day, quite cool to be sure, we landed on the Labrador shore on the very spot where I was born and 38 years after I had left there.

"It was in October that we started from Boston for Bermuda. We were all dressed in our regimentals and it was planned to have a march about the city before we started to show off our fine uniforms but a heavy rain came up and took all the glory out of that although we had to march just the same. We went to New York that evening by the Fall River line boat and we had the Salem Cadet band with us and you all know that that means we had good music and we had a very nice concert on the boat that evening. Arriving in New York the next morning we were ferried across to Jersey city and boarded the steamer "Oceania" for Bermuda. The boat had German officers and crew and had a German band on board so between the German band and American band we had plenty of good music during the trip. Bermuda lies about 700 miles S. E. of New York and 620 off Cape Hatteras. It generally takes 46 hours for the voyage but we did it in 44.

"The first conspicuous object coming to notice on sighting land is a great white object which as we draw nearer proves to be a great reservoir. There are no natural springs on the island and all the water they have to use is rain water and so every drop possible is saved. As the water of the harbor at Hamilton is very shallow, we were obliged to land on transports. We had our headquarters at the Hamilton hotel, a very fine building. That afternoon we took a carriage ride about the city having a very intelligent negro driver. I noted that the buildings were all of pure white, built of the stone of the island which is soft, light-colored coral rock. This is sawed out in blocks and laid up, the outside cemented and then whitewashed. The roofs are treated in the same way. So much white is very glaring in the sun and fearfully hard on the eyes.

"The roads are built of lime rock and are very good. One place we visited of great interest was the Devil's pool which is 30 feet deep and fed from the sea. It is filled with many kinds of fish and we could see them for a considerable depth in the pool. And then an interesting thing happened; the keeper created some disturbance among them and instantly they changed color and the pool became so dark you could see nothing in it. This is the way the fish have of protecting themselves from their natural enemies.

"Another place of interest was the crystal cave from the roof of which hung many stalagmites which were very beautiful but their beauty was sadly marred by many ends being broken off by tourists who are bound to carry away souvenirs. We also passed on the way a hedge of oleander in full bloom which was very beautiful.

"That evening there were band concerts in the open air, an English band and the Salem Cadet band playing alternately. The night was very pleasant and the concerts much enjoyed. The next day we visited the aquarium and saw a very fine collection of fish native to those waters and some of very beautiful hues. As we, (my chum and I) were walking down the street we were hailed by someone in a large building and going in found ourselves in a yacht club house and we were most royally entertained all the afternoon, being taken out for a sail to the fishing grounds, and everything possible was done for our pleasure and yet we were entire strangers to them, and this was characteristic of the people as a whole: everyone we met were always ready to give us a hearty greeting and do anything they could to make us feel welcome.

"Another interesting ride was to St. George, the first settlement on the island. The island was discovered by the English and the English flag has always flown there. That evening the grand banquet was held, always the feature of these trips by the Ancients, and all were ordered to appear in full uniform, many of the local dignities being present as guests.

"Our last half day there was spent in shopping and it is the money that the tourists leave that keeps business alive at the island. In 1909 American tourists left one million dollars on the island and our own party left $15,000 there, so of course they are glad to have American tourists come. Agricultural pursuits have almost died out. Texas is now a serious rival in the raising of onions. In fact almost all of the vegetables used on the island are imported. There are no automobiles, no electric cars, no factory whistles, no smoke, no rush, no worry. Everybody seems to be perfectly happy and contented.

"On the return trip we ran into a storm in the Gulf stream which made it very interesting, for some of the passengers at least, but I was on hand every time the dinner gong sounded. We arrived in Boston without accident and the cost of the whole trip outside of souvenirs was $26.00. Of course the cost was brought down some from the fact that everyone in our company is assessed for the trip whether they go or not and last year I was assessed $19.50 for a trip which I did not take, so I helped pay for some one else's good time."

CHILDREN'S GARDENS

The agitation in favor of providing gardens for the school children is meeting with much favor among the people of Manchester. The following is an excerpt from the "Child Welfare Magazine" for January, and bears on the subject:

"If every study but gardening were taken out of grammar grades, and gardening were brought up to the excellence it has attained in a few schools, we should be further along on our way to better parents of better children. We shall be still further along when it is brought up to its full educational possibilities."

"Erasmus Schwab, the founder of the school garden movement in Austria, wrote: 'A hundred years hence it will seem inexplicable that for centuries there could exist among cultured nations public schools without school gardens, and that in the nineteenth century communities and nations in generous emulation could furnish the school with all things dictated by common sense and profit and care, except, in thousands of cases, an educational medium that should suggest itself to the mind of even the common man.'

"The school garden will exert a powerful influence upon the heart of the child, and upon his character; it will plant in the child the love of nature, inculcate the love of work, a generous regard for others, and a wholesome esthetic sense. The school garden, as Austria is carrying it out, is a nursery for a practical knowledge, and a noble enjoyment of home nature, for the culture of the understanding, for better morals and higher prosperity of the people; it is an ideal thought but united with realism and aiming at full life in all its relations."

Every Line of Trade Represented in Organization of North Shore Master Builders.

The aims and objects of the North Shore Master Builders organization, formed at a meeting held in the Beverly Board of Trade rooms Tuesday evening, are as follows:

"To assure the public in every way possible that our membership means reliability and that a continuance of membership shall depend upon fair dealing between all parties concerned.

"To give our earnest consideration to all cases of improper practice and secure when possible redress through our mediation to our members and the public.

"To give the opportunity to our members in every reasonable manner of securing a square deal from those whom they serve."

"To impress upon our members the importance of combined effort based upon the principles as herein set forth."

The meeting Tuesday evening was largely attended, nearly every line of trade being represented. Business men from Nahant to Gloucester were present. Over 110 employers and firms were represented. Besides electing officers, a constitution and by-laws were adopted and plans were talked over for permanent headquarters.

The following officers were elected: President—Archibald Morrison, Salem; Vice-presidents,—Fred Wilson, Nahant, G. W. Pitman, Salem, Norman E. Crosby, Beverly; Secretary—Robert E. Hodgkins, Beverly Farms; Treasurer—Jasper R. Pope, Beverly; Directors—Stephen J. Connolly, Beverly Farms; J. H. Linehan, Pride's Crossing; James J. Welch, Salem; R. E. Dockham, Salem; Robert Robertson Beverly; J. M. Publicover, Beverly Farms; William Galloupe, Beverly; J. L. Folkins, Salem, H. W. Porter, Wenham, Chester L. Crafts, Manchester.

Stephen J. Connolly reported for the special committee on constitution and by-laws and the sections were adopted article by article after a general discussion. The matter of establishing permanent headquarters was talked over, some favoring Salem and others Beverly. The directors will make a report on the matter at another meeting to be held at Beverly next Tuesday evening.

Mrs. George Lee and Miss Margery Lee are at Lakewood, N. J., that the former may the better convalesce from her long illness.

CONTRACT GIVEN MANCHESTER FIRM

The contract for extensive work at Mrs. E. C. Swift's, Pride's Crossing, was awarded today to Roberts & Hoare, and Geo. S. Sinnicks, of Manchester.

Two effervescent female prattlers of the "rip-the-neighborhood-up-the-back" variety sat behind me on a train from Boston one day recently. Just as I was thinking and observing how distinctly the young brakeman was announcing the stations, one of my perpetual motion ladies in the rear remarked that it "is a shame the way they neglect to call out the stations on this road." They had talked so persistently that they had really drowned out the announcements as far as they were concerned, but it was clear to me that they were victims of the present day habit of knocking the railroads, whether good or bad.

"Yes, I know them," she said uneasily. "Good heavens, what a fool I've been!" she added, starting to her feet. "I might have known they'll say all sorts of terrible things. They must not find me here. Mr. Shaw, I'm—I am so ashamed—I wonder what you are thinking of me." Her lip trembled, and there was such a pleading look in her dark eyes that he controlled himself with difficulty. It was only by imposing the severest restraint upon his susceptibilities that he was able to approach her calmly.

"I can't tell you now—not here—what I am thinking. It isn't the place. Maybe—maybe you can read my thought, Penel—Miss Drake. Look up, please. Can't you read—oh, there now—I beg your pardon! You come to me for protection and I—well, don't be too hard on me just yet. I'll find the time and place to tell you." He drew away almost as his hand was ready to clasp hers—all because her sweet eyes met his trustingly—he could have sworn—lovingly.

"Just now I am a poor little reprobate," she sighed ever so miserably. "You are very good. I'll not forget."

"I'll not permit you to forget," he said eagerly.

"Isn't the housekeeper a long time in coming?" she asked quickly. He laughed contentedly.

"We've no reason to worry about her. It's the pursuers from Bazelhurst that should trouble us. Won't you tell me the whole story?" And she told him everything, sitting there beside him with a hot drink in her hand and a growing shame in her heart. It was dawning upon her with alarming force that she was exposing a hitherto unknown incentive. It was not a comfortable awakening. "And you champion me to that extent?" he cried joyously. She nodded bravely and went on.

"So here I am," she said in conclusion. "I really could not have walked to Ridgely tonight, could I?"

"I should say not."

"And there was really nowhere else to come but here?" dubiously.

"See that light over there up the mountain?" he asked, leading her to a window. "Old man Grimes and his wife live up there. They keep a light burning all night to scare Renwood's ghost away. By Jove, the storm will be upon us in a minute. I thought it had blown around us." The roll of thunder came up the valley. "Thank heaven you're safe indoors. Let them pursue if they like. I'll hide you if they come, and the servants are close mouthed."

"I don't like the way you put it, Mr. Shaw."

"Hello, hello—the house!" came a shout from the wind ridden night outside. Two hearts inside stopped beating for a second or two. She caught her breath sharply as she clasped his arm.

"They are after me!" she gasped.

"They must not find you here. Really, Miss Drake, I mean it. They would not understand. Come with me. Go down this hall quickly. It leads to the garden back of the house. There's a gun room at the end of the hall. Go in there, to your right. Here, take this! It's an electric saddle lantern. I'll head these fellows off. They shan't find you. Don't be alarmed."

She sped down the narrow hall, and he, taking time to slip into a long dressing coat, stepped out upon the porch in response to the now prolonged and impatient shouts.

"Who's there?" he shouted. The light from the windows revealed several horsemen in the roadway.

"Friends," came back through the wind. "Let us in out of the storm. It's a terror."

"I don't know you." There was a shout of laughter and some profanity.

"Oh, yes you do, Mr. Shaw. Open up and let us in. It's Dave Rank and Ed Hunter. We can't make the cabin before the rain." Shaw could see their faces now and then by the flashes of lightning, and he recognized the two woodsmen, who doubtless had been visiting sweethearts up toward Ridgely.

"Take your horses to the stable, boys, and come in," he called, laughing heartily. Then he hurried off to the gun room. He passed Mrs. Ulrich coming downstairs yawning prodigiously. He called to her to wait for him in the library.

There was no one in the gun room. The door leading to the back porch was open. With an exclamation he leaped outside and looked about him.

"Good heavens!" he cried, staggering back.

Far off in the night, a hundred yards or more up the road, leading to Grimes' cabin he saw the wobbling, uncertain flicker of a light wending its way like a will-o'-the-wisp through the night. Without a moment's hesitation and with something strangely like an oath, he rushed into the house, almost upsetting the housekeeper in his haste.

"Visitors outside. Make 'em comfortable. Back soon," he jerked out as he changed his coat with small respect for his injured arm. Then he clutched a couple of raincoats from the rack and flew out of the back door like a man suddenly gone mad.

CHAPTER VIII.

In Which a Ghost Trespasses.

THE impulse which drove Penelope out for the second time that night may be readily appreciated. Its foundation was fear. Its subordinate emotions were shame, self pity and consciousness of her real feeling toward the man of the house. The true spirit of womanhood revolted with its usual waywardness.

She was flying down the stony road, some distance from the cottage, in the very face of the coming tornado, her heart beating like a triphammer, her eyes bent on the little light up the mountain side, before it occurred to her that this last flight was not only senseless but perilous. She even laughed at herself for a fool as she recalled the telltale hand bag on the porch and the damning presence of a Bazelhurst lantern in the hallway.

The storm which had been raging farther down the valley was at last whirling up to the hilltops, long delayed as if in gleeful anticipation of catching her alone and unprotected. The little electric saddle lamp that she carried gave out a feeble glow, scarce opening the way in the darkness more than ten feet ahead. Rough and irksome was the road, most stubborn the wall of wind. The second threat of the storm was more terrifying than the first. At any instant it was likely to break forth in all its slashing fury, and she knew not whither she went.

Even as she lost heart and was ready to turn wildly back in an effort to reach Shaw's home before the deluge the lightning flashes revealed to her the presence of a dwelling just off the road not 200 feet ahead. She stumbled forward, crying like a frightened child. There were no lights. The house looked dark, bleak, unfriendly. Farther up the hillside still gleamed the little light that was meant to keep Renwood's ghost from disturbing the slumbers of old man Grimes and his wife. She could not reach that light, that much she knew. Her feet were like hundredweights, her limbs almost devoid of power. Grimes' hut appeared to be a couple of miles away. With a last, breathless effort she turned off the road and floundered through weeds and brush until she came to what proved to be the rear of the darkened house. Long, low, rangy, it reached off into the shadows, chilling in its loneliness. There was no time left for her to climb the flight of steps and pound on the back door. The rain was swishing in the trees with a hiss that forbade delay.

She threw herself, panting and terror stricken, into the cavellike opening under the porch, her knees giving way after the supreme effort. The great storm broke as she crouched far back against the wall, her hands over her ears, her eyes tightly closed. She was safe from wind and rain, but not from the sounds of that awful conflict. The lantern lay at her feet, sending its ray out into the storm with the senseless fidelity of a beacon light.

"Penelope!" came a voice through the storm, and a second later a man plunged into the recess, crashing against the wall beside her. Something told her who it was even before he dropped beside her and threw his strong arm about her shoulders.

He was crying something into her ear—wild, incoherent words that seemed to have the power to quiet the storm. And she was responding—she knew that eager words were falling from her lips, but she never knew what they were—responding with a fervor that was overwhelming her with joy. Lips met again and again, and there was no thought of the night, of the feud, the escapade, the Renwood ghost, or of aught save the two warm living human bodies that had found each other.

The storm, swerving with the capricious mountain winds, suddenly swept their refuge with sheets of water. Randolph Shaw threw the raincoats over his companion and both laughed hysterically at their plight, suddenly remembered.

"We can't stay here!" he shouted.

"We can't go out into it," she cried.

"Where are we?"

"Renwood's," he called back. Their position was untenable. He was drenched; the raincoats protected her as she crouched back into the most remote corner. Looking about, he discovered a small door leading to the cellar. It opened the instant he touched the latch. "Come, quick," he cried, lifting her to her feet. "In here—stoop! I have the light. This is the cellar. I'll have to break down a door leading to the upper part of the house, but that will not be difficult. Here's an ax or two. Good Lord, I'm soaked!"

"Where—where are we going?" she gasped as he drew her across the earthen floor.

"Upstairs. It's comfortable up there." They were at the foot of the narrow stairway. She held back.

"Never! It's the—the haunted house! I can't—Randolph."

"Pooh! Don't be afraid. I'm with you, dearest."

"I know," she gulped. "But you have only one arm. Oh, I can't!"

"It's all nonsense about ghosts. I've slept here twenty times, Penelope. People have seen my light and my shadow, that's all. I'm a pretty substantial ghost."

"Oh, dear, what a disappointment! And there are no spooks, not even Mrs. Renwood?"

"Of course she may come back, dear, but you'd hardly expect a respectable lady spook to visit the place with me stopping here. Even ghosts have regard for conventionalities. She couldn't."

"How much more respectable than I," Penelope murmured plaintively.

"Forgive me," he implored.

"I would, only you are so wet."

The door above was locked, but Shaw swung the ax so vigorously that any but a very strong nerved ghost must have been frightened to death once more.

"It's my house, you know," he explained from the top step. "There we are! Come up, Penelope. The fort is yours."

She followed him into the hall above. In silence they walked along the bare floors through empty rooms until at last he opened a door in what proved to be the left wing. To her surprise this room was comfortably furnished. There were ashes in the big fireplace, and there were lamps which had been used recently, for they were filled with oil.

"Here's where I read sometimes," he explained. "I have slept on that couch. Last winter I came up here to hunt. My cottage wasn't finished so I stayed here. I'll confess I've heard strange sounds—now, don't shiver! Once or twice I've been a bit nervous, but I'm still alive, you see." He lighted the wicks in the two big lamps while she looked on with chills creeping up and down her back. "I'll have a bully fire in the fireplace in just a minute."

"Let me help you," she suggested, coming quite close to him with uneasy glances over her shoulders.

Ten minutes later they were sitting before a roaring fire, quite content even though there was a suggestion of amazed ghosts lurking in the hallway behind them. No doubt old man Grimes and his wife, if they awoke in the course of the night, groaned deep prayers in response to the bright light from the windows of the haunted house. Shaw and Penelope smiled securely as they listened to the howling storm outside.

"Well, this is trespassing," she said, beaming a happy smile upon him.

"I shall be obliged to drive you out, alas," he said reflectively. "Do you recall my vow? As long as you are a Bazelhurst, I must perforce eject you."

"Not tonight!" she cried in mock dismay.

"But, as an alternative, you'll not be a Bazelhurst long," he went on eagerly, suddenly taking her hands into his, forgetful of the wounded left. "I'm going to try trespassing myself. Tomorrow I'm going to see your brother. It's regular, you know. I'm going to tell the head of your clan that you are coming over to Shaw, heart and hand."

"Oh!" she exclaimed. "You—you—no, no! You must not do that!"

"But, my dear, you are going to marry me."

"Yes—suppose so," she murmured helplessly. "That isn't what I meant. I mean it isn't necessary to ask Cecil. Ask me; I'll consent for him."

Half an hour passed. Then he went to the window and looked out into the storm.

"You must lie down and get some sleep," he insisted, coming back to her. "The storm's letting up, but we can't leave here for quite a while. I'll sit up and watch. I'm too happy to sleep." She protested, but her heavy eyes were his allies. Soon he sat alone before the fire; she slept sound on the broad couch in the corner, a steamer rug across her knees. A contented smile curved his lips as he gazed reflectively into the flames. He was not thinking of Mrs. Renwood's amiable ghost.

How long she had been asleep Penelope did not know. She awoke with a start, her flesh creeping. A nameless dread came over her; she felt that she was utterly alone and surrounded by horrors. It was a full minute—a sickening hour, it seemed—before she realized that she was in the room with the man she loved. Her frightened eyes caught sight of him lying back in the chair before the dying fire in the chimney place. The lights were low, the shadows gaunt and chill.

THE QUESTION OF LICENSE FOR MANCHESTER

Frankly, we are against the licensed saloon in a small community like Manchester, on general principles. But—there comes a time when all rules—good or bad—must be broken.

The no-license regime has worked itself out ridiculously in the last few years. It is a case of where the cure is worse than the disease. It has been said that there is more liquor sold in Manchester under no-license than if there were saloons. There are times when it is as free as water; there are other times when there is a drought. Much of the trouble in regulating the thing comes with the selectmen and the man they appoint as chief of police. The past year has been particularly noteworthy in this respect. One week everything is wide open; the next some are closed, others sell; the next week the lid is on tight, and then it begins to loosen up a little here and there. It is a farce, withal.

The chief of police of Manchester received his first written instructions from the present board of selectmen to enforce the liquor laws stringently on Tuesday, Sept. 17—five months after he was elected—and incidentally the night after the finding of Mrs. Roberts' body in the river.

There is a very strong sentiment in town in favor of license this year.

This paper does not advocate license, though it must admit that under the present conditions, license would serve as a splendid physic for the town. The sale of liquor could at least be under control and instead of ten or a dozen places selling, only one or two could then have the licensed privilege. It would do the town good to clean out its "system" for one year. With proper police supervision in Manchester the average citizen would be unable to tell whether or not there were licensed saloons in the town.

We cannot blame the summer residents for their activities in behalf of license. The Essex County club means much to Manchester and the North Shore. The mismanagement of affairs the past summer on the part of the Town authorities in closing up the club, practically, did not work toward the best of feeling and harmony.

HARBOR IMPROVEMENTS MEAN MUCH FOR MANCHESTER

If there is any one appropriation which we feel like urging the citizens of Manchester to favor at the Town meeting next Monday, it is that pertaining to dredging. The great benefits accruing from the development of the harbor will be felt ere long. The good work started several years ago ought to be carried on. It must be remembered that the state has done much for Manchester in this line, it being the open policy of the state to help those towns that help themselves. It will be a matter of only a few years when yachtsmen will come to know of the splendid yachting facilities offered in the inner harbor.

Keep up the good work!

There are few towns in the commonwealth, the size of Manchester, that has such an opportunity as Manchester of furnishing that all important commodity—coal, direct from the great mines. Only within the last few years has this been possible. From the great coal docks of the Pennsylvania and New Jersey coast barges of coal are brought direct to Manchester, thus allowing a great saving over what would necessarily be demanded in the cost of double handling as formerly. This of itself warrants continued attention to the development of our harbor.

THE AUTOMOBILE SITUATION

The report of the Highway Safety League, which is doing much to promote better conditions for autoists, presents an interesting and exhaustive account of the automobile situation in Massachusetts for the year just past. Perhaps the most significant and at the same time appalling figures compiled in the report are those of the auto casualties in this state for 1912. There were 142 people killed and 1962 injured during the past twelve months.

This statement is almost in the nature of a question as to the cause, and an answer is being sought by hundreds of pedestrians, drivers of horses and autoists. The Highway Safety League, which has been trying to check the appalling increase in casualties after having completed its first year of existence reports its investigations and activities.

The reasons for the numerous accidents are attributed to many causes. Drivers who "hog" country roads seem to be in the majority, while careless and incompetent drivers of machines enter as a close second as the "reason why." As the report of the League says, "Somehow the exhilaration accompanying rapid transit in a motor car seems to cause drivers to lose that sense of proportion which under different circumstances enables them fairly to weight their rights against the rights of others." This would indicate that offenders of auto regulations should be punished and proportionate sentences be meted out to them.

The automobile has come to stay, and if the police, the autoists and the courts cannot get together and stop the recklessness of pedestrians and drivers of horses and autos alike, the list of casualties will continue to grow yearly. Perhaps if some of the autoists would band themselves together to obey the law as the Highway Safety League has instead of attempting to evade the regulations there would be less trouble with the police.

The money of Harry K. Thaw, still in the Matteawan Hospital, seems to be insistently working for his release. The last effort to release the murderer of Stanford White is the most odorous of any former moves by his relatives and their "attorneys." It would indicate that his friends have been bribing state officials in their latest attempt to free Thaw and if there is no investigation to clean up this hospital for the criminal insane Governor Sulzer will disappoint all who want to see justice dealt out without regard to money or influence.

New York is trying to figure out how horse-racing may be enjoyed without gambling. Already preparations have been made for meets on the established tracks in the Empire State. Some of the habitués of the race-track are of the opinion that "all the sport would be taken out of the game" were betting abolished.

Fireproof construction at beach resorts is gaining popularity. The usual flimsy and precarious type of frame construction common to these places is now giving way to substantial brick and terra cotta. A mammoth combination amusement structure at Revere beach is of this construction.

The spellbinders in the small towns of the state are getting ready to loose the flood-gates of oratory on their unsuspecting townsmen, the event of course being the town-meeting.

An anti-suffragist in New York says that men are much more human than are the stone-throwing females of England. Hats off, gents.

ATTEND THE MORNING SESSION

We offer a suggestion to the Manchester voters: Attend the morning session of the opening day of Town Meeting next Monday. For the last few years the larger portion of the money appropriated for the expenses of the year was voted at the forenoon session when only a handful of voters were present. Therefore, if you are interested, attend the morning session. Much of the important discussion of the meeting is brought out at this forenoon session, too.

The Political Pot

It is all over but the counting!

It is Meldrum-Dean-Cheever for the board of selectmen. Everybody admits the downfall of the old board, as a board, and the election of only one man of the old board is conceded,—Frank G. Cheever. The election of the board of selectmen is the ONE thing at issue. Only two new men are running,—Meldrum and Dean. Last year Mr. Meldrum lacked only fifteen votes of winning. Dean is a new man in the field, but he is young and has business ability,—is straightforward and square as a brick. He ought to prove a good man for the town.

x—x

Many of the summer colonists with whom we have talked have expressed the hope that there would be a change in the clientele of officials running the affairs of the town the coming year. They are dissatisfied with the head of the police department (every move of which is guided and steered by the selectmen), and the manner in which the Essex County club was interfered with the past summer. They realize that to have things more congenial during their few months' stay in the town that there must be a change in the man or men at the helm. So they are going to do what they can to effect a change.

The Finance Committee has closed up its work, having acted on all the articles of the warrant. Their report was out this morning ready for distribution, but the Town Reports have not arrived from the binder at this writing (2 p. m. Friday), so the voters are not yet able to make themselves conversant with the report of the town officials for the past year.

The tide seems to be flowing very strongly for the Meldrum-Dean-Cheever combination for the next board of selectmen.

The Importance of Correct Carriage in The Maintenance of Health.

Subject of Talk Before Arbella Club of Manchester.

"The Importance of Correct Habit of Carriage in the Maintenance of Health" was the subject of a very interesting and instructive talk by Dr. Joel E. Goldthwait of Boston before the members of the Arbella club of Manchester and their invited guests. Tuesday afternoon. The meeting was an open one. The Manchester Woman's club and the Parent-Teacher association were among the invited guests. A general invitation was also extended the students of the high school. The hall was well filled,—it being by far the largest and most interesting of the series of meetings of the club this winter. A number of teachers from Beverly and doctors and nurses from the hospital were among those present.

Dr. Goldthwait's talk was mostly of an instructive nature, such as telling the correct way to walk up and down stairs, to sit at work and study, and the like. He also showed several large pictures of such men as Weston, who walked across the continent, and athletes, the mounted police of Boston, of Maude Adams in Peter Pan, illustrating in each case the form of carriage of the respective subjects. To illustrate the correct way to walk up and down stairs, to board street cars and trains, etc., he showed pictures which emphasized the incorrect manner of doing these things.

On the whole the talk was very much enjoyed, and was listened to with close attention by the large gathering. Much good will undoubtedly result from the talk. The club is to be congratulated on being able to have such a speaker, and they are to be further complimented on having an open meeting, thus giving others the opportunity to share in the good things provided.

Appropriations for the Police Department For 1913.

Editor North Shore Breeze,

Dear Sir:—For the next year the Town of Manchester should not appropriate more than $3000.00 for the Police Department. This department has for years been a constant and needless source of waste to the people. A great saving can be made and ought to be made annually in this department. We are making no complaint about the efficiency of the present Police Force. We shall go so far to say that our Police Department is over-efficient.

Manchester is the most law-abiding town in the Commonwealth. It is purely residential. It is not a mill-town like Lawrence, attracting men and women who have little or on regard for the law. It has not the floating population of a manufacturing city like Lynn. It never has trouble within its limits, occasioned by such unlawful elements as come to a seafaring town like Gloucester. The people of Manchester represent the highest type of citizenship. The earliest settlers of this town were law-abiding and consciencious men. Manchester has always been a town of peace. Today its people are honest and peaceable.

Our Town Report for the period ending Feb. 1, 1912, shows that during the year only 32 arrests were made. Think of it! Only 32 arrests for a whole year! Of this number 14 were released from the Station without being brought to Court; 2 were defaulted; 1 was delivered to the officers of another city. In other words, during that year only 15 arrests of sufficient importance to cause them to be brought to Court were made in this town. The majority of these arrests were made for simple drunkenness.

The Town had a Chief of Police, a Sergeant, 5 regular patrolmen and 5 special officers for those 15 arrests. The Police Department spent $7675, principally in salaries that year. To arrest each poor drunk and take him to Court it cost the people of this Town over $500. Our Police Department is spending too much money. Let us see what the other towns in this Commonwealth are spending a year in their Police Departments.

The Police Department of the Town of Manchester has requested an appropriation of $7500 for the ensuing year. This request is unwarrantable in view of the figures filed by practically every town in the Commonwealth during the past year.

Town	Population	Police force	Expenditures
South Hadley	4,894	1 regular officer	$1141.13

Belcherstown	2,054	no regular officer	514.60
Charlton	2,032	no regular officer	500.00
Rehoboth	2,001	no regular officer	25.00

Manchester with a population of 2,673 had 6 regular officers and spent $7675.00.

Compare the figures of some towns from two to four times as large as Manchester.

Town	Population	Police force	Expenditures
Northbridge	8,087	no regular officer	$469.80
Manchester	2,673	6 regular officers	7675.00
Ware	8,774	3 regulars	3893.47
Palmer	8,610	4 night officers at	399.96
Middleboro	8,210	2 regulars	2762.16
Montague	6,866	3 regulars	2443.02
Stoughton	6,316	2 regulars	1077.12
Great Barrington	5,926	3 regulars	2689.15
Grafton	5,705	no regulars	97.75
Mansfield	5,183	2 regulars	1464.13
Easton	5,139	no regulars	283.18
Fairhaven	5,122	no regulars	920.29
Amherst	5,112	2 regulars	1783.73

The above list presents a fair average of the towns of Massachusetts, showing the strength of their police force and the cost of maintaining their police departments. To maintain its police department it costs the people of Manchester about 300 times as much as it does the average town of its size in the State, and nearly 100 times more than it costs the average town from 2 to 4 times as large as it. Manchester has about 6 times as many police officers doing regular duty (?) as the average town of its size. In fact, the average town of its size has no regular police officer, being dependent wholly on constables who do no regular police duty. Manchester has about 3 times as many regular police officers as the average town three times as large as Manchester.

PILGRIM QUARTET AND READER GIVE HIGH CLASS ENTERTAINMENT AT
MANCHESTER

The entertainment in the Town hall, Wednesday evening, in the Manchester club course, was furnished by the Pilgrim Quartet of Boston, assisted by Fred E. Kendall, reader and impersonator, and was of a high class, even more so than the other entertainments in the course, all of which have been of distinctly good order.

The quartet, which has been heard in Manchester on several occasions in the past, is composed of Percy F. Baker, baritone and manager; Wm. Gustafson, Jr., basso; Robert FitzGerald, 1st tenor, and Everett S. Glines, 2nd tenor. The selections by the quartet and the solos were well selected and rendered with good expression. The opening number was "Hark the Trumpet," by Buck; as an encore they sang "Old Black Joe." A bass solo, "Sunset," by Van de Water, was rendered by Mr. Gustafson, who sang "City Choir" as an encore. The quartet sang a comic selection "Dried Apple Pies," followed by two popular selections, "Under the Southern Moonlight," with solo part by Mr. Baker, and "Colleen Machree." A duet "The Battle Eve" (Bonheur), rendered by Mr. Glines and Mr. Gustafson was followed by a closing number "Sweetheart," by the quartet. Mr. Gustafson sang as an encore to his solo the Amorous Song from Robin Hood, by de Koven.

Mr. Kendall's impersonations, readings and story telling, kept the audience in good humor all the evening. His wordless pantomime of how the old man sewed on the button was a m-dispelling number, and his sermon on Mother Hubbard, though old, was given the best we have ever heard it. He read Sam Walter Foss' "House by the Side of the Road" as one of his numbers. As a story-teller and impersonator Mr. Kendall is hard to beat..

MANCHESTER

The King's Daughters will meet at the home of Mrs. George Matheson, Rosedale avenue, Monday evening.

Monday evening, Feb. 24, will long remain as a pleasant memory to those that were fortunate to be present at the meeting of Wm. Jeffrey Colony, 109, U. O. P. F., as it was entertaining the Pilgrim Wanderers who made the pilgrimage to this town in legion. Representatives were present from Gloucester, Beverly Farms, Beverly, Salem, Ipswich, Peabody, Lynn and Boston. Supreme Director Tredwell represented the Supreme board at Lawrence and during the course of the evening made a short address. A pleasing program was presented from talent at home and out-of-town. A bountiful collation was served by the ladies, after which dancing was enjoyed by those that remained. Some 150 attended and on leaving the hall the consensus of opinion heard, was "the best ever."

NEW LOCAL POSTAL SCHEDULE

To conform with the recent act of Congress which provides that post office employees shall work a schedule of 8 hours in a period of 10 consecutive hours, the hours of duty of the clerks and carriers connected with the local office have been rearranged. The clerks have never before had an 8 hour schedule and, to make it possible, the Department has granted an allowance for auxiliary service which will be performed by Frank Floyd, who will serve until examinations are held at a later date.

To comply with the new law on the carrier force it is necessary to rearrange to some extent the carrier routes. An auxiliary carrier, Daniel T. Chane will be added.

It will be necessary for the present, until a permanent schedule can be arranged, to make earlier collections from the outlying boxes on the first collection in the morning.

Lewis Killam is to espouse his candidacy for the park commission at the Engine House tonight.

MANCHESTER.

Mrs. Herbert Darling of Attleboro is enjoying a few days' visit with Miss Lillian Lucas, Summer street. Mrs. Darling formerly was Miss Durrel..

Editor North Shore Breeze:

It came to my attention Thursday that a report had been started to the effect that I would not be a candidate this year for Park Commissioner. It is not so. I am in the race to win. Three years ago I was defeated by a very small majority. This year I am expecting the support of old and new friends combined. Thanking you for the space allowed me, I am,

NOTICE FROM THE U. S. DEPT. OF AGRICULTURE

Because of the extent to which private agencies are now collecting lumber price data, the Secretary of Agriculture has decided to discontinue publication by the Forest Service of its quarterly issue of mill and wholesale lumber prices.

When the Government began to publish these compilations detailed statistics upon production, consumption, and prices were available for all of the great industries which produce and handle raw materials, lumbering only excepted. Many of these statistics were being gathered by the Federal Government, particularly the monthly crop reports and cotton reports. Prior to 1905 the lumber industry, then fourth and now third largest of the country, lacked even annual statistics of production. In that year a compilation of the lumber cut was started by the Forest Service, with the cooperation of the Bureau of Census. Authentic records of prices of standard grades in the centers of distribution did not become available until 1908, when the Forest Service began its record of wholesale prices. This record, by leading markets, was published monthly until November, 1910. Since then it has been compiled and published on a quarterly basis.

After a year's publication of market prices there was a general demand for the compilation of prices at the mills, since the market quotations included freight and other costs subsequent to manufacture, and did not show the prices received by manufacturers. In July, 1909, the Forest Service began a quarterly publication of mill prices of lumber, which except for minor changes in species and grades has been continued without change until the present time.

Within the past two years lumber associations and other agencies have taken up actively the work of compiling and publishing lumber prices in most of the lumber-producing regions. Under these circumstances it is considered unnecessary for the Government to continue this work, except to the extent necessary for its own information. Hence the decision to discontinue the quarterly publications of the Forest Service. The usual January issue containing the prices for October, November and December is not to be brought out.

The fellow who assumes the I-am-holier-than-thou-attitude seems to forget that the Swiss cheese can do the same thing.—Houston Post.

BENJ. L. ALLEN, Registered Pharmacist

Corner School and Union Streets, Manchester, Mass.

TO THE HONORABLE THE JUSTICES OF
THE SUPERIOR COURT WITHIN
AND FOR THE COUNTY OF ESSEX:

RESPECTFULLY libels and represents
Gustaf Emil Sjolund of Manchester,
in said county, that he was lawfully married to Matilda Sjolund, now of parts unknown, at Boston in the County of Suffolk and Commonwealth of Massachusetts on the twentieth day of February, A. D. 1904, and thereafterwards your libellant and
the said Matilda Sjolund lived together as husband and wife in this commonwealth, to wit, at Manchester,
that your libellant has always been faithful to his marriage vows and obligations, but the said Matilda Sjolund
being wholly regardless of the same,
at Manchester on the twenty seventh day of February, A. D. 1904, utterly deserted him, and has continued such desertion from that day to the date
hereof, being more than three consecutive years next prior to the filing of this libel.

Wherefore your libellant prays that a divorce from the bonds of matrimony may be decreed between your libellant and the said Matilda
Sjolund.

Dated this nineteenth day of February, A. D. 1913.

GUSTAV EMIL SJOLUND.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
Essex, ss. Superior Court, February 20, 1913.

Upon the foregoing libel, ordered,
that the said libellant give notice to
said Matilda Sjolund by causing an attested copy of his said libel, and of this order thereon, to be published in the North Shore Breeze, a newspaper printed in Manchester, in the county of Essex, once a week, for three weeks successively, the last publication to be fourteen days at least before the return day of this Court, at Salem, within the county of Essex,
on the first Monday of April next, and
by mailing, forthwith, by registered letter to the libellee at her last known place of residence, an attested copy of said libel and order thereon: that she may appear at said Salem within one month from said first Monday of April and show cause, if any she has,
why the prayer of said libel should not be granted. Attest,

E. B. GEORGE, CLERK.

The foregoing is a true copy of said libel and of the order thereon.

Attest, E. B. GEORGE, CLERK.

FEB. 21-28 MAR. 7.

Manchester, Mass., Feb. 15, 1913.

To the Honorable Board of County Commissioners, County of Essex,
Commonwealth of Massachusetts:

PETITION

Respectfully represent your petitioners,
inhabitants and legal voters of the town
of Manchester, in said County, that the way in said Manchester, known as Pine street, and lying between and connecting the County road from Beverly to Gloucester, known as Bridge and Central streets in said Manchester, with the southerly terminus of the recently laid out County road from Manchester to
Hamilton at or near the junction of said
Pine street and Pleasant street, is narrow and winding and does not serve the common convenience and necessity of the inhabitants.

Wherefore your petitioners pray that your Honorable Board will widen,
straighten, relocate or locate anew or discontinue such portion or portions of the whole of said way from a point at or near the junction of Bennett, Bridge,
Central and Pine streets to a point at or near the junction of Pleasant street, the newly laid out County road from Manchester to Hamilton and Pine street, as shall appear to be required.

EDWARD F. WALSH,
RAYMOND C. ALLEN,
and seven others.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Essex, ss. Court of County Commissioners,
December Term, 1910, to wit: Feb. 20, 1913.

On the Petition aforesaid, Ordered, That said petitioners give notice to all persons and corporations interested therein that said Commissioners will meet at the Town hall, Manchester, on Friday, the 28th day of March next at 10:30 A. M., by publishing an attested copy of said petition and
of this order thereon in the North Shore
Breeze, a newspaper printed in Manchester, in said county, once a week for three successive weeks, the last publication to be fourteen days at least before the said twenty-eighth day of March. And also by serving the town clerk of the town of Manchester with an attested copy thirty days at least, and by posting up an attested copy thereof in two public places in said town fourteen days at least before
the twenty-eighth day of March at which time and place said Commissioners will proceed to view the premises and make such order in relation to the prayer of the said petition as by law they may be authorized to do.

E. B. GEORGE, Clerk.

A true copy of petition and order there-
on. Attest,

JAS. P. HALE, Asst. Clerk.

A true copy of petition and order there-
on. Attest,

PLENTY OF ROOM INSIDE

Grandmother—Why, Bennie, what a big dinner you are eating for such a very little boy!

Bennie—Yes, Grandma, I know I ain't very big, but I've got an awful thin shell!"—*Woman's Home Com-

THE PARSON'S CASE

A Maine clergyman, living at the hotel in his town, says the Sacramento Bee, ordered a typewriter and had it sent to his rooms.

It came when the clergyman was out, and the proprietor took charge of it. When the minister returned the proprietor led him behind the desk and whispered:—

"That case of yours is on ice, parson. I guess it will be all right by dinner time."

"She seems very happy."

"She is."

"Her husband had his salary raised?"

"No. She's been to every place she's getting souvenir post cards from this summer."—Detroit Free Press.

THE LITERALNESS OF ELSIE

Little Elsie was reproved by her mother for saying, "What?" She was told that she must never use that expression, but say "I beg your pardon."
The lesson evidently went home, for a little later she returned to her mother and inquired: "Mamma, I beg your pardon time is it?"

EASY ENOUGH

Said the bald-headed man to the waitress bold,

"Look here, woman! My cocoa's cold!"

She replied scornfully, "I can't help that!"

If the blamed thing's chilly, put on your hat."—Judge.

"You are an honest boy," said the lady as she opened the roll of five $1 bills, "but the money I lost was a $5 bill. Didn't you see that in the advertisement?" "Yessim," replied the boy. "It was a $5 bill that I found, but I had it changed so that you could pay me a reward."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Waiter (mysteriously)—Send for a detective, quick!

Head Waiter—What's up?

"See that woman over there? She's a man in disguise."

"Phew! How d'ye know?"

"She ordered a reg'lar square meal an' gave me a tip!"—New York Weekly.

BEVERLY FARMS

Hiram Preston, a Pride's Crossing boy might have lost his life Tuesday afternoon but for the prompt work of two other boys, Richard Southwick and Melville Gray. Young Preston was skating on the United Shoe pond at Beverly and went into the water where the ice was thin. His cries attracted the other two boys who flew to his assistance and with the use of their hockeys succeeded in getting Preston out of the water. He was rushed to the club house and treated and later taken to his home at Pride's Crossing and when he arrived there he was practically all right.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest C. Whipple of Bridgeport, Conn., have been visitors at Beverly Farms the past week.

HIS EXPLANATION

"I wish you'd tell me, Jack," said she, "What is a 'holding company'?" "A holding company? Just wait; Sit here and I will illustrate." Shyly upon his knee she sat. And then he said, with action pat: "Now I'm your company, dear Sue, "And don't you see, I'm holding you." —G. H. W.

A BOOMERANG

Mrs. Hiram Offen—I'm afraid you won't do. As nearly as I can find out you have worked in six or seven places during the past year.

Miss Brady—Well, an' how many girls has yerself had in the same toime? No less, I'm thinkin.'—Boston Transcript.

A POINT OF LAW

"Do you see that man over there?"

The world famous detective spoke in a low whisper, and his friend looked quickly around, scenting a mystery.

"Yes," he replied, just as cautiously.

"Well, he's a professional forger."

"Then why don't you arrest him?" asked the friend in surprise.

The world famous detective grinned aggravatingly.

"Can't!" he said briefly. "It's not breaking the law to make horse shoes."

PROBABLY NOT

"Do you ever see the president?" asked Willie of his uncle who lived in Washington.

"Yes; nearly every day," was the reply.

"And does he ever see you?" queried the little fellow.—Exchange.

THE RIGHT RETORT

At a dinner a married man praised the beauty of the Atlantic City girls. Then with a foolish chuckle, he added:

"I had an awful bunch of them after me when I was down there on my vacation."

The lady beside him looked at him coldly and retorted:

"Dear me! they really must have been an 'awful bunch!'"

THE NEW SPRING FASHIONS

Both in design and materials the models are altogether new and decidedly interesting. Fashion creators of New York seemed to have united to give us styles that are practical, graceful in every line and becoming in the extreme. Materials include a wealth of new weaves that will be hailed with delight for they mean a departure from the fabrics worn for the last five or six seasons.

SUITS

Smart tailored effects with coats in 26 or 28 inch lengths, having semi or fitted backs and rounded or cutaway fronts, also more elaborate models, copied from advance Parisian creations that will find undoubted favor, with the modish woman—suits manifestly designed by those who know what is what in material sartorial. Two-tone silk prunellas of charming softness, new Scotch weaves, cassmieres, worsted checks, pin stripes, henriettas, two cord Bedford fabrics, viaoreaux and cross grain weaves, in a galaxy of new shades, make up the list of materials.

SCENE FROM "THE GOVERNOR'S LADY" NOW PLAYING AT THE HOLLIS STREET THEATRE, BOSTON

NEW YORK HIPPODROME

The dramatic spectacle "Gypsy Life," The "Plunging Horses" and the Mammoth New Circus, the added features to the greatest of all spectacles "Under Many Flags" at the New York Hippodrome have startled and amused thousands of patrons during the past week.

"Gypsy Life" is in three scenes. The first is a mountain pass in Hampshire, England, the second a country hillside showing a gypsy encampment, and the third is a woodland path in the Hampshire hills. The hero of the spectacle is "Silver Heels," the favored horse of Mirza, queen of the gypsies. He is stolen for a circus and appears in the arena in the presence of the gypsies. They recognize the queen's steed and pursuit follows. The rider of "Silver Heels" in desperation plunges into the lake which the woodland path skirts and escapes to the other bank of the lake but not without a thrilling chase by the plunging horses ridden by the gypsies. This scene is one of the most picturesque and thrilling ever presented on the great Hippodrome stage and astounds the audience.

TREMONT THEATRE

A play which literally has caused a sensation in New York for the last five months came to the Tremont Theatre, Boston, Monday evening, Feb. 24th, for an indefinite engagement. "The Yellow Jacket" is described as a Chinese play, done in the Chinese manner, an expression which means nothing to a person who has never seen a Chinese play.

It was written by Geo. C. Hazelton, author of "Mistress Nell" and J. Harry Benrimo for twelve years a principal actor and stage director for David Belasco.

Before attempting to write the play, the authors read more than three hundred translations of Chinese plays and many volumes of Chinese legends and folk stories.

The cast and the production are the originals seen at the Fulton Theatre in New York. The only other company of "The Yellow Jacket" is in England, where it will be seen at the Duke of Yorke Theatre, London, on the same evening as its initial pres-

"THE GARDEN OF ALLAH"

The last weeks of the most wonderful dramatic success known to New England, "The Garden of Allah" is announced by the management of the Boston Theatre. The play which is a dramatization of the novel of that name by Robert Hichens and Mary Anderson Navarro is the superlative effort by the greatest American producing manager, Mr. George C. Tyler, head of the producing firm of the Liebler Company, who made three separate trips to Morocco to obtain correct scenic environments and atmosphere for this play. A troupe of Arabs from the Desert including a Mohammedan Priest, several aides to Rasuila, the famous bandit, and other noted figures of the Desert were brought over to this country. Madame Faddma, a famous dancer of the Ouled Nailes Tribe of Arabs was also imported. The play, which now enters upon its seventh week at the Boston Theatre has proven one of the sensations of the theatrical season.

What excuse will the ice-men have next summer?

WENHAM

Communion Sunday will be observed in the village church at the morning service by the administration of the sacrament, with an appropriate sermon by the minister, Rev. F. M. Cutler. Sunday school at noon. Y. P. S.C.E. at 6. A social service forum will be conducted at 7 under the department of social service, when Rev. Edgar Fletcher Allen will show lantern slides made by himself illustrating social and industrial conditions in Ipswich. Mr. Allen's address will serve to render Wenham better acquainted with her neighbor on the north, and will have particular bearing upon article 14 of the town warrant pertaining to accepting the "Tenement House Act."

Tuesday a district Sunday school convention will be held at the Dane St. church, Beverly.

Wednesday at 4 the Ladies' society will meet. A public supper will be served at 6. Following supper, Mrs. B. H. Tracy, by special request, will give a talk on "Glimpses of Gardening in England and on the Continent."

Little of unusual interest seems likely to come up at town meeting next Monday. From 6 to 10 a. m. balloting for town officers and on the license question will be conducted according to the Australian system. Only routine matters are suggested by the warrant, excepting article 11, which provides for public records of interments in the cemetery, and article 14, which raises the question of accepting chapter 635 of the acts of 1912, entitled, "An Act Relative to Tenement Houses in Towns." The Citizens' No-License Committee has sent circulars to all voters, urging the serious importance of the license question.

On town meeting day the Ladies' society will serve dinner at noon for voters.

SHE UNDERSTOOD IT

"What," asked the Sunday school teacher, "is meant by bearing false witness against one's neighbor?"

"It's telling falsehoods about them," said one small maid.

"Partly right, and partly wrong," said the teacher.

"I know," said another little girl, holding her hand high in the air. "It's when nobody did anything and somebody went and told about it.—Lippincott's."

Mrs. Wm. J. Dougherty spent a part of this week at Union, Me., accompanying Miss Harding, a Beverly Farms school teacher whose home is at that place.

Day officer and Mrs. Calvin L. Williams are justly proud over the fact that they are grandparents, a baby girl being born to their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Williams, on Washington's birthday.

Eli R. Hodgkins of Rockport spent the past week enjoying camp life in his cottage on the shores of Gravelly pond.

Harriet B., age 84 years 3 mos. 1 day, wife of Thomas S. Poole, died at her late home at Riverdale the early part of this week. She had been in good health until recently. The loss will fall particularly heavy on her aged husband, who of late has not been very well. They have been married 60 years and celebrated their anniversary last November. The deceased was well known to many Beverly Farms people and was the mother of the late husband of Mrs. Abbie Poole of the Farms.

Daniel Horrigan has accepted a year's position as foreman mason for a large amount of masonry work to be done on the new Henry C. Frick estate at Hamilton (The Four Corners). Mr. Horrigan is an expert in the construction of rustic stone work, and specimens of his skill can be seen on Many North Shore estates. He has been a valued superintendent for Connolly Bros. for many years.

The marriage of Albert E. Johnson and Mrs. Louisa Robb, both of Manchester, took place at the home of Rev. C. S. Pond on the 11th of this month. Mr. Johnson is the popular manager of the Smith Express Co office at the Farms. They will reside in Manchester.

At last Monday evening's meeting of the city council, another of Mayor MacDonald's efforts to give the city economical administration and put Beverly on the van with progressive cities by consolidating the offices of street commissioner and city engineer, was killed by the same 5 to 4 vote that has been against the mayor's efforts since the beginning of the year. Alderman Hull, the Beverly Farms representative, as usual, helped, with Alderman Blaisdell, Brown, Lane and McPherson to oppose a plan that has merit and which the people are interested in. The above action is viewed by many only a postponement of the consolidation.

"Don't you carry a revolver or a jimmy to protect yourself?" asked Bill the Burglar.

"No," replied his pal. "I go entirely unarmed."

"But suppose some rude person interferes with you when you are at work?"

"I always have my police whistle with me." Washington Star.

"What are you worried about?"

"I am not worried," answered Mr. Meekton, "only puzzled. What I can't understand is why a woman will march four miles in a suffragette parade and require a taxicab to travel four blocks on a shopping trip." Washington Star.

BEVERLY FARMS

The membership of the Beverly Farms Athletic club has recently been greatly increased by the admittance of a number of new members, a greater number of them being prominent business men.

Last evening the friends of Mrs. Henry I. Dyer of Hart street inveigled her to the home of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Wood, where she found a party of friends gathered, who helped her celebrate the passing of another milestone in her life. The evening was an enjoyable one, those present contributing to an entertaining program. A collation was served.

Among the Beverly Farms men who attended the 25th anniversary and entertainment of the Beverly Board of Trade on Wednesday evening were Mayor MacDonald, Rev. C. S. Pond, Arthur Standley, James Elmore, J. Albert Mayberry, Wilbur E. McDonald, George Wyness and H. E. Morgan.

The members of the North Shore Builders' association are requested to meet on next Tuesday evening, March 4th, at the Board of Trade rooms, Beverly. ROBERT E. HODGKINS,

Sales, $250,000

Tolls, $36

THIS is the most remarkable incident of its kind that we have heard of in the course of a demonstration of selling by telephone—sales totalling $250,000 at an expenditure of $36 for telephone tolls.

By permission we are enabled to say that the selling was done by MR. GEORGE R. KELLY of George R. Kelly & Co. of 104 Hanover St., Boston, New England selling agents of the American Window Glass Company of Pittsburgh.

One of our salesmen called upon Mr. Kelly to demonstrate our new toll service selling plans, only to find that already he was employing advanced methods along this line. Said he:

"We anticipated a rise in the price of window glass around January 1, and wanted to give our customers the benefit of current quotations.

"There was'nt time to make personal visits to the trade, letters wouldn't be satisfactory, so we made our calls by telephone.

"During the first ten days in December we made toll calls to widely separated points in New England, at a cost of about $36, and booked orders aggregating $250,000."

If any New England house can show greater results from selling by telephone, we would be glad to learn of them.

Business men interested in progressive ideas for the extension of trade are invited to send for our booklet entitled "Modern Methods of Money-Making," and for samples of our "Telephone Passes."

In Greater Boston, call Fort Hill 7600 and ask the Contract Department for details. Outside of Greater Boston, call the Local Manager.

Tradition, which was the forerunner of, and still supplements history, tells us that Mary Chilton was the first person to step ashore when the passengers of the Mayflower landed at Plymouth in 1620. She was thus literally "the first lady of the land," and in recognition of this distinction as it relates to American womanhood, her name has been given to this latest Colonial pattern.

Her father died while the Mayflower was at Cape Cod, and her mother soon after the landing at Plymouth, which caused her to be known as the Pilgrims' orphan.

She married John Winslow, brother of Governor Winslow, and was the mother of nine children. It is interesting to note that her will bequeathed to them an exceptional number of important pieces of silverware.

NORTH SHORE BREEZE

Vol. XI

Manchester, Mass., Friday, March 7, 1913

No. 10

SOCIETY NOTES

Mr. and Mrs. Bryce J. Allan are on the Panama trip, sailing from New York Feb. 22. They will return next week and will sail on March 15, on the Lusitania for a short European trip. Upon their return in May they will come at once to their North Shore home, "Allanbank," at Beverly Cove.

◆ ◆ ◆

Mrs. Charles K. Cummings of Boston and Pride's is in Bermuda for an early spring holiday. Mr. and Mrs. Leverett S. Tuckerman and J. Brooks Fenno are other North Shore people in Bermuda for the season, now at its height.

◆ ◆ ◆

Word has come from India to relatives and friends of the Washington B. Thomases, who are in India on their trip around the world, that Miss Margaret Thomas has the smallpox, but fortunately only a light attack. Whether this news has only been sent to quiet fears, those at home cannot yet tell, but it is most earnestly hoped the case is not at all a serious one.

◆ ◆ ◆

Mrs. Harry Pratt McKean is giving a dinner tonight at her Beacon street, Boston, home, at 8 o'clock, prior to the Hasty Pudding dinner-dance. Mrs. McKean's dinner is in compliment to Miss Hariot Post, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Post, Jr., of New York, and to Miss Mary Pyne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy R. Pyne of New York. The young people came on from New York for this exclusive Harvard function. Thursday afternoon of last week Mrs. McKean gave a very delightful tea for Miss Elizabeth F. Lee, whose engagement to Harry Pratt McKean, Jr., was recently announced.

Mrs. Frank Northen has decided not to return to America for the marriage of her only sister, Miss Helen Fitch of Boston and Manchester, to Julian P. Fairchild of Brooklyn, which will be celebrated very quietly in mid-April. Instead the young people who are going abroad for an extended tour are to spend some time with Mr. and Mrs. Northen at their residence in North Hurley, Gloucestershire, England.

SOCIETY NOTES

Mr. and Mrs. Francis M. Whitehouse, who are keeping their house at Manchester open all winter as usual, returned late last week from a trip South.

◆ ◆ ◆

N. S. Simpkins, who has been spending most of the winter in the far South, returned to Washington in time to take in the inauguration festivities with his brother, C. Ritchie Simpkins. He will come on to Beverly Farms in the near future.

◆ ◆ ◆

Family mourning for the late Mrs. Frederick R. Sears, a favorite aunt of the bride-elect, will shed a deep shadow over the wedding of Miss Julia Newbold, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Newbold of New York, to Redmond Cross, which is listed for the Easter season, and the affair will consequently be small and quiet in the extreme. The engagement was announced in the early winter. Miss Newbold is well known on the North Shore, where she has been a frequent visitor at the home of her grandfather, Hon. T. Jefferson Coolidge, at Manchester, and of her aunt, Mrs. Lucius Manlius Sargent, at Pride's Crossing.

◆ ◆ ◆

Mr. and Mrs. John N. Willys and young daughter of the Pride's Crossing colony, who left the end of January for an extended European trip, probably will not return in season to put in any time on the North Shore the coming summer. Mr. Willys has recently purchased the "Praying Pilgrim," Rembrandt's famous painting, which for many years hung in the private gallery of Maurice Kaun, in Paris, and is said to be one of the choicest works of the great Dutch master.

◆ ◆ ◆

Mrs. E. B. Haven of Boston and Beverly Farms is at Laurel-in-the-Pines, Lakewood, N. J., for an extended sojourn.

◆ ◆ ◆

"Barr Harbor," at Beverly Farms, which Mr. and Mrs. James C. Barr have a lease, has been offered for rent the coming summer, as the Barrs are looking for a larger cottage on the North Shore, we understand.

SOCIETY NOTES

Rev. and Mrs. Wm. H. Dewart and family expect to return from their trip to Europe toward the middle of June and plan to come direct to their house at Manchester Cove, for the summer. They are to sail from New York Saturday on the Lapland. Mr. Dewart's father, Rev. James H. Dewart, D. D., a Methodist clergyman of St. Paul, Minn., will sail with them and will remain abroad this summer. They will tour the continent after establishing their family in a house in Broadway, England, which is the present home of Mrs. Mary Anderson Navarre.

◆ ◆ ◆

One of the most interesting events of the Easter week will be the costume dance which George M. Morgan of Manchester and Boston will give for his debutante daughter, Miss Dorothy Morgan. It will be given at the Country club, Brookline, on Thursday night, March 27.

◆ ◆ ◆

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Norman and daughter Miss Hope Norman were among the North Shore people who went on from Boston for the inauguration in Washington this week.

◆ ◆ ◆

Mr. and Mrs. James C. Barr of Boston and Beverly Farms, who spend half of every month at their apartment at the Ritz-Carlton in New York, have returned to their home, 259 Beacon street. Mr. and Mrs. Barr were guests at the dinner given in New York by Mrs. Patton-Glover, sister of Mrs. Corbin (widow of Gen. Corbin) of Washington, in honor of Mrs. Glover's daughter, Mrs. Robert A. Livingston, Jr., who was the charming Miss Gladys P. Glover. They were also at the tea given in honor of Mrs. Benjamin Thaw, and many other entertainments, including a dinner by Barton Willing, brother of Mrs. Ava Willing Astor, and an opera party in Mrs. E. Francis Hyde's box at the Metropolitan.

Congregations have gone over to New York the past week to Mr. and Mrs. Lathrop Brown (Helen Hooper) upon the birth to them of a second daughter. This winter Mr. and Mrs. Brown are occupying an apartment at the Ritz-Carlton.

Real Estate and Improvements ... Up and Down the North Shore ...

Quincy A. Shaw, 2nd, is having plans estimated for the building of a new residence on his estate at Preston place, Beverly Farms. It is planned that the present house will be moved somewhat and used for an ell to the new house.

A large dairy barn is being built at Ipswich for Robert Frazier of New York. It will be of concrete and of large dimensions. George S. Sinnicks of Manchester, has the contract for part of the work.

The first move is what may mean the solution of all the labor troubles centered around the extensive improvements in progress on the George R. White property, Smith's Point, Manchester, came yesterday when the Bricklayers' and Masons' Union of Beverly, voted to take the job off the unfair list. The trouble has stirred both employers and union men from one end of the North Shore to the other.

The trouble started weeks ago when a non-union Boston firm was given the contract to do the brick veneering. The union men employed by other contractors, took umbrage at this work and first the carpenters on the job were called off. Then the masons were taken away and the painters followed suit. Even union teamsters refused to haul lumber to the job, but a tie-up was prevented by the contractors in various lines finding men not affiliated with the unions who were willing to work on the job. The first break in the fight of the unions came through the Beverly local of the bricklayers and masons. Business Agent Hurd took up the matter and put it up to the union that the better way out of the difficulty was to allow the contractors other than the Boston firm which gave the trouble to finish up the jobs, but putting it on the fair list so far as they were concerned. All the other contractors ran union shops and the Boston concern was the only open shop man on the list. The contracts had been made long before the Boston firm came on the job. The union took Mr. Hurd's view of the matter and voted to put the job on the fair list so far as the other contractors were concerned who employed union help. It is expected that the other unions affected in the strike will take up the matter soon and will follow suit.

NAHANT BECOMES RICH

That Nahant will soon rival Brookline for the honor of being the richest town in the State is indicated in a report compiled by the Nahant town officials. The report shows the real and personal estate of Nahant was increased from $5,662,954 to $9,184,295.—Beverly Times.

HER RECITATION

"Put some spirit into it, child," shouted her father; who is an actor. "Make some gestures. What is she reciting anyhow?" he demanded of his wife.

"She won't need any gestures with this," retorted the latter. "She is reciting the multiplication table."—Kansas City Journal.

HEADQUARTERS AT SALEM

It has been decided that the headquarters of the North Shore Builders' association shall be at Salem. A meeting of the members was held Tuesday evening at the Board of Trade rooms, Beverly, and was largely attended. Reports were read from the various committees and several new names were added to the charter list. It was voted to have permanent headquarters and the sentiment expressed at the meeting was in favor of locating the offices at Salem.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE

But three weeks remain of the season at the Boston Opera House, as the last performance will be given on Saturday evening, Mar. 29. In order that the wind-up may come about in a blaze of glory, Director Russell has reserved some of his most attractive offerings for the final weeks.

Following the remarkable success which "The Jewels of the Madonna" has attained, Mr. Russell will produce another of the Wolf-Ferrari operas on Friday evening next. This time it will be "The Sercet of Suzanne," a one-act composition so replete with grace and melody that it has been likened to the music of Mozart, and higher praise there could not be.

The second novelty of the week will be Saint-Saens "Sampson et Dalila," to be heard for the first time this year on Wednesday evening. Its initial presentation made a brilliant event of the opening performance last season, and the same cast will reappear almost in its entirety.

On Monday night the last performance of "Aida" will take place, with Mmes. Melis and Gay and MM. Zenatello, Rossi and Mardones in the principal parts.

For the Saturday matinee "Faust" should prove a most potent attraction, cast as it will be with Miss Nielsen as Marguerite.

On Saturday evening this brilliant week will be brought to a close by the only appearance in Boston this season of Mme. Lina Cavalieri, the famous Italian soprano, in the title role in "Carmen."

At the Sunday afternoon concert, March 16, Rudolph Ganz, the famous Swiss pianist, will as solist, assist the orchestra.

SOCIETY NOTES

The eyes of society will be turned toward Manchester next week, when the initial wedding of the season will take place in the small summer church (Episcopal) on Smith's Point. Miss Helen Read becomes the bride of Dr. Francis Lowell Burnett of Boston on Wednesday, the 12th. A wedding breakfast will follow the marriage, at the home of the Reads on "Read's Island."

One of the last debutante events of the season will be the dance which Mrs. Alexander Cochrane of Pride's and Hamilton is to give at her Boston home, 257 Commonwealth avenue, Friday evening, April 4, for her grand-neice, Miss Miriam Sears. Miss Sears was to have been presented at a large ball at the Copley-Plaza early in January, but owing to the death of her aunt, Mrs. Frederick R. Sears, Jr., the invitations were recalled.

Mrs. Dawson Callery of Pittsburg, who expected to visit Mrs. James C. Barr in Boston this winter, postponed her visit and met Mrs. Barr in New York, where she gave a luncheon at the Gotham recently. Mrs. Callery will visit Mrs. Barr on the North Shore the coming summer, as will also Mr. and Mrs. Richard Gibson, the former a brother of Preston Gibson of Washington.

Henry C. Frick and party had a thrilling experience recently when the yacht Rhicclair, belonging to Daniel G. Reid of New York, and chartered by Mr. Frick, caught fire at sea. At one time, it is said, the flames appeared so serious that Mr. Frick and party discussed abandoning the boat. They put in at Colon, Panama, where the crew assisted by the fire department succeeded in subduing the blaze.

FERNCROFT OPEN

The famous Fern-Croft Inn, now known as Fern-Croft club, is open for the season, with dining conveniences and amusements as last year. Motorists will be interested to learn that Middleton, in which township the Inn is located, went license at the election last Monday.

MANCHESTER

DR. MERRITT A. LONG

Dr. Merritt A. Long, a well known Manchester young man, passed away after less than a week's illness, Tuesday, at the Lowell General Hospital, of septic pneumonia. The Lowell Courier-Citizen of Wednesday contained the following account, which suggests somewhat the high esteem in which Dr. Long was held in that city.

"Dr. Long was conscious up to the hour of death and met the inevitable with fortitude and calmness. He suffered much, but his calmness in the face of approaching death was admirable, and served to somewhat assuage the grief of his only brother, and Mr. Edgar L. Fay, an old friend, who were with him at the last.

"Dr. Long was born in Manchester-by-the-Sea, 35 years ago, coming of a very old family of that town. He worked his way through Tufts college, overcoming many obstacles to obtain an education. After graduation, he came to Lowell where he served as interne at the Lowell General hospital for one year, and an additional 10 months to finish the term of another interne. Entering general practice a few years ago, he made a fine reputation as a physician and a gentleman. Much of his time was spent in association with Dr. McGannon, who is now in Florida, and who will be greatly grieved to learned of the death of his friend.

"The mother of Dr. Long, aged 77 and a brother, Thomas W. Long, both of Manchester-by-the-Sea, are the only surviving members of his family. He was a member of Kilwinning lodge of Masons. His early death will give sorrow to a large circle in this city. Those who knew of his early struggles and his aspirations for an honorable career in his profession, will feel that in his departure from among us the loss is a severe one."

Dr. Long was graduated from the Manchester High school in 1895, and it was several years later, after working to get a financial start, that he entered upon his studies at Tufts, which resulted in his being graduated from the Medical School. He made rapid strides in his profession in Lowell and had a splendid practice. He was an assistant surgeon at the Lowell General Hospital, and was to have been appointed on the regular surgeons' staff at the annual meeting next Monday.

He was born in Manchester, June 12, 1877.

Funeral services were held Wednesday at St. Anne's chapel, Lowell, the

A PROGRESSIVE NEWSPAPER

Springfield Republican

MASSACHUSETTS

HONESTLY DEVOTED TO THE SERVICE OF THE PEOPLE

Independent of Selfish Political, Personal or Financial Influences
COURAGEOUS, ENTERPRISING, INTERESTING

ESTABLISHED IN 1824 BY SAMUEL BOWLES.

DAILY (morning) $8; SUNDAY $2; WEEKLY $1 a Year.

The Springfield Republican stands for political progress and social justice. It has stood for these causes consistently and strongly during the 88 years of its career. It stands also for honesty in all of the relations of life, personal, political, commercial, industrial, national and inter-national. It considers that honesty is an essential basis of real political progress and social justice. It refuses to follow popular leaders who lack this fundamental virtue, however captivating and eloquent.

The Republican has a profound faith in democratic institutions, but it recognizes clearly that the safeguard of a progressive democracy is universal education, developing an enlightened electorate, which may deal justly with the difficult problems that modern civilization presents. It looks forward, through the agency of such an electorate, to an increasing restraint of the aggrandizing activities of powerful individuals and groups, to the end that there may be a juster distributions of the fruits of labor and a fuller realization of the ideal of the commonwealth.

The Republican seeks to embody its principles in its own service to the people as a newspaper. It strives ever to deal with its public honesty in its presentation of the news of the day. It tells no tales to promote its sales. It aims to educate, to enlighten and uplift its readers; and yet to interest and entertain them by honest methods. Its editorial page is one of the strongest, keenest, broadest, in the country. It deals with all the subjects that concern humanity in the spirit of helpfulness, of healthier, happier living.

The Republican gives a news service that is real, not flashy. It commands the best agencies for its general news, often supplemented by special correspondence. It covers its home territory with remarkable thoroughness, and it liberal treatment to literature and to the arts, sciences and industries. The Sunday Republican is especially rich in delightful literary and other diverting features and departments.

THE WEEKLY REPUBLICAN

Presents in 16 broad pages the best editorial, literary and special features of the seven daily issues, with carefully edited and rewritten summaries of the important news of the week. It is an excellent home journal for intelligent people who wish to keep abreast of the best thought of the times, as well as of the news of the day, and it costs only ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

place being crowded with professional men and friends. The Masons had charge of the services. The remains were brought to Manchester for burial, and services were held in the Crowell memorial chapel yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Dr. Rider of Gloucester spoke very feelingly, comparing the deceased with the soldier on the field of battle, giving his life for others. The pall-bearers were nearly all doctors from Lowell,—brother Masons. Interment was in Rosedale cemetery.

MANCHESTER CLUB LECTURE

A travel lecture on "Present Day China" by Lieut. Charles F. Gammon, formerly military instructor for the Chinese government will provide the next entertainment of the Manchester club course to be held Wednesday evening, March 12, at Town hall. Hand-colored slides, the work of Japanese artists, will make the lecture doubly fascinating.

Lieut. Gammon has spent 17 years in oriental lands. He has been an extensive traveler and his experience covers a period of exciting events and marvelous changes, including the Boxer uprising of 1900 and the Russo-Japanese war. These subjects are included in his lecture.

In close touch with the progress of the Russo-Japanese war, Lieut. Gammon was privileged to visit the battlefields of Manchuria, and, with his camera, to be among the first to enter Port Arthur as a guest of the Japanese general commanding, soon after its fall. It is because of the personal touch that his lectures are vivid and wholly pleasing and enable his audiences to see for themselves the remarkable features of China.

A terrified exclamation started to her lips. Her ears again caught the sound of some one moving in the house—some alien visitor. There was no mistaking the sound—the distant, sepulchral laugh and the shuffling of feet, almost at the edge of the couch, it seemed.

"Randolph!" she whispered hoarsely. The man in the chair did not move. She threw off the blanket and came to a sitting posture on the side of the couch, her fingers clutching the covering with tense horror. Again the soft, rumbling laugh and the sound of footsteps on the stairway. Like a flash she sped across the room and clutched frantically at Randolph's shoulders. He awoke with an exclamation, staring bewildered into the horrified face above.

"The—ghost!" she gasped, her eyes glued upon the hall door. He leaped to his feet and threw his arms about her.

"You've had a bad dream," he said. "What a beast I was to fall asleep. Lord, you're frightened half out of your wits. Don't tremble so, dearest. There's no ghost. Every one knows!"

"Listen—listen!" she whispered. Together they stood motionless, almost breathless before the fire, the glow from which threw their shadows across the room to meet the mysterious invader.

"Good Lord," he muttered, unwilling to believe his ears. "There is some one in the house. I've—I've heard sounds here before, but not like these." Distinctly to their startled ears came the low, subdued murmur of a human voice and then unmistakable moans from the very depth of the earth—from the grave, it seemed.

"Do you hear?" she whispered. "Oh, this dreadful place! Take me away, Randolph, dear!"

"Don't be afraid," he said, drawing her close. "There's nothing supernatural about those sounds. They come from lips as much alive as ours. I'll investigate." He grabbed the heavy poker from the chimney corner and started toward the door. She followed close behind, his assurance restoring in a measure the courage that had temporarily deserted her.

In the hallway they paused to look out over the broad porch. The storm had died away, sighing its own requiem in the misty treetops. Dawn was not far away. A thick fog was rising to meet the first glance of day. In surprise Shaw looked at his watch, her face at his shoulder. It was after 5 o'clock.

"Ghosts turn in at midnight, dear," he said, with a cheerful smile. "They don't keep such hours as these."

"But who can it be? There are no tramps in the mountains," she protested, glancing over her shoulder apprehensively.

"Listen! By Jove, that voice came from the cellar."

"And the lock is broken," she exclaimed. "But how silly of me! Ghosts don't stop for locks."

"I'll drop the bolts just the same," he said as they hurried down the hallway. At the back stairs they stopped and listened for many minutes. Not a sound came up to them from below. Softly he closed the door and lowered two heavy bars into place. "If there's any one down there they probably think they've heard spooks trotting around up here."

"Really, it's quite thrilling, isn't it?" she whispered in her excitement.

"In any event we're obliged to remain under cover until they depart," he said thoughtfully. "We can't be seen here, dearest."

"No," she murmured, "not even though it is our house."

They returned to the big room as softly as mice, and he left her a moment later to close the heavy window shutters on the porch. When he returned there was a grim smile on his face and his voice shook a little as he spoke.

"I've heard the voices again. They came from the laundry, I think. The Renwoods were downright Yankees, Penelope. I will swear that these voices are amazingly English."

CHAPTER IX.

In Which the Author Trespasses.

THIS narrative has quite as much to do with the Bazelhurst side of the controversy as it has with Shaw's. It is therefore but fair that the heroic invasion by Lord Cecil should receive equal consideration from the historian. Shaw's conquest of one member of the force opposing him was scarcely the result of bravery; on the other hand Lord Cecil's dash into the enemy's country was the very acme of intrepidity.

Down the drive and out into the mountain road clattered the three horsemen. Lady Bazelhurst, watching at the window casement, almost swooned with amazement at the sight of them. The capes of their mackintoshes seemed to flaunt a satirical farewell in her face; their owners, following the light of the carriage lamps swept from view around a bend in the road and bravely plunged into the dark territory over which the enemy ruled. It was the duke who finally brought the cavalcade to a halt by propounding a most sensible question.

"Are you sure she came this way, Cecil?"

"Certainly. This is Shaw's way, isn't it?"

"Did she say she was going to Shaw's?"

"Don't know. Evelyn told me. Hang it all, Barminster, come along. We'll never catch up to her."

"Is she riding?"

"No—horses all in."

"Do you know, we may have passed her. Deuce take it, Bazelhurst, if she's running away from us, you don't imagine she'd be such a silly fool as to stand in the road and wait for us. If she heard us she'd hide among the trees."

"But she's had an hour's start of us."

"Where ees she coming to?" asked the count, with an anxious glance upward, just in time to catch a skirmishing raindrop with his eye.

"That's just it. We don't know," said the duke.

"But I must find her!" cried Lord Cecil. "Think of that poor girl alone in this terrible place, storm coming up and all that. Hi, Penelope!" he shouted in his most vociferous treble. The shrieking wind replied. Then the three of them shouted her name. "Gad, she may be lost or dead or— Come on, Barminster. We must scour the whole demmed valley."

"He's like a wildcat tonight," said the duke in an aside to the little Frenchman, referring to his lordship. "Demme, I'd rather not cross him. You seem to forget that his sister is out in all this fury."

"Mon Dieu, but I do not forget. I would give half my life to hold her in my arms thees eenstan'."

"Dem you, sir, I'd give her the other half if you dared try such a thing. We didn't fetch you along to hold her. You've got to hold the horses, that's all."

"Diable! How dare you to speak to!"

"What are you two rowing about?" demanded his lordship. "Come along! We're losing time."

Away they swept, Penelope's two admirers wrathfully barking at one another about satisfaction at some future hour.

The storm burst upon them in all its fury—the maddest, wildest storm they had known in all their lives. Terrified, half drowned, blown almost from the saddles, the trio finally found shelter in the lee of a shelving cliff just off the road. While they stood there shivering, clutching the bits of their well nigh frantic horses the glimmer of lights came down to them from windows farther up the steep. There was no mistaking the three upright oblongs of light. They were tall windows in a house, the occupants of which doubtless had been aroused at this unearthly hour by the fierceness of the storm.

"By Jove," lamented the duke, water running down his neck in floods, "what a luxury a home is, be it ever so humble, on a night like this."

"Mon Dieu, mon Dieu," groaned the count, "how comfortab' zey look! And here? Eh bien! Qui fait trembler la terre! I am seeck! I die!"

"Penelope is out in all this," moaned his lordship.

"I am not so sure of that. Trust a woman to find a place where she can't ruin her hat. My word for it, Cecil, she's found a safe roost. I say, by Jove!" The duke was staring more intently than ever at the windows far above. "I have it! Isn't it rather odd that a house should be lighted so brilliantly at this hour of night?"

"Demmed servants forgot to put out the lamps," groaned Bazelhurst without interest.

"Nonsense! I tell you what—some one has roused the house and asked shelter from the storm. Now, who could that be but Penelope?"

"By Jove, you're a ripping clever ass, after all, Barminster—a regular Sherlock Holmes. That's just it. She's up there where the windows are. Come on. It's easy sailing now," cried his lordship, but the duke restrained him.

"Don't rush off like a fool. Whose house is it?"

"How the devil do I know? This is Shaw's land, and he hasn't been especially cordial about!"

"Aha! See what I mean? Shaw's land, to be sure. Well, hang your stupidity, don't you know we're looking at Shaw's house this very instant? He lives there and she's arrived, dem it all. She's up there with him—dry clothes, hot drinks and all that, and we're out here catching pneumonia. Fine, isn't it?"

"Gad! You're right! She's with that confounded villain. My God, what's to become of her?" groaned Lord Cecil, sitting down suddenly and covering his face with his hands.

"We must rescue her!" shouted the duke. "Brace up, Cecil! Don't be a baby. We'll storm the place."

"Not in zis rain!" cried the count.

"You stay in the shade and hold the horses, that's what you do," said the duke scornfully.

After many minutes there came a break in the violence of the storm and preparations were at once made for the climb up the hill. Deveau was to remain behind in charge of the horses. With their bridle reins in his hands he cheerfully maintained this position of trust, securely sheltered from the full force of the elements. Right bravely did the duke and his lordship venture forth into the spattering rain. They had gone no more than three rods up the path when they were brought to a halt by the sounds of a prodigious struggle behind them. There was a great trampling of horses' hoofs, accompanied by the frantic shouts of the count.

"I say, Deveau, step up and pound on the door."

"I cannot hold zem! Mon Dieu! Zey are mad! Ho! ho! Help!"

"Hold to 'em!" shouted Lord Cecil.

"Help!" shouted the count, at the same moment releasing his grip on the reins. Away tore the horses, kicking great chunks of mud over him as he tumbled aimlessly into the underbrush. Down the road clattered the animals, leaving the trio marooned in the wilderness. Groaning and half dead, the unfortunate count was dragged from the brush by his furious companions. What the duke said to him was sufficient without being repeated, here or elsewhere. The count challenged him as they all resumed the march up the hill to visit the house with the lighted windows.

"Here is my card, m'sieur," he grated furiously.

"Demme, I know you!" roared the duke. "Keep your card, and we'll send it in to announce our arrival to Shaw."

In due course of time, after many slips and falls, they reached the front yard of the house on the hillside. It was still raining lightly. The thunder and lightning were crashing away noisily farther up the valley. Cautiously they approached through the weeds and brush.

"By Jove!" exclaimed his lordship, coming to a standstill. He turned the light of his lantern toward the front elevation of the house. "Every door and window except these three are boarded up. It can't be Shaw's home."

"That's right, old chap. Deuced queer, eh? I say, Deveau, step up and pound on the door. You've got a card, you know."

"Que diable!" exclaimed the count, sinking into the background.

"We might reconnoiter a bit," said Bazelhurst. "Have a look at the rear, you know."

Around the corner of the house they trailed, finally bringing up at the back steps. The windows were not only dark, but boarded up. While they stood there amazed and uncertain, the rain came down again in torrents, worse than before if possible. They scampered for cover, plunging three abreast beneath the same steps that had sheltered Penelope and Shaw such a short time before.

"Ouch! Get off my foot!" roared the duke.

"Zounds! Who are you punching, demme! Hullo! What's this? A door and open, as I live!" The trio entered the cellar door without ceremony. "Thank God, we're out of the rain at least!"

It was not until they had explored the basement and found it utterly without signs of human occupancy that the truth of the situation began to dawn upon them. Barminster's face was white, and his voice shook as he ventured the horrid speculation:

"The good Lord save us—it's that demmed haunted house Pen was talking about!"

"But ze lights?" queried the count.

"Ghosts!"

"Let's get out of this place," said Lord Bazelhurst, moving toward the door. "It's that beastly Renwood house. They say he comes back and murders her every night or so."

"Mon Dieu!"

"Penelope isn't here. Let's move on," agreed the duke readily. But even fear of the supernatural was not strong enough to drive them out into the blinding storm. "I say, look ahead, there's Shaw's place!"

EX-PRESIDENT TAFT

Now that Woodrow Wilson has been inaugurated President of the United States, it seems to be the popular thing with many people to critically compare with him the now ex-President Taft. With all due deference to the new chief executive at Washington there are many things about Mr. Taft that may be recorded in his favor.

William H. Taft, while he was President, and at all times, was a gentleman and played fair. His friends and political enemies were served alike. His fellow countrymen have always found him a ready listener when they had a straightforward policy to work out.

To be sure, Mr. Taft has had trouble, but he has been fairly well able to keep above water and avoid verbal encounters with those who were working against him. The efforts of some of his apparent political enemies to force him to intervene in the Mexican situation were repulsed by him, as he was taking no chances of provoking a foreign war.

The new President will find his "house in order," for Taft has stood for the sound things, measures which have had some substance. For this he has been criticised; he has been branded as a conservative of too pronounced a type. His smile has been thought that of the care-free, thoughtless demagogue, but as has been said before, it is probably that of the fellow who laughs last.

Mr. Taft has enforced the law, not excepting friends who were in the wrong. He has attempted, with some measure of success, to make his administration economical and business-like. His appointments have been satisfactory in all departments, he being an admirer of the merit system.

Above all, he has always been a gentleman and has been judicious and courteous in his dealings. Some of the reasons for his defeat are indeed mysterious.

OUR NEW CHIEF

Politics has some bad actors, but the country is hoping that in the latest transition from a period of comparative unprogressiveness to that era begun with the presidency of Woodrow Wilson the stage will be well set at Washington. With the farewell of William H. Taft from Washington on March 4 came the hail to a new chief, a man who must stand the severest fire of perhaps any one who has ever aspired to the biggest office that the American people can give a man.

It looks as if President Wilson is equal to the demands made of him. Of forceful and energetic character, and with the stamp of approval of 90,000,000 people, the latter look for a period of progressive policies and material gain in affairs governmental. Mr. Wilson is well equipped for his position, and although almost entirely unknown to the country three years ago, has proved the most lively "dark horse" that has ever won the spurs of a presidential nomination and subsequent election. His ability as a public speaker, his keenness in solving problems of governing bodies and his great mental force should place him in the line of great presidents. It is sincerely to be hoped so.

WITH THE SUFFRAGISTS

It was to be regretted that the biggest and most emphatic demonstration of the strength of woman suffrage in this country which was exemplified in the parade at Washington this week was broken up in an unruly mob. The absence of proper police protection for the marchers reflects entire discredit to that force which was responsible for good order during the demonstration.

The parade in itself was nothing which could prompt such an expression of disfavor by those who interrupted it. It must have been disheartening, to say the least, for "General" Jones and her followers to meet with such a reception after many weary days of plodding through rain and mud. Nevertheless, the parade has been the most striking piece of work that the suffragists have as yet launched, and its effect will not be entirely lost in the movement.

SIMPLY AN EXPERIMENT

In an effort to see whether certain Harvard men are chronic "flunkers" or that their daily schedule is too strenuous, with not enough sleep, the authorities at the Cambridge university have issued cards asking the students to record how much time is spent in eating, sleeping, studying, attending the theatre, and kindred other diversions which occupy the time of the student. The committee on scholarship is to pass on the cards after they have been filled out "conscientiously" by the undergraduates.

Although the experiment would seem to be a good one and will at least prove interesting to the faculty and perhaps the public at large it is doubtful if the daily programs of the students can be made over to suit the tastes of the faculty. Some of the men are asking themselves what right the faculty has to ask them to keep a schedule in this way, while others are speculating as to what code of "blue laws" will be handed down by the profs. when the result of the experiment is known.

Recommendations will probably be made, but whether they will be followed by the Harvard men is another question.

THE TITANTIC MEDAL

The decoration of Captain Rostron of the steamship Carpathia with a medal voted by Congress was a fitting tribute to the work of the captain who rendered a valuable service to humanity at the time of the sinking of the Titanic.

The placing in his hands of the medal by President Taft was a distinctive recognition of the captain's heroism. It might be said that he did no more than his duty, but even in the best sense of that word it would seem that he did more. #### WITH THE MANCHESTER BOARD OF SELECTMEN.

The newly-elected board of selectmen met Tuesday evening and organized with Nathan P. Meldrum as chairman, and George R. Dean as secretary. Frank G. Cheever will be the committee on highways; Mr. Meldrum will be in charge of the poor-in and poor-out; Mr. Dean will have charge of Tuck's Point.

The board will meet weekly on Tuesday evenings, at 7.30 o'clock.

The following appointments were made: Benjamin M. Crombie, supt. of streets; Austin A. Jones, clerk to the board; Dr. J. J. Riordan, inspector of animals and veterinary.

NEW PIPE ORGAN FITTINGLY DEDICATED AT SACRED HEART CHURCH

The services at the Sacred Heart church, Manchester, last Sunday evening, in connection with the installation of a new pipe organ, were very largely attended, not only by the church parishioners, but by the townspeople in general, and by many from out of town. Miss Evelyn Guinivan of Beverly, the regular organist, presided at the key-board and the church choir of twenty-five voices sang Rosewig's vespers. Ralph G. Osborne, the eminent baritone, late with the Metropolitan Opera Company, was the soloist. He sang Pro Peccatis from the Miserere among other numbers and there were several soloists from the regular choir. Miss Julia Grady of Beverly also sang very sweetly. The concert was at 8 o'clock, and the church auditorium was crowded to its capacity when the members of the Holy Name society filed into the church. The singing by the choir and soloists was exceptionally well rendered and was greatly enjoyed.

The new organ cost $4000. It was manufactured by James Cole & Co., of Melrose and is a most powerful and beautiful instrument. It is a divided organ, made so in order to preserve the beautiful memorial window in the front of the church. It has 98 pipes and is operated by an electric motor. The double pedestal was built by Roberts & Hoare. Harry White put in the electrical connections and John W. Carter also did some work in connection with the installation.

Some Notes on a Few of Them

Some few weeks ago there was held in the City of New York a conference and exhibit under the auspices of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene. The founder of this organization while young suffered from some mental trouble and was in a hospital for the insane for several years. He recovered and when he got out he determined to do something to improve the management of insane hospitals. Such men as William James and Joseph Choate became interested in his story and advised him to write out his experiences. They were published in book-form under the title "A Mind That Found Itself."

In "What is the matter with your Brain" by Stoddard Goodhue in the Cosmopolitan something is told about what is being done to improve the treatment of mental disease.

"Recollections of a Soldier's Wife," by Mrs. John A. Logan now running as a serial in the Cosmopolitan tells this month about the battle of Shiloh and how Forts Henry and Donelson were captured. It is now half a century since the war, but its story is still full of interest. The faithful mothers, wives and sisters sacrificed as much for their country in many cases as the men who went to the front.

Mrs. Logan describes the struggle from their point of view. I wish all the fathers and mothers and young men of the town would read "The Price He Paid," by Ella Wheeler Wilcox, in this month's Cosmopolitan. One of George Ade's famous "New Fables in Slang," called "The Wandering Boy and the Wayward Parents" is another good thing in this magazine.

For several months there has been a series of drawings in the Cosmopolitan, illustrating negro characters. "The Turkey Trot" is the subject for this month. The drawings are very amusing.

In "Popular Electricity Magazine" there is an article entitled "New York's Grand Central Terminal" telling of the many ways electricity is used in this great building. It has been called the "electric station."

In "Popular Mechanics" there are some one hundred and fifty articles. There is much variety in the subjects treated. The magazine is profusely illustrated.

"Harper's" which is always good is unusually so this month. "Up the Lakes" gives a vivid description of the immense traffic that is carried on the lakes.

Last year over 47,000,000 tons of iron ore were transported across the lakes and an even larger amount of coal. There was landed at Buffalo 158,000,000 bushels of grain. A good story "Doliver's Aid to the Injured," by Margaret Cameron, author of "The Cat and the Canary," "The Involuntary Chaperon" and "Tangles"—tells of the experience of a couple in an auto who picked up some people they overtook in a rain storm. The outcome was rather unexpected and very amusing. "Male Plumage," and "The Bodice" are other short stories in this number.

"What Americanisms Are Not," by Thomas Lonnberry, is a very instructive essay on certain words used which are considered peculiarly American. "Days in Seville" by W. D. Howells, gives much information—in a very interesting manner—about this old Spanish city. Reading it recalls Castilian Days by John Hay.

"The Undergraduate" by Henry Seidel Canby, Assistant Professor of English at Yale, is a very penetrating study of student character. All lovers of nature should read "A Barn-Door Outlook" by John Burroughs. After reading this very fascinating paper one is led to the conclusion that a great deal more might be had out of life if one's powers of observation were as well trained as those of the author of "A Barn-Door Outlook."

The opening number of "McClures" is a real good short story, "The Elegant De Fronsac." It is a French story and is very bright.

Those believing in woman suffrage should read "Woman's War, a Defense of Militant Suffrage," by Elizabeth Robins, author of "My Little Sister." Another "Father Brown" detective story by Gilbert K. Chesterton will be found in this number. It is called "The Paradise of Thieves." There is also another of Wallace Irwin's "Booster" stories.

An article containing a great deal of information—which information may come as a surprise to many who read it—is "The Jewish Invasion of America" by Burton J. Hendrick.

The Jews like to own land and, according to this writer, they will soon own most of the real estate of New York City. They control the clothing trade and the trade in tobacco leaf.

Next to J. P. Morgan Company the banking firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., is one of the strongest and largest banking houses in New York City. Many other things he tells which you may find out by reading this interesting description of "a peculiar people."

"Everybody's" opens with the "Conqueror" an excellent story by William J. Locke, author of "The Beloved Vagabond," "Septimus" and other well known novels.

"This Place has Changed Hands"—by Frederick J. Haskin, author of "The American Government"—is a very timely article on Washington telling of the many changes that have taken place in our "Capital City." It is illustrated with photographs of some government buildings. "On Taku Bar" by Samuel Merwin and "A Little Mother Hen" by Parker Fillmore are two good short stories. "The Balkan Thunderbolt"—by Frederick Palmer, a noted American war correspondent—gives us much information first saw the light of day in a humble manse or rectory.

In America we have Harriet Beecher Stowe, author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward. In England there are the Broute sisters, Mrs. Gaskell, "Margaret Hungerford," best-known as the "Duchess," Koda Broughton, author of "Belinda" and "Doctor Cupid." Frances Ridley Havergal, Isabel Berd Bishop, the traveler are two other well known daughters of clergymen. Many others just as noted are mentioned in this enlightening review of the subject. Read it.

The Canadian Northwest is being rapidly settled and there is much variety in the new comers. Commencing with "Ruthenians" by Janey Canuck in the "Canadian Magazine" tells us something about a colony from Galatia located near Edmonton, Alberta.

A Vignette in Canadian Literature gives an interesting biographical note on Charles G. D. Roberts, the Canadian poet and novelist. He was born in New Brunswick, the son of an Episcopal rector. He was appointed Professor of English Literature at King's College, Windsor, Nova Scotia. It was while there that his literary ability first became known. He was at this time a brilliant speaker and I well remember as a young student being much impressed by a lecture I heard him deliver at Mount Allison University. His nature stories are very popular.

There are a number of short stories and other good reading in this month's Canadian Magazine. "The World's Work" has many a treat for its readers this month. In "March of Events," "The Increasing Playgrounds" and "A about the Balkan situation in a very readable form. A very opportune description of President-Wilson's ancestors is given in "Munsey's" by William S. Bridgman, entitled "The Parentage of President Woodrow Wilson." He was the son of a minister and his wife was also the daughter of a clergyman. "The Maderos of Mexico" by Hugh Thompson has added interest through the untimely death of the three brothers in this latest phase of the revolution.

"The Daughters of Clergymen" by F. Laureston Bullard tells much about fathers of the manse who became famous in after life. The illustrations are photographs of many noted women whose fathers were ministers. A number of well known women novelists "Story of Vacant Lot Gardens" are two short articles worth reading. A number of the magazines this month—quite naturally—have something to say about Washington. "Presidential Inaugurations at Four Crisis" makes some interesting comparisons. After reading "The Race for Federal Jobs" you will have more charity and sympathy for President Wilson in his struggle to satisfy the hungry office-seekers. Those attracted by the study of astronomy should read "The Day's Work of the Mt. Wilson Observatory."

The first number in the "Century" is "Skirting the Balkan Peninsula" by Robert Hichens, author of "The Garden of Allah," "The Call of the Blood" and other well known novels.

This writer is a master as word-painting. His descriptions are remarkable and only need to be read to be appreciated. This is the first of a series on this subject to be written by this author. "The Arbitration of the Alabama Claims" by Colonel William Counant Church is a review of a very important event in our American history. The paper is illustrated with cartoons from London "Punch." All who wish to know more about our President will learn much by reading two studies of him in this month's "Century." "The Kind of Man Woodrow Wilson Is" by W. G. McDoo is a personal study and I think will convince the reader that we have a man for President of whom we may well be proud.

"Woodrow Wilson as a Man of Letters" by Bliss Perry, Professor of English Literature at Harvard University views him from a literary standpoint. He concludes his critical study with the following statement: "No man who has entered the White House since Lincoln, has been better equipped by character and training to enoble and refine the tone of public utterance."

The incoming of a Democratic President adds a peculiar interest to "Grover Cleveland and his cabinet," by Hiliary A. Herbert.

"The Sense of Smell" by Ellwood Hendrick in the "Atlantic" is rather an unusual way of treating the subject.

The March "Craftsman" is a garden number and there are numerous helpful hints in it. "Capturing Wild Flowers for the Home Garden" and "Water Gardens in Ponds and Streams" are two articles that will repay time spent in reading them.

In this note I have called your attention to only a few of the good things to be found in the periodicals taken at the Manchester public library.

Talked On Birds

An Open Meeting of Manchester Woman's Club.

The semi-monthly meeting of the Manchester Woman's club was held Tuesday afternoon, and was in the form of an open meeting. It was held in the Town hall, the attraction being an illustrated lecture by Edward Avis, whose subject was "An Afternoon in Birdland."

The hall was well filled by members of the club and pupils of the public schools, who had been invited to attend. The lecture ought to have proven of especial interest to the young folk.

Mr. Avis is well known in the field of nature study as the "Bird Mimic," and he is probably without peer in his line. His talk was illustrated by nearly 100 stereopticon views, beautifully colored, and as the views were cast on the screen he told of the habits of the birds shown, and mimicked its songs, its calls and bird language in general. Pictures were also shown of the bird's nests and in the manner in which the young are fed. Attention was also called to the plumage, and striking adaptability of plumage to environment.

At the conclusion of the talk Mr. Avis gave some of the calls and asked the children to name the birds. In many cases this was done promptly. The lecture was, withal, very enjoyable and was delightfully instructive as a lesson in nature study.

The High School orchestra played two selections previous to the lecture.

problems of American life today which has been demonstrated in and out of the courts for some years is that of the millionaire hungry for power and social recognition whose wife has been unable or unwilling to keep pace with him. In the Belasco play Alice Bradley has told such a story in a manner that makes the auditor feel that he is witnessing the inmost workings of the household through which the action of the play passes. Photographic in its wonderful detail, abounding in stirring climaxes and presented with the remarkable realism for which Mr. Belasco is famous, "The Governor's Lady" has made a success that is not to be wondered at.

IN YACHTING CIRCLES

The new owner of the auxiliary sch. Arbella, Ogden T. McClurg of Chicago, plans to take that craft for a two-year cruise in the West Indies and South American waters. Washington B. Thomas, the former owner, has used the boat extensively around New England. The boat is now being touched up for her trip at an East Boston yard. A squaresail has been added to the schooner's rig to assist while running down the trades. She has also been equipped with storm canvas, practically all running rigging has been renewed and stores are aboard. Arbella is about 10 years old and was originally christened Grilse II. She was built in Nova Scotia, is 103 feet on the line and 128 feet over all.

LAST TWO WEEKS OF "THE GARDEN OF ALLAH."

The remarkably successful engagement of Robert Hichens' and Mary Anderson Navarro's interesting play, "The Garden of Allah" is now entering upon its last two weeks at the Boston Theatre. The engagement it is now definitely announced, ends Saturday, March 22nd.

The play, as a drama follows closely the novel of Robert Hichens and tells the story of a monk, Boris, who becomes dissatisfied with life in a monastery, runs away and finds himself in the desert, in search of peace and quietude. He meets another restless soul like himself, a wanderer, but a young and attractive woman, Domini Enfiliden, with whom he falls in love and whom he eventually marries. The discovery by the wife that the husband has broken his vows to the Catholic church and that there can be no happiness in a union of this kind results in a separation and the return of Boris to the monastery. The four main parts into which the play form of the romance is divided are subdivided in ten scenes or settings. Two of the most pretentious and alluring of these scenes are shown twice in the course of the performance—the garden of Count Anteoni, which is displayed throughout part two, and is shown again in the epilogue, and a section of the desert at Mogar, which is shown as part three, under the varying atmospheric conditions of evening and dawn.

There is nothing new under the sun. All the good excuses have already been invented.

If you treat a man like a dog you can't blame him for acting like one.

"THE GOVERNOR'S LADY AT THE HOLLIS

Not in the recent theatrical history of Boston has any play made such an emphatic hit as the William Elliott and David Belasco production of "The Governor's Lady" now in its second week at the Hollis Street Theatre, and where on account of previous bookings that cannot be cancelled, the play can remain but two weeks longer, its run coming to a close positively on March 22.

It is with great regret that Mr. Belasco announces "The Governor's Lady" will not be seen in any city in New England outside of Boston.

"The Governor's Lady" tells a story of big human interest. One of the

SOME OF THE HARDSHIPS OF A MISSIONARY'S LIFE

Some of the hardships of life as a missionary may be obtained from the following excerpt from a personal letter received a few days ago from Rev. Augustine D. Ohol, now engaged in the cause of Christianity and civilization in India. Mr. Ohol is an Indian prince, who came to America in boyhood to get an education. He was educated at Ashburnham Academy, Bates College and Hartford Theological schools. He says among other things:

"We are just about finishing our three years' service in the Mission. Barsi is a large town with nearly 25,000 population, but the number of Christians is small. We have schools in Barsi as well as in the District. There are about 250 Christians living in the different towns and villages, which we visit often.

"There is much idolatry here, and so many years of English rule and Christianity have not changed the minds of the people much. It is very hard to change the East of a sudden, for the customs and heathen religions have a powerful hold on India today.

"The last rainy season was very poor and so we are having famines in the different parts of India. We ourselves are feeling the hardships especially from the water famine. We are buying water at a very high rate. There is much suffering among the poor people and cattle is dying by the hundreds. Poor, poor, India! I wish I had some money to relieve some of the suffering. There are yet six months before the next rainy season and nearly nine months before the first harvest. Would that people in America could realize the great good even a small amount of money would do toward relieving suffering. $100 would save the lives of many people and do away with much suffering. People come to our doors who have been starving for three and four days and some of them are so weak that they hardly have strength to talk."

The Three Men That Will Govern Manchester This Year

GEORGE R. DEAN WHOSE ELECTION WAS BIG SURPRISE

NATHAN P. MELDRUM
SINCE ELECTED CHAIRMAN

FRANK G. CHEEVER
ONLY ONE RE-ELECTED

Manchester's Annual Town Meeting.

Two New Members on Board of Selectmen. Town Votes No-License.
Over $200,000 Appropriated.

Manchester's annual Town Meeting was held Monday, and aside from the election, passed off quietly and without the excitement usually incident to town meetings.

The election certainly contained some surprises, as forecasted in last week's Breeze. In the first place the old board of selectmen was turned down and a new board consisting of Nathan P. Meldrum, George R. Dean and Frank G. Cheever were elected. This is the Meldrum-Dean-Cheever combination which the Breeze had been consistently preaching for the last six weeks. Meldrum's vote of 304 was the biggest of the lot. Cheever was second man and Dean, the new man in town affairs, was low man of the three elected, but his vote was big compared with the two members of last year's board that did not win. He received 264 votes. The two failing of election,—E. S. Knight and Horace Standley, received 164 and 231, respectively.

Dean's election is all the more of a surprise even to his closest friends, from the fact that he is a new figure in town politics, this being his first attempt at running for office. His vote was highly complimentary.

The election of George E. Hildreth as water commissioner for three years, and of Walter B. Calderwood as park commissioner for a similar period, out of a bunch of six candidates, were the other two points of interest on the ballot. Hildreth succeeded himself, but Calderwood is a new man. He is the superintendent of the David Fenton Co., boat builders.

The town went no-license by a bare margin of 17 votes. Nine more "yes" votes would have swung the town into the "wet" column. It was the closest vote in 15 years.

For the first time on record the entire business of the meeting was disposed of in one day. Every article of the warrant was acted upon, and disposed of, except the two articles pertaining to dredging, which must wait until the Harbor and Land Commissioners of the state make their report.

Appropriations totalling $206,000 were made, almost all for "fixed charges." Very little of the really new business was transacted. The town voted to appoint a committee to look into the matter of a new town hall with instructions to report at a future meeting. It was also voted to make the hours of labor for town employees 44 hours a week, at 35 cents an hour.

When the meeting adjourned it was to the first Monday evening in April.

WHAT WAS SAID AND DONE AT THE ANNUAL TOWN MEETING

MONDAY MORNING SESSION

Town Clerk A. S. Jewett called the meeting to order at nine o'clock. After reading the warrant, Article I was taken up,—the election of moderator. Raymond C. Allen received 27 of the 29 votes cast. There were 76 voters present at that time.

Moderator Allen thanked the voters for their continued expression of confidence. He took occasion to say that with the increasing business of the town there was the danger of acting on things without sufficient consideration. He said the special committee of the town on By-Laws were considering having one by-law call for the closing of the fiscal year on Dec. 31st, thus giving ample time to get out the reports and for the citizens to study the reports of the officers and committees of the town. It was also suggested that the meeting for election and acceptance of reports be held one day and adjourned to a later date to act on the appropriations.

The moderator announced the following as tellers: (by selectmen) W. W. Hoare, T. W. Long, W. R. Bell, Clarence W. Morgan and T. C. Rowe; (by moderator) James Beaton, G. A. Knoerr, W. R. Bennett and J. N. Lipman. These were sworn in.

It was voted the polls be open at 12 and close at 5.30.

Under article 2 the reports of various officers and committees were acted upon. Most of these were accepted without discussion.

Art. 16. Water Commissioners. G. E. Hildreth moved that $16,850 together with receipts from the sale of pipe, be appropriated for the use of the water department.

M. E. Gorman moved to amend, that all appropriations for $500 or over be laid on the table for the evening meeting. The time had come, he thought, when the town ought to have a $5 tax rate. He felt that there were so few voters out for the morning session it was not using the majority right to appropriate so much money when so few were present.

Moderator Allen asked the clerk to take the chair and he spoke on the question. He said it was not fair for those who showed their interest in the business of the town by attending the morning session to have the business of the meeting clogged by having these fixed charges held over for any other meeting. The way to get at any question in which there was likely to be general interest was to have somebody here who would move to have it assigned.

G. S. Sinnicks agreed with the moderator in the matter of fixed charges. He hoped to have the voters do all the business possible and not have things held up.

M. E. Gorman wanted to go on record as opposed to this "rapid transit" style of town meeting. He believed there was no fixed charges,—it is all left with the voters. He thought every voter should have ample opportunity to consider and discuss all appropriations.

The motion was put and was lost. Mr. Gorman doubted, but as there were not five persons doubting the vote the moderator declared it a vote.

When the report of the supt. of streets came up W. C. Rust asked if he could account for the muddy condition of the section of Bridge street between Pine street and Ashland avenue. Mr. Crombie could not, other than the open winter and the excessive traffic during the last few months. James Gallagher suggested that as most of the teaming was from Pine street, that the dirt and mud was brought from there.

In connection with the report of the fire engineers it was voted, on motion of J. N. Lipman, not to sell the fire horse "Jerry," whose mate "Tom" had to be shot a month or so ago. It was the sentiment of the meeting to keep the horse in the possession of the town, and was so voted.

When the report of the Tax Col-

RAYMOND C. ALLEN, Moderator

lector and Treasurer was reached that official asked to have the acceptance of the reports assigned to the evening meeting, at 8 o'clock.

In the selectmen's report was the following relating to the Proctor street widening proposition: "We recommend the construction of the travelled way at the entrance to its full width, with a proper protection by wall and fence." It was so voted, the expense to be paid out of the general highway fund.

Another recommendation in the selectmen's report was that pertaining to the almshouse. The board recommends the construction of a new building on the present almshouse property, and that a committee consisting of the board of overseers of the poor and four citizens be appointed to procure estimates for the same and report at a special town meeting called for that purpose.

The following recommendations of the board were also adopted: "That the selectmen be authorized to petition the director of the bureau of statistics to audit the books of the town semi-annually, as provided for in chapter 598, Acts of 1910;" also "That at the close of a fiscal year, all unexpended balances shall be turned into the treasury;" and "That all emergency transfers from the contingent fund shall be done by the board of selectmen."

Under the heading of Legal Cases in the selectmen's report is reference to the care of the town vs. Ernest W. Longfellow; for taxes, in which it says "we are informed by our counsel that after consulting with the chairman of assessors, the case of the town was non-suited Jan. 14, 1913. The board of selectmen was not consulted, and was not informed of the same until Jan. 24." Chairman Swett of the assessors said he thought the statement was misleading, and that it was a reflection on his board. He asked that the letter from town counsel be read, and after it was read it was very plain that the suit was dropped by the town counsel because it was evident the town had no ground for expecting to win, when it was learned that Mr. Longfellow had been taxed in New York city during the years on which he was also taxed in Manchester. Mr. Swett added further that the selectmen have nothing to do with the matter. It is plainly stipulated that the selectmen defend suits against the town. It is for the treasurer to bring suits for taxes, not the selectmen.

Treasurer Stanley said he understood the law,—that it was he, not the selectmen, who must bring suits, but the selectmen had given him to understand differently.

Chairman Knight denied that he had ever said anything of this kind. He said that the treasurer must hire counsel designated by the board, but that Mr. Stanley wanted to hire anyone he pleased.

The report of the selectmen was accepted.

The committee on liability insurance, appointed at the last annual meeting, read a report in which it was recommended that the town carry a policy or policies of insurance to cover its responsibilities to its employees.

G. S. Sinnicks moved the report be accepted and the recommendation adopted.

As to cost. Last year it was $1364.44, and it is estimated that it will be $1100 this year, but it is likely there will be a big reduction from this amount.

The committee on by-laws asked for more time and recommended that the committee be continued.

O. T. Roberts read the report of the committee on sewerage, in which progress was reported, and that it was the unanimous opinion of the committee that the town construct a system of sewerage for the thickly settled portion of the town. There were several legal matters which it was hoped to clean up very shortly, after which a definite report would be made.

The committee asked for the unexpended balance of last year's appropriation,—$319.69. Voted.

The report of the trustees of the Memorial Library Building fund was not contained in the printed report. It was presented by the accountant in the evening.

At 10.40 the reports had all been acted on and the various articles of the warrant were then taken up.

Art. 5. Appropriation committee. On motion of O. T. Roberts the committee was continued, and the moderator appointed the same as last year,—G. S. Sinnicks, C. L. Crafts, Thomas Baker, F. P. Tenney, P. H. Boyle, W. R. Bennett, A. M. Killam, A. C. Needham and G. E. Hildreth.

Art. 6. Highways, bridges, etc. On motion of B. M. Crombie $25,000 was appropriated, the same to include supt.'s salary, and the expenses called for under articles 8 and 41.

Art. 25. On motion of E. S. Knight $5000 was appropriated for moth suppression work, and a special appropriation was made to be expended under the direction of the state authorities and summer residents' committee, of which Col. Sohler is the head, with the understanding that the city of Beverly would vote an equal sum, the state $10,000 and the summer residents' committee a sum equal to the total.

Art. 7. On motion of James Hoare $125 was appropriated for the care of Central pond.

Art. 58. Fixed charges. This was taken up on motion of E. S. Knight and $65,880.00 was appropriated, as per items appearing in the list of appropriations on another page.

M. E. Gorman moved the items be acted upon separately, but the meeting voted not to.

Art. 22 was next taken up. Departmental expenses. Under this heading fixed charges to the amount of $12,275.00 was appropriated in one sum. These items will be found on another page, under list of appropriations.

Art. 8. Improvement and care of Wenham and Essex Old Road. The recommendation of the finance committee that this be expended out of the general highway account, was adopted.

Art. 9. Schools. On motion of O.

Roberts $25,000 was appropriated.

Art. 10. On motion of E. P. Stanley $600 was voted for care and maintenance of the playground.

Art. 11. On motion of O. T. Roberts $400 was appropriated for repairs and painting outside of the Price school building.

Art. 12. $100 for medical inspection of schools. Voted.

Art. 13. $175 to complete the coping around Priest school house. Voted on motion of F. P. Knight.

GEORGE E. HILDRETH
RE-ELECTED WATER COMMISSIONER

Art. 14. On motion of W. H. Tyler $850 was appropriated to place edge-stones on the Norwood avenue and Brook street sides of the Price school. The finance committee did not recommend this, but after considerable discussion, in which G. S. Sinnicks, W. C. Rust, Austin Morley and James H. Rivers took part the motion was carried, 55 to 22.

Art. 15. School gardens assigned to the evening meeting at 8.15.

Articles 18, 19, 20, 21, 23, 24, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, and 32 were taken up in the order named and the following amounts were appropriated without a word of discussion, or resentment: $7500 for police department maintenance; $1763.71 for public library maintenance and $2000 for special work at the library; $1650 for board of health; $500 for district nurse fund; $1200 for care of cemeteries and chapel; $400 for tree warden's dept.; $1000 for forest warden's dept.; $1200 for support of poor-out and $3000 for support of poor-in; $1500 for state and military aid; $200 for soldier's relief, Q. M. Post 67, G.A.R., and $100 to be spent under direction of the selectmen; and $8000 for street lighting.

Under the articles on street lights

F. P. Knight asked if the lighting was still under contract to the Welsbach company, to which Chairman Knight replied that the contract lasted two or three years longer, much to the regret of the company, with gasoline at its present figure.

F. K. Sweet wondered if the increase in cost of gasoline was responsible for the poor service. Mr. Knight replied that all lights reported out were deducted from the bill each month.

Art. 33. Dredging. It was voted that all matters relating to dredging be laid on the table until the report of the Harbor and Land commissioners shall have been received.

Art. 34. Parks. The commissioners called for $3000 for Masconomo Park improvements, $1000 for shrubbery, $200 for planting plans, and $60 for street lights. The finance committee recommended only $3000. Mr. Reed said it was the vote of the town to spend $3000 a year in carrying out the plans for the improvement of the park. This does not include anything but improving the property.

Austin Morley said this money was spent the most ridiculous of any expended by the town. It was finally voted after more or less discussion that $3000 be appropriated. The vote was 51 to 1.

At this point, 11.50, the meeting declared a recess to prepare for the balloting at noon.

The result of the election will be found in another column.

MONDAY EVENING SESSION

The Monday evening session was called to order at 7.30, the hour to which the meeting adjourned after the votes were counted at 6 o'clock.

W. C. Rust, the Nestor of the meeting, and always prominent in the fight for no-license, was the first to gain the floor.

"We have met the enemy and were almost defeated," said he. And then moved that the selectmen be authorized to instruct our chief of police to enforce all laws, particularly the law in regard to the sale of intoxicating liquor. It was so voted.

"They tell me," said Mr. Rust, "there are kitchen bar-rooms all over town. I believe in using the 'spotter' system in enforcing the liquor laws. I believe it is a good thing to have a secret fund for this purpose," and to that end he moved that $200 be appropriated for the suppression of the liquor law. The moderator corrected the speaker and asked if he did not mean enforcement instead of suppression, to which he replied that he did. An "Aye" and "Nay" vote was taken, 85 voting in favor and 45 against.

The following officers were elected:
Measures of Lumber: Thomas Baker, Chester L. Crafts and Lewis Kilham.

Measures of Wood and Bark: B. L. Bullock, G. L. Knight and G. A. Sinicks.

Fence Viewers: J. Alex Lodge, Abbott H. Hoare and Isaac M. Marshall.

Field Drivers: Thomas Baker, James Hoare, Robert A. Mitchell, A. E. Olson, W. B. Paige and R. E. Newman.

Pound Keeper: M. J. Callahan.

Art. 54. New Town hall. On motion of D. T. Beaton a committee of five was appointed to look into the subject matter of a new town hall, and the sum of $300 was appropriated for the use of the committee, the committee to report at a meeting called for the purpose. The following was appointed: William Hooper, W. B. Walker, James Hoare, C. L. Crafts and D. T. Beaton.

Report of the Memorial Lib. Bldg. Fund was read and accepted.

E. P. Stanley read, for information, a report concerning the cemetery trust funds.

Art. 34. Care of Singing Beach. $2000 was voted, 134 to 0.

At this point Treasurer E. P. Stanley entered into a lengthy, but instructive talk, on some of his new duties as treasurer and collector, the collection of taxes, etc. His reports were later accepted.

The report of the Town Accountant was accepted.

Art. 35. On motion of F. P. Knight $940 was appropriated for the care of Tuck's Point.

Art. 36. $500 was appropriated for celebration of July 4. The old committee refused to serve.

Art. 49. Frank Foster moved that 44 hours shall constitute a week's work for town laborers, and that any compensation therefor shall be 35 cents per hour for citizens of Manchester and that voters be given the preference. Voted.

There was some discussion as to the meaning of "citizen" in this connection. Selectman Dean was of the opinion it should mean anybody living in the town, and getting their living here.

Frank P. Knight thought it was not a fair vote, or business-like action for the town to take. It shows discrimination.

Art. 38. $200 was appropriated for the observance of Memorial Day.

Art. 15. On motion of John C. Mackin the moderator appointed a committee of five to look up a lot of land suitable for school gardens, look into the cost of same, and report at an adjourned town meeting. The following were appointed: E. A. Lane, A. Cunningham, W. H. Tyler, T. Harrison Styles and E. H. Wetterlow.

Articles 39 and 40, regulations for Common and Wharf, and with reference to town beaches and landings, respectively, it was voted to take same action as last year.

Art. 41. It was voted to build a sidewalk on Summer street, adjoining

ALFRED S. JEWETT

THE VETERAN TOWN CLERK, RE-ELECTED

ing the estate of W. H. Coolidge.

Art. 42. It was voted to accept the lay-out of Highland avenue as made by the selectmen.

Art. 43. Sidewalk on southerly side of Pleasant street, referred to selectmen.

Art. 44. $425 was voted for a new sidewalk on southerly side of Bennett street.

Art. 45. $1534.00 for concreting side walk through the Cove woods. Voted, 139 to 31.

William Till spoke of the condition of the sidewalks at the Cove, from the school house to the Gloucester line, saying that the walk was never finished. It was not in order to introduce a motion.

Art. 46. Pine street improvements. Laid on table until after report of county commissioners.

Art. 47. Concrete sidewalk, Pine street. Same action as previous article.

Art. 48. New highway to Smith's Point. Voted to pass over, as only selectmen can lay-out a street.

Art. 50. New street lights on Beach street, from Masconom to the beach. Referred to selectmen.

Art. 51. New Lights on Magnolia avenue. Voted to put in one new light at or near entrance to University Lane.

Art. 52. $100 for promotion of athletics at High school. Not carried.

Art. 53. On motion of W. C. Rust it was voted to renew the lease of the Upper hall to the Odd Fellows for a period of ten years, on condition that the lodge will vacate upon notification from the town, and that the rent be $300 a year.

Art. 56. All taxes must be paid by Nov. 1, 1913, and interest at 6 per cent will be charged after that date.

Art. 57. Treasurer authorized to borrow in anticipation of taxes $80,000.

Art. 59. The statute relating to removal of burnt, dilapidated or dangerous buildings accepted by the town.

At 9.15, the articles having been acted upon, the meeting adjourned until the first Monday evening in April at 7.30.

BENJ. L. ALLEN, Registered Pharmacist

Corner School and Union Streets, Manchester, Mass.

TO THE HONORABLE THE JUSTICES OF
THE SUPERIOR COURT WITHIN
AND FOR THE COUNTY OF ESSEX:

RESPECTFULLY libels and represents
Gustaf Emil Sjolund of Manchester,
in said county, that he was lawfully married to Matilda Sjolund, now of parts unknown, at Boston in the County of Suffolk and Commonwealth of Massachusetts on the twentieth day of February, A. D. 1904, and thereafterwards your libellant and
the said Matilda Sjolund lived together as husband and wife in this commonwealth, to wit, at Manchester,
that your libellant has always been faithful to his marriage vows and obligations, but the said Matilda Sjolund
being wholly regardless of the same,
at Manchester on the twenty seventh day of February, A. D. 1904, utterly deserted him, and has continued such desertion from that day to the date
hereof, being more than three consecutive years next prior to the filing of this libel.

Wherefore your libellant prays that a divorce from the bonds of matrimony may be decreed between your libellant and the said Matilda
Sjolund.

Dated this nineteenth day of February, A. D. 1913.

GUSTAV EMIL SJOLUND.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
Essex, ss. Superior Court, February 20, 1913.

Upon the foregoing libel, ordered,
that the said libellant give notice to
said Matilda Sjolund by causing an attested copy of his said libel, and of this order thereon, to be published in the North Shore Breeze, a newspaper printed in Manchester, in the county of Essex, once a week, for three weeks successively, the last publication to be fourteen days at least before the return day of this Court, at Salem, within the county of Essex,
on the first Monday of April next, and
by mailing, forthwith, by registered letter to the libellee at her last known place of residence, an attested copy of said libel and order thereon: that she may appear at said Salem within one month from said first Monday of April and show cause, if any she has,
why the prayer of said libel should not be granted. Attest.

E. B. GEORGE, CLERK.

The foregoing is a true copy of said libel and of the order thereon.

Attest, E. B. GEORGE, CLERK.

Manchester, Mass., Feb. 15, 1913.

To the Honorable Board of County Commissioners, County of Essex,
Commonwealth of Massachusetts:

PETITION

Respectfully represent your petitioners,
inhabitants and legal voters of the town
of Manchester, in said County, that the way in said Manchester, known as Pine street, and lying between and connecting the County road from Beverly to Gloucester, known as Bridge and Central streets in said Manchester, with the southerly terminus of the recently laid out County road from Manchester to
Hamilton at or near the junction of said
Pine street and Pleasant street, is narrow and winding and does not serve the common convenience and necessity of the inhabitants.

Wherefore your petitioners pray that your Honorable Board will widen,
straighten, relocate or locate anew or discontinue such portion or portions of the whole of said way from a point at or near the junction of Bennett, Bridge,
Central and Pine streets to a point at or near the junction of Pleasant street, the newly laid out County road from Manchester to Hamilton and Pine street, as shall appear to be required.

EDWARD F. WALSH,

RAYMOND C. ALLEN,

and seven others.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Essex, ss. Court of County Commissioners,
December Term, 1910, to wit: Feb. 20, 1913.

On the Petition aforesaid, Ordered, That said petitioners give notice to all persons and corporations interested therein that said Commissioners will meet at the Town hall, Manchester, on Friday, the 28th day of March next at 10:30 A. M., by publishing an attested copy of said petition and
of this order thereon in the North Shore
Breeze, a newspaper printed in Manchester, in said county, once a week for three successive weeks, the last publication to be fourteen days at least before the said twenty-eighth day of March. And also by serving the town clerk of the town of Manchester with an attested copy thirty days at least, and by posting up an attested copy thereof in two public places in said town fourteen days at least before
the twenty-eighth day of March at which time and place said Commissioners will proceed to view the premises and make such order in relation to the prayer of the said petition as by law they may be authorized to do.

E. B. GEORGE, Clerk.

A true copy of petition and order there-
on. Attest,

JAS. P. HALE, Asst. Clerk.

A true copy of petition and order there-
on. Attest,

Patriarch of Greek Church Buried Sitting In His Chair

Photos by American Press Association.

HIS all holiness Joachim III., the Greek patriarch, who died recently at Constantinople, was after death fully vested and placed in a sitting posture in the episcopal chair. The public then filed past the chair and paid their last tributes of veneration by kissing the robes of the deceased prelate, as shown in the picture at the top. The patriarch was borne, sitting in the chair, to his last resting place at the monastery of St. Demetrius. He wore the Byzantine crown. The procession, including sailors and soldiers, was extremely odd to western eyes.

He Took After Mother.

The star pupil arose at the school entertainment to declaim his piece.

"Lend me your ears," he bawled.

"Huh," sneered the mother of the opposing but defeated pupil, "that's Sarah Jane Doran's boy. He wouldn't be his mother's son if he didn't want to borrow something."—Exchange.

Willie Explains.

"Willie," said the teacher, "is there any difference between the words 'sufficient' and 'enough'?"

"Yes, ma'am," replied Willie. "'Sufficient' is when mamma thinks I've eaten enough pie, and 'enough' is when I think I have eaten sufficient."—Chicago News.

Long Distance Laundry.

Some of the smart set Frenchmen of today send their linen to London to be washed. Their ancestors used to go even further afield in search of good laundry work. So far back as the sixteenth century Frenchmen had their washing done in Holland, where the soft water of the dikes was supposed to impart a special gloss to linen. This practice appears to have lasted until the close of the eighteenth century, for Sebastian Mercier, in his "Tableau de Paris," published shortly before the French Revolution, protests against the patronage by the rich of the Dutch, to the exclusion of native laundresses. Still more remarkable is the fact mentioned in the "Memoires du Comte de Vaublanc," that wealthy merchants in Bordeaux used to send their linen all the way to San Domingo to be washed. —London Tatler.

A Spool Trick.

Run a pin its whole length through the middle of a card. Place the card on the end of a spool in such a way as to allow the pin to hang down in the hole in the spool. Hold the spool upright and blow into the open end. However hard you blow, you will not be able to force the card away. If you blow steadily you can even turn the spool downward and the card will still refuse to drop.

The card is held in place by suction. The thin film of air escaping with much force in all directions between the end of the spool and the card presents a smooth surface to which the card adheres as it would to glass, but with greater force, for the film of air is even smoother than glass. The pin serves only to prevent the card from working off at one side.—Youth's Companion.

An Elusive Painting.

I. Carroll Beckwith, the artist, once told a story about a weird painting he happened to run across in a little art shop in Paris. He looked at it for some time with interest, thinking it to be a design for a Persian rug.

"What a nice hearth rug!" he remarked appreciatively to the saleswoman.

"Nonsense!" replied she. "That's not a hearth rug. That's a portrait!" And she proceeded to point out hands and features in what to Beckwith was simply a bewildering mass of paint.

"Do you really see all that?" asked Beckwith with admiration.

"Oh, as to seeing it," answered the saleswoman, "you never can tell. Sometimes we see it and sometimes we don't."—New York Post.

Reserved.

Thomas—That Miss Wadleigh is rather reserved, isn't she? Jack—Very much so. I reserved her for life last night.

MOST GORGEOUS TRAIN IN AMERICA.

Two steel vestibuled trains, representing in grace of workmanship, artistic finish and durability of design the very perfection of the car builders' art, is now running between Boston and New York Tuesday. They form the "Merchants' Limited" of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company, the five o'clock five-hour train between the two cities.

The "Merchants' Limited" is primarily a tired business man's train. It was with a view of providing for him all the car architects could furnish to contribute to his comfort and ordered by President Charles S. Mellen of the New Haven. In these trains the ingenuity of the car builders have been taxed to provide as well for the passenger's safety as for his comfort.

These new trains are practically indestructible. Made of steel they could go through a stone wall without being scratched. Reinforced underneath with two immense steel girders running the length of the car and attached at the end to a solid cast steel U-frame forming the vestibule, 'no impact however great, could telescope them. A rear end collision might tilt them up on end a bit but that would be all. So far as resisting powers go they are built like battleships.

Each of the new trains will consist of six cars exclusive of the diners. There will be four parlor cars, a combination parlor and baggage car and an observation smoker. All of them have a steel exterior with a wood interior to give them elegance. While outside there is little to differentiate them from other trains de luxe their interior will present all that refined taste and decorative simplicity could desire.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE

Who is the possessor of the best known face in the civilized world? This man is not a statesman, a great general or a monarch, but John Bunny, the famous comedian, who has appeared as the central character in over 3,000,000 different pictures. These prints have been distributed all over the civilized world, and it is safe to say that there is scarcely a city or town where moving pictures are shown on the face of the globe, that has not laughed at the antics of Mr. Bunny. Bunny's face is his fortune. The engagement of this famous comedian to appear at B. F. Keith's Theatre next week, is another brilliant stroke on the part of Mr. Keith. John Bunny will appear in a new and original monologue, written especially for him, besides introducing a special

"THE PINK LADY" AT THE COLONIAL

All Boston remembers how a year ago, after fifteen weeks of capacity houses at the Colonial Theatre, Klaw & Erlanger's production of "The Pink Lady" was compelled to leave in order to prepare for the London engagement at the Globe Theatre which lasted for twenty triumphant weeks. Since then this, the most popular musical comedy of many years, has been seen in the larger cities with the original cast, and everywhere the Boston triumph has been duplicated. Now these favorite players are coming back to the Colonial, Boston, to resume the interrupted run. Frank Lalor is still the Dondidier and Hazel Dawn the lady in pink. Alice Dovey as Angele and Alice Hegeman as Mine. Dondidier will also be here.

The company still numbers nearly one hundred, the Pink of Perfection chorus is as charming as ever, and the production spick and span, with new costumes that were imported from Paris for this tour.

COMMUNICATION

MAGNOLIA RESIDENT BEGS STREET
DEPT. TO FIX STREET PIPE

Editor North Shore Breeze,

Dear Sir:—Will you kindly allow me space in your Magnolia column to call attention to a needed improvement. When it rains the drain, or sewer pipe in front of William Wilkins' house on Magnolia avenue, clogs up, and overflows, leaving the street full of water,—about a foot deep. This gradually flows into Mr. Wilkins' cellar, and recently it put the fire out, the water being about three feet deep.

The Gloucester street department, or whoever is in charge of such matters, should do something to remedy the trouble, as it is the third or fourth time this thing has happened. The condition of the water in the street is the talk of the whole town. For instance, on the occasion of the funeral of the late Charles Brown, the hacks and automobiles, had to drive through this lake of water and were covered with mud.

We all hope the department will make some arrangement to fix up this trouble. Thanking the editor for the space allowed, I remain,

Yours sincerely,

Magnolia, Mar. 5, 1913. RESIDENT.

CHARLES A. BROWN OF MAGNOLIA DIED LAST WEEK

Charles A. Brown, for many years an assistant appraiser at the Boston custom house, passed away at the home of his son, Henry W. Brown, at South Weymouth on Wednesday, Feb. 26, after an illness of several months from what is commonly described as a leaky heart.

Mr. Brown was a native of Gloucester, where he was born 58 years ago, and was the son of George and Almira (Marston) Brown. After graduating from the Bryant & Stratton Business college in Boston, he was employed as bookkeeper for George J. Tarr & Co., and later for J. J. Burns & Co., and some 30 years ago was appointed an opener and packer in the Boston custom house. He stood high in the estimation of his associates in the customs service, where his ability won for him deserved promotion, he being in a few years advanced to the position of invoice examiner and later to an assistant appraiser.

He was a fine penman, and a keen and forcible writer, possessing a vivid sense of humor, as well as pathos, and although he seldom wrote for public inspection, those most intimately acquainted with him will recall many instances where his sharp wit proved the feature of many gatherings and his unbounded good humor smoothed over what might have otherwise resulted in strained relations.

He was a member of Tyrian lodge of Masons, also of William Ferson, Royal Arch Chapter and Bethlehem Commandery, Knights Templars, of this city, and Aleppo Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, of Boston. He was also a member of Fernwood lodge, Ancient Order of United Workmen, Gloucester Lodge, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, and Masconomo Colony of Pilgrim Fathers.

He was one of the originators of the famous Sea Foam club and during its existence was one of the most active members, frequently contributing to the learned researches of the club by able and well-written papers.

He married Lizzie A. Tarr, daughter of the late Capt. Robert and Hannah (Allen) Tarr, who passed away January 3, 1892, and he is survived by one son, Henry Walter Brown of South Weymouth, an employee of the Massachusetts Harbor and Land Commission, also by one brother, Henry W. Brown of Magnolia, the well known contractor.

His remains were brought to Gloucester for interment, and his funeral took place Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Magnolia church—Gloucester Times.

ELBRIDGE ALLEN

Elbridge Allen, a one time resident of Manchester, passed away after a long illness of cancer, at the home of his son Arthur D. Allen in Orange, Mass.

Mr. Allen was born in Manchester, April 5, 1835, and passed the earlier part of his life in that town, learning the cabinet-maker's trade. He was the son of Stephen and Nancy (Cross) Allen. When a young man he removed to Wendell, Mass., where he has since resided. He is survived by two sons, Arthur D. and Clinton D., and one daughter Ella W., also three brothers, John R. of Manchester, George of Boulevard and Clarence of Greenbush, and one sister, Mrs. John B. Knowlton of Magnolia.

Little boys soon get tired of their toys and break them, but little girls wait until they grow up.

In spite of a good figure, a girl may display bad form.

Some people spend as they go and others stay at home.

WENHAM

Town meeting was a quiet occasion. There were no electoral contests excepting for assessor, where N. Porter Perkins defeated Austin C. Patch, and board of health, where Harlan I. Brown was successful over Arthur M. Harrigan. Re-election or election without contest was the rule in all other instances. William E. Hadlock and Elbridge R. Anderson made notable speeches, the former describing succinctly and skillfully the mechanism of the town clock and convincing the voters that the time piece needed and deserved thorough repairs, and the latter pleading eloquently and successfully for the town to adopt the new tenement house act. The adoption of the tenement house act, which finally took place with only one dissenting vote, came as a crown to the efforts of the Village Improvement society and the Church Department of Social Service. Twice had the V. I. S. conducted public meetings with this end in view. And on Sunday, the very evening before town meeting, the social service forum in the village church consisted of an address illustrated with stereopticon views given by Rev. E. F. Allen of Ipswich, setting forth the peril of bad housing in towns not protected by this law. Mr. Anderson drew freely upon Mr. Allen's material in making his argument before town meeting. At the close of the meeting Oscar Hosmer questioned the town officials and elicited the statement that Wenham customarily closes its financial year with a surplus of several thousand dollars. The Wenham No-License Committee had appealed to voters to regard the vote on the license question in a serious light. The town has always been in the "No" column and is regarded as safely "dry." This year there was a slight falling off in the "yes" vote and a notable diminution in the number of blanks. No-License carried 105 to 31. Last year there were 42 blanks. This year only 23.

Bird Life is the title of a lecture to be given Tuesday at 8 p. m. in the Town hall, by Mr. E. H. Forbush, state ornithologist. The Village Improvement society is responsible for this opportunity, and offers it without charge to the Audubon society, the boy scouts and the public generally.

The county commissioners will give a hearing on the widening and straightening of Hart street and Grapevine road, near Preston place and the Wenham line, at the City hall, March 25th at 10 a. m.

Mechanics are at work on the new home of Mr. and Mrs. James E. McDonnell, formerly the Wyatt house on West street, making improvements and changes so that the present owners can occupy it on April 1st.

ESSEX

One of the biggest surprises of Monday's town meeting was the defeat of Aaron Cogswell, chairman of the selectmen, who had served 13 years, and Albion Riggs, five years in office. In their places were elected John P. Story and Fred W. Andrews. Caleb M. Cogswell was re-elected. When it came to the election of assessors Aaron Cogswell was again defeated, Caleb M. Cogswell taking his place for three years. Enoch B. Kimball, who had another year to serve, resigned and Frank E. Raymond was elected in his place. Albion Riggs, who was defeated for selectman, had two years to serve, but resigned, and in his place Fred W. Andrews was elected. Other officers chosen: Henry F. Dodge, treasurer; J. Horace Burnham, David Corcoran and George S. McIntire, overseers of the poor; Joseph N. Tucker, collector; Everett B. James, school committee, three years; Frank E. Watson, Bertram W. Mears, Edwin H. Burnham, Louis E. Elwell, William M. Gafney, William A. Lindall, Frank E. Watson, highway surveyors. Appropriations—Town officers $1300, schools $6000, board of health $200, highways and bridges $1000, poor department $500, fire department $1000, police $500, street lights $1843.39, suppression of moths $524.64. License—Yes 40, no 87.

WENHAM.

There will be a public no-license meeting in Smith's hall, South Hamilton, at 7 p. m., March 9th, when the well known Mr. Francis Haseltine of Lynn will speak, and the Lafayette Male Quartet of Boston will furnish music. The quartet comes highly recommended.

On Sunday morning the minister, Rev. F. M. Cutler, will preach in the village church. Sunday school at noon. Y.P.S.C.E. meeting at 6. The 7 o'clock meeting will be omitted in order to permit people to attend the no-license rally at South Hamilton

He leaves a son with whom he made his home. Funeral services were held at his late home at noon today. Interment was made at the Mt. Hope cemetery, Boston.

The New York Sun the other day told about a novelist wanting local color for his story and wanting it accurate, who went to great pains to find out on which side of Salem is its famous tunnel. He questioned railroad men who should have known and even got "Pennsy" to ask the Boston & Maine. According to the story he was finally informed that the tunnel was between the Salem station and Boston and the author and the Sun believed it, and the Sun printed it under the head of "Accuracy in Fiction." This is calculated to amuse the Salemites and everybody else who knows where the tunnel is.—Lowell Courier-Citizen.

A Cleveland man who makes a practice of choosing his words with care, a practice which he has endeavored to instill into the family circle, made a memorandum of the misused words uttered by his son and daughter during a recent breakfast. Here is the result: Elegant, 19 times; awful, 11 times; dandy, six times; fierce, four times; great, two times. When the meal was over the head of the household called the family around him in the library and gravely read the totals to them.

"Gee, that's fierce!" said the son.

"Isn't it awful!" said the daughter.

"Let's see," said the examining attorney to a Lynn boarding house keeper, "there are front and back entrances to your house, are there not?" "Yes, sir," was the polite reply. "Now where is the back entrance located?" asked the lawyer. And you could not blame the lady for smiling when she replied: "In the rear, of course."

Chafing Dishes and Percolators from Daniel Low's

For the last few years Chafing Dishes have been steadily increasing in popularity, until today it would almost seem as if no home were quite complete without one.

They lend themselves readily to a large variety of uses, some of which are just now beginning to be appreciated. They are invaluable for the hasty breakfast, the impromptu luncheon, the late supper and the Sunday night tea. They are particularly useful to those hostesses who must get along without servants as they may do light cooking right at the table without absenting themselves from their guests. They are always ready for the unexpected guest, making it easy to prepare a dainty meal hastily.

MISSION STYLE CHAFING DISH

This is one of our most popular Chafing Dishes. It has simple, dignified lines and is very substantially built. Capacity, 3 pints.

Price, in either copper or nickel plate, $7.50; with tray $8.75.

The copper Dish fits in particularly well in a room with mission style furniture.

We have several patterns of Coffee Percolators. They are all well made, easy to clean, and economical to operate.

The one illustrated is of graceful design and the construction is such that it is very easy to take apart to clean. It can be furnished in nickel or copper in either size at the price quoted.

2 pint size (6 cups), $8.25

3 pint size (9 cups), $9.00

We have others for $5.00 and $5.50

The prices quoted include delivery within the limits of our Retail Store delivery. Orders shipped by express at customer's expense.

We have a leaflet illustrating several styles of Chafing Dishes and Percolators which will be sent free for the asking.

As a wedding gift, a Chafing Dish or a Percolator is most acceptable.

NORTH SHORE BREEZE

Vol. XI

Manchester, Mass., Friday, March 14, 1913

No. 11

SOCIETY NOTES

The W. H. Wellingtons will be missed from the colony at Manchester this year. For several seasons they have had the George M. Morgan house on Smith's Point, but that estate was sold last fall to Mr. Koshland of Boston. Mr. Wellington hopes to locate on the North Shore, however, and will probably occupy the Longworth place at Pride's Crossing.

♦ ♦ ♦

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Stockton returned to Manchester Tuesday after a ten days' visit with the Quincy A. Shaw, 2ds, who have a cottage at Palm Beach for the season.

♦ ♦ ♦

Mr. and Mrs. Lathrop Brown (Helen Hooper) are leaving New York for Washington on the 27th of this month to take up their residence there. Mr. Brown is the new member of Congress from St. James, Long Island, his all the year round home. Mr. and Mrs. Brown have named their second daughter, born a few weeks ago, Camilla.

♦ ♦ ♦

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Leland, who have been in Europe since early in January, expect to return the last of this month.

SOCIETY NOTES

The splendid spring weather of the last week has occasioned much activity among the summer cottagers, bringing many from the city to the sea-shore to "look-over" their property and make preparations for minor improvements on the estates, and in a great many cases for opening houses. From now on there will be occasional "arrivals" until the middle of April, when the cottages will be opened by the dozens. Many families are making a practice of arriving early in April and this will be none the less true this year. The "season" is becoming longer every year. Not a few families are making a practice of keeping their houses open all winter, and going away for the summer, notably the Whitehouses, who live at Manchester all winter so as to be near their son in Harvard, and then go to Europe for the midsummer. The Eben Jordans, too, spend the spring and autumn at their West Manchester estate, but go to England for the mid-summer.

♦ ♦ ♦

Miss Abby Hunt of the Beverly Cove colony, who sailed for Europe two weeks ago, will be joined later by her sisters, Mrs. R. D. Evans and Miss Belle Hunt.

SOCIETY NOTES

Mr. and Mrs. Amory Eliot and daughter, Miss Eliot, expect to return from the south on the 27th of this month. They will come to their house at Manchester, which has been open all winter.

♦ ♦ ♦

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald L. Hoyt of New York city, who had the Wm. Endicott, Jr., cottage on Neptune street, Beverly Cove, last season, will have the same place the coming summer.

♦ ♦ ♦

F. K. M. Rehn of the Magnolia summer colony, is giving an exhibition of his landscapes this week and next at the Mackbeth Gallery, Fifth avenue, New York. The paintings, many of which have been seen at his North Shore studio, include the following: The Autumn is Old, Spring-time, Christmas Day 1912, September Moonrise, When the Woods are Bare, A World of Asters and Golden-Rod, An October Carnival, Snow-Drifts, Autumn-Rock Creek, Washington, D. C., The First Snow--Noontide, The First Snow--Late Afternoon, The First Snow--In the Evening Light, The Last Gleam, Indian Summer and "No fruits, no flowers, no leaves, no birds--November!"

ESSEX COUNTY CLUB, MANCHESTER.

Destroyed by Fire Last Night. Nothing is Left Standing This Morning But the Four Chimneys.

Real Estate and Improvements ... Up and Down the North Shore ...

Work is about completed on the the two combination stable and garage buildings being built at Pride's Crossing for R. T. Paine and Chas. K. Cummings, respectively. The building used by the two families jointly heretofore was destroyed by fire last fall. Publicover Bros. are the contractors. This firm has also nearly completed the new house for R. P. Snelling of Milton on the Beverly Farms shore. Painters are now at work on the inside and the house is practically ready for the paper-hangers.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE

Flotow's "Martha," the first and only opera to be given in English at the Boston Opera House this season, will be the week's attractive addition to the repertory. It is the last of the eight novelties promised by Director Russell and such interest has been taken in the revival that it gives indications of being one of the season's most popular successes. With few exceptions the cast will be composed of American singers.

Miss Alice Nielsen, who recently triumphed in another Patti role,—that of Herlina in "Don Giovanni," will be the masquerading Martha.

The first performance will fall on Saturday night, March 22 and Mr. Moranzoni will direct.

On Monday night will be given the final presentation for this season of Rubert's "La Foret Bleue," the new fairy-tale opera.

On Tuesday evening there will be a special performance outside of the subscription series at which the great and only Enrico Caruso will be the bright and shining star. "Pagliacci," with the most famous of tenors singing his greatest role, will be the feature of the evening.

On Wednesday evening and again at the Saturday matinee "The Girl of the Golden West" will be given for the last time. On Wednesday night Miss Elizabeth Amsden will appear as the "Girl," a role which she took with much acceptance last season. At the matinee Mme. Melis will sing the part.

On account of the holiday, the usual Friday performance will be given on Thursday evening. "Faust" then will have its last hearing with Miss Nielsen as Marguerite.

For the following week, which will be the last of the season, and the first after Easter, Mr. Russell has arranged a program which will make the wind-up a blaze of glory. On Wednesday evening "Tristan und Isolde" will be sung and on Friday "Tales of Hoffman" will be heard again. The last performance of the season, on Saturday March 29, will, in response to numerous requests, be one of "The Jewels of the Madonna," the success of successes.

SOCIETY NOTES

The Gannetts of Boston and Cambridge, who have been coming to the Brownlands in Manchester for years, will make a change the coming season. Thomas B. Gannett, Jr., and his bride of last year, the daughter of ex-Gov. Eben S. Draper, will have the Dr. Rotch cottage on Blossom Lane, near Singing Beach, while the Senior Gannetts will have the Cobb cottage, so-called, on Cobb avenue and Masconomo street, nearby.

Mrs. Albert Ivins Croll and Miss Pauline Croll of Boston and Manchester, sailed last Saturday for a month's sojourn in Bermuda.

are running around in circles has been lost sight of. What the people want from the railroads is the best possible service, the lowest rates consistent with this kind of service, and the maximum of safety. Likewise, the stockholders want a fair return on their money. This looks like a pretty sizable job for any man, and yet our various legislative bodies and the yellow press insist on keeping Mr. Mellen so busy defending and explaining his operations and plans that it is a wonder he finds any time at all to attend to his job of running his roads. And the worst of it all is that it seems to lead nowhere. We have on our statute book law enough now to control the situation.

Mr. Mellen is not the ogre that the yellow press paints him. He is one of the greatest railroad men of his time. Why not give him a chance to exercise his real genius as a railroad man in giving the people what they demand in the way of service, rates and safety? If he don't or can't do it, then the state can step in, but it is not a square deal to ask him or any other man to run a big railroad system and then proceed to keep him away from his job.

The suggestion made by Governor Foss, that we have a New England railroad commission is the best one yet, and looks more like real co-operation than anything yet offered. It's time Mr. Mellen had a little co-operation instead of constant and profitless opposition. This is not a plea on behalf of Mr. Mellen, it is on behalf of the public that wants the service that Mr. Mellen can give.

SOCIETY NOTES

The first society event of the year on the North Shore was the wedding Wednesday afternoon of Miss Helen Read, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Read of Manchester and Boston, and Dr. Francis Lowell Burnett of Boston. The ceremony took place at 4.30 o'clock at the picturesque little Emmanuel Episcopal church on Smith's Point, Manchester, which was opened especially for the occasion. It was a small but pretty wedding. A number of friends and relatives of the young people came from Boston for the wedding and for the reception which followed at the Read home on "Read Island." Members of the Vincent club, of which the bride was a member, were among those in attendance. The chancel of the church was prettily decorated with palms and Easter lilies, which were the only decorations. Rev. E. J. V. Huiginn of St. Peter's Episcopal church, Beverly, was the officiating clergyman. The single ring service was used. Miss Charlotte Read, a sister, was bridesmaid and Miss Elizabeth Lee of Brookline and Beverly Farms, was maid of honor. The bride was given in marriage by her father. James B. Lowell of New York was best man. Charles A. Read, Jr., and Norman Read, brothers of the bride, were the ushers. The bride wore a gown of white and a long bridal veil of rare old lace, which was caught up with orange blossoms. The wedding marches were played by Miss Jessie Hoare, organist of the Congregational church at Manchester. Dr. and Mrs. Burnett have gone to the West Indies and Panama on a wedding trip. It is understood they will summer in Manchester.

◆ ◆ ◆
Arthur W. Kennard and family of Boston, who usually divide their summers between Cazenovia, N. Y., and Magnolia, will spend the coming summer abroad. They will sail May 27 and will take a house in England. After the four children are established Mr. and Mrs. Kennard will tour England and the continent in their Pierce-Arrow. Mr. Kennard will return about August 1 to put in that busy month at Magnolia, returning to England for his family at the close of the Magnolia season.

◆ ◆ ◆
The marriage of Miss Alice Meyer, daughter of Secy. and Mrs. Meyer, and Lieut. Raymond Rodgers will take place after Easter. The young people have leased a house at Chevy Chase (near Washington) for the summer.

THIS Catalog contains a volume of information regarding Trees and Plants for Rock Gardens, Old Fashioned Gardens, Sea-Shore Planting and Ground Covering under Rhododendrons and Shrubbery. [CONTINUED.]

Peering through the door they saw for the first time the many lights in Shaw's windows, scarce a quarter of a mile away. For a long time they stood and gazed at the distant windows. Dejectedly they sat down, backs to the wall and waited for the storm to spend its fury. Wet, cold and tired, they finally dozed. It was Lord Cecil who first saw the signs of dawn. The rain storm had come to a mysterious end, but a heavy fog in its stead loomed up. He aroused his companions and with many groans of anguish they prepared to venture forth into the white wall beyond.

Just as they were taking a last look about the wretched cellar something happened that would have brought terror to the stoutest heart. A wild, appalling shriek came from somewhere above, the cry of a mortal soul in agony.

The next instant three human forms shot through the narrow door and out into the fog, hair on end, eyes bulging, but sightless; legs traveling like the wind and as purposeless. It mattered not that the way was hidden; it mattered less that weeds, brush and stumps lurked in ambush for unwary feet. They fled into the foggy dangers without a thought of what lay before them, only of what stalked behind them.

Upstairs Randolph Shaw lay back against the wall and shook with laughter. Penelope's convulsed face was glued to the kitchen window, her eyes peering into the fog beyond. Shadowy figures leaped into the white mantle; the crash of brush came back to her ears, and then, like the barking of a dog, there arose from the mystic gray the fast diminishing cry:

"Help! Help! Help!" Growing fainter and sharper, the cry at last was lost in the phantom desert.

They stood at the window and watched the fog lift, gray and forbidding, until the trees and road were discernible. Then arm in arm they set forth across the wet way toward Shaw's cottage.

"Poor Cecil!" she sighed. "It was cruel of you." In the roadway they found a hat which she at once identified as the count's. Farther on there was a carriage lamp and later a mackintosh, which had been cast aside as an impediment. "Oh, it was cruel!" She smiled, however, in retrospection.

"If I were only sure that nothing serious had happened to Cecil," she murmured anxiously.

"I'm sorry, dear, for that screech of mine," he apologized.

Suddenly he started and gazed intently in the direction of the haunted house. A man—a sorry figure—was slowly, painfully approaching from the edge of the wood scarce a hundred yards away. In his hand he carried a stick to which was attached a white cloth—doubtless a handkerchief. He was hatless and limped perceptibly.

"It's Cecil!" whispered Penelope in horror struck tones. "Good heaven, Randolph, go to him! He is hurt!"

It was Lord Bazelhurst. As Shaw hurried down the drive to meet him, no thought of the feud in mind, two beings even more hopelessly dilapidated ventured from the wood and hobbled up behind the truce bearer, who had now paused to lift his shoulders into a position of dignity and defiance. Shaw's heart was touched. The spectacle was enough to melt the prejudice of any adversary. Lord Cecil's knees trembled. His hand shook as if in a chill. Mud covered, water soaked and bruised, their clothes rent in many places, their hats gone and their hair matted, their legs wobbly, the trio certainly inspired pity, not mirth nor scorn.

"One moment, sir," called his lordship, with a feeble attempt at severity. His voice was hoarse and shaky. "We do not come as friends, dem you. Is my sister here?"

"She is, Lord Bazelhurst. We'll talk this over later on," said Shaw in his friendliest way. "You are worn out and done up. I'm sure—you and your friends. Come; I'm not as bad as you think. I've changed my mind since I saw you last. Let's see if we can't come to an amicable understanding. Miss Drake is waiting up there. Breakfast soon will be ready—hot coffee and all that. Permit me, gentlemen, to invite you to partake of what we have. What say you?"

"Confound you, sir! I—I—" But his brave effort failed him. He staggered and would have fallen had not the duke caught him from behind.

"Thanks, old chap," said Barminster to Shaw. "We will come in for a moment. I say, perhaps you could give us a dry dud or two. Bazelhurst is in a bad way, and so is the count. It was a devil of a storm."

Penelope came down from the porch to meet them. Without a word she took her brother's arm. He stared at her with growing resentment.

"Dem it all, Pen," he chattered, "you're not at all wet, are you? Look at me! All on your account too."

"Dear old Cecil! All on Evelyn's account, you mean," she said softly, wistfully.

"I shall have an understanding with her when we get home," he said earnestly. "She shall meet my sister like this again."

"No," said Shaw from the other side; "she shan't."

"By Jove, Shaw, are you with me?" demanded his lordship in surprise.

"Depends on whether you are with me," said the other. Penelope flushed.

Hot coffee, chops, griddle cakes and maple sirup soon put the contending forces at their ease. Bazelhurst so far forgot himself as to laugh amiably at his host's jokes. The count responded in his most piquant dialect, and the duke swore by an ever useful Lord Harry that he had never tasted such a breakfast.

"By Jove, Pen," exclaimed her brother in rare good humor, "it's almost a sin to take you away from such good cooking as this."

"You're not going to take her away, however," said Shaw. "She has come to stay."

"What—what the devil do you mean, sir?" demanded Lord Cecil, his coffee cup shaking so violently that the contents overflowed.

"She's going over to Plattsburg with me today, and when she comes back

"When she comes back she will be Mrs. Randolph Shaw."

she will be Mrs. Randolph Shaw. That's what I mean, your lordship."

Three of his listeners choked with amazement and then coughed painfully. Feebly they set their cups down and gulped as if they had something to swallow. The duke was the first to find his tongue, and he was quite at a loss for words.

"B—by Jove," he said blankly, "that's demmed hot coffee!"

"Is this true, Penelope?" gasped his lordship.

"Yes, Cecil. I've promised to marry him."

"It isn't because you feel that you have no home with me?"

"I love him. It's a much older story than you think," she said simply.

"I say, that hits me hard," said the duke with a wry face. "Still, I join in saying, God bless you."

"We're trying to end the feud, you see," said Penelope.

Tears came into his lordship's pale eyes. He looked first at one and then at the other and then silently extended his hand to Randolph Shaw. He wrung it vigorously for a long time before speaking. Then, as if throwing a weight off his mind, he remarked:

"I say, Shaw. I'm sorry about that dog. I've got an English bull terrier down there that's taken a ribbon or so. If you don't mind, I'll send him up to you. He—he knows Penelope."

THE END.

Recipes For Long Life.

The late John Bigelow, the patriarch of diplomats and authors, and the no less distinguished physician and author Dr. S. Weir Mitchell were together several years ago at West Point. Dr. Bigelow was then ninety-two and Dr. Mitchell eighty.

The conversation turned to the subject of age. "I attribute my many years," said Dr. Bigelow, "to the fact that I have been most abstemious. I have eaten sparingly and have not used tobacco and have taken little exercise."

"It is just the reverse in my case," explained Dr. Mitchell. "I have eaten just as much as I wished, if I could get it; I have always used tobacco, immoderately at times, and I have always taken a great deal of exercise."

With that ninety-two years shook his head at eighty years and said, "Well, you will never live to be an old man."—Lippincott's.

A Free Hotel.

At Miramar, on the island of Majorca, in the Mediterranean, is a free hotel, where accommodations may be had for three days upon application to the agents of the Archduke Luis Salvador of Austria. It is a beautiful spot, and the entire neighborhood is full of attractions to the traveler. Attendants in charge look after the welfare of guests, who must, however, provide for their own food. Beds, linen and table appointments they receive gratis, and bread and wine can be obtained very reasonably. It is said that this provision is due to the gratification the Austrian owners felt years ago when they first came to live at Miramar. Such peace and such loveliness, they felt, should be shared by all lovers of nature who passed that way.—Argonaut.

J. Pierpont Morgan, King of Money, and New York Office

Photos by American Press Association.

THERE is nothing pretentious about J. Pierpont Morgan nor about his office. After the recent Pujo money trust inquiry there is little doubt as to Morgan's title, the "money king of America." You would think a man who stood at the head of American finance would show off a bit if he wanted to. Not so J. P. Of course his years forbid display, for he is over three score and ten now, but all his life has been without ostentation. His old dingy office at Wall and Broad streets, New York, opposite the United States branch treasury, reflects the man.

He Could Dodge.

"There's nothing slow about Jones," he said reflectively.

The other laughed scornfully.

"I guess you never loaned him any money," he said.

"Oh, yes, I have," replied the first speaker. "That's what made me speak that way. I loaned him $10 six months ago, and I haven't been able to catch him since."

A Profligate.

"I am afraid my husband is leading a double life."

"Heavens! What has aroused your suspicions?"

"He sneaked 50 cents out of his pay envelope last week and tried, when I found it out, to make me think he had done it by mistake."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Essex County Club At Manchester Destroyed.

Fire This Morning Caused Total Destruction. Only The Chimneys Left Standing. Thrilling Escape of Caretakers. Housekeeper Severely Injured.

The Essex County club at Manchester-by-the-Sea, the centre of social life on the North Shore, the Mecca to which society wends its way from all points along the Shore, was totally destroyed this morning by fire. Nothing but the four chimneys remain standing.

Aside from the loss of the large building, with its contents, which was the most spectacular fire even seen in Manchester, a tragic touch was narrowly averted, in that the four employees living at the club escaped only by the merest margin. The housekeeper, Miss Mary McGill is on the "dangerous list" at the Beverly hospital as the result of falling from the roof as she was trying to make her escape from the building.

The alarm was sounded at 2.35. The "all out" was sounded about three hours later, after the entire structure was burnt to the ground.

The cause of the fire is somewhat of a mystery. It is thought by some the fire might have originated from defective wiring. It seemed to have started in the very centre of the building, in the room where one of the heaters was located.

The four employees were almost overcome with smoke when they awoke. They tried to get out by way of the stairs, but soon found this an impossibility. They then turned to the windows. Joseph McPhee, the head-waiter, thought of telephoning an alarm and with this in mind tried again to get down stairs, but he was driven back. He then climbed out a window and jumped down one story to the roof of a small ell. From there he slid and jumped two more stories to the ground. The question was then how to get at the telephone. All the doors were locked. He was scantily clad, in his bare feet, but in some manner he broke into the building and telephoned an alarm. He was just in time for as he was still talking the wires were burned off and the telephone was out of commission.

Meanwhile James McElvoy, the chef, was assisting Miss McGill, the housekeeper, to reach the ground. It was planned to form a rope of bed sheets and lower her to the ground where McPhee was to assist her, but she apparently became dazed and either fell or jumped. She fell on the little piazza, in the rear of the building, enclosed by lattice work and entirely shut in. The smoke was pouring out the windows and the flames were only a few feet away. McPhee, who was on the ground saw the predicament and hastily procured a baseball bat and smashed an entrance through the lattice work. He found Miss McGill in terrible pain all in a heap. McElvoy and Patrick Sheehan, who helps in the kitchen, were soon on hand and the three carried the suffering woman to the stable. She was attended by Dr. G. W. Blaisdell, who said no bones were broken. She was taken in the ambulance to the Beverly General hospital. Sheehan in jumping from the roof severely cut one of his hands. It was said two of the fingers were broken.

Meanwhile, the Manchester fire department was promptly on hand and streams were turned on the building, then a mass of flames. The fire seemed to gain rapid headway, and the heavens were lighted up for miles around. It seemed that the whole town was out. The firemen put up a good fight, but their efforts amounted to nothing in the face of the headway made by the flames. A few chairs and tables were brought out of the building, but practically nothing of consequence was saved.

Fortunately, there was no wind and the large embers were not carried far enough to set fire to other buildings.

The building was a total loss. It is estimated the loss is $65,000,—$50,000 on the building and $15,000 on contents. It is difficult to estimate the value of the contents outside the furnishings. In nearly all of the hundred or more lockers were articles of clothing, golf sticks, and the like. Nothing was saved. The manager, Mr. Doucette was able to get out the club books and the small safe in the office.

Insurance was carried through the office of O'Brien and Russell of Water street, Boston.

It is not known what will be done toward rebuilding. In all probability some temporary structure will be put up for the summer, and the club house will be rebuilt during the coming fall and winter. For some time there has been plans on foot to remodel the club considerably, and it is safe to conjecture that now a club house will be built that will surpass anything of its kind on this side of the water. The club is one of the most popular clubs in New England and the golf grounds are now considered among the best in the country.

For the last two or three years the club has been kept open all winter and many people have availed themselves of the opportunity to spend a few days on the Shore in winter making the club their headquarters.

Much comment is being heard to-day of the manner in which the injured Miss McGill was sent to the hospital. She was sent alone, with the exception of the driver and Officer Bullock. The law is very specific on this point. Whether it is necessary or not, a woman MUST accompany a woman patient in an ambulance. Whoever is in authority in this matter should be censured for allowing the poor woman to be sent on a seven-mile trip to Beverly unaccompanied.

Several members of the local First Aid Class of the Red Cross Society has an opportunity to put their training into practical operation last night. Though the "first aid" was rendered Miss McGill by Dr. Blaisdell, Mrs. John Baker (whose late husband was formerly supt. of the Essex County club grounds), Mrs. Alexander Robertson and Miss Grace McGregor, administered aid to the suffering woman while the ambulance was being called.

The ambulance made quick time to Beverly, in charge of Driver Thomas Carroll. The distance was covered in less than 30 minutes.

The fire department may be blamed for not having more than four streams on the fire, but in our opinion these four streams did as effective work as fifty streams. The whole building was a roaring mass of livid flames in less than ten minutes after the alarm was given. Nothing could stop the fire. The building was of wood, and stood alone in the open,—the best of conditions for a big fire.

Notes On New Books

Recently Added to Manchester Public Library

Boys who become fond of "Norman Carver," "Fred Warner," "Billy Eustace," "Sol Soc," "Jud Skinner" and the Frenchmen "Pete Bedote" and "Felix Lamaire" in "All Among the Loggers" will be glad to renew their acquaintance in "With Peakpole and Peavy" the sequel to the above story. "All Among the Loggers" gave a very good description of a logging camp down in Maine. At the end of the "Loggers" we had left the logs piled up on the banks of the river. These collections of logs were known as "landings." In the present story the timber is rolled into the water in the spring of the year and floated down the river to the saw mills to be cut up into lumber. Rafting the logs is a dangerous task and is well described in this book. The story is illustrated, showing various phases of the work. It is a worthy successor to "All Among the Loggers."

Laura E. Richards, author of "Captain 'January,'" "Mrs. Tree" and "Mrs. Tree's Will" has written another novel, "Miss Jimmy." In this story she has portrayed, in her bright way, the New England character. "Jimmy" left home and became a trained nurse and after five years came back home to take care of her invalid sister. She was like "Sentimental Tommy" in that she was "very masterful" usually getting her own way. Fortunately her happy nature was contagious and the neighborhood was much benefited by her presence. Before the story closes she finds her affinity and all ends well.

"Poor Dear Margaret Kirby"—by Kathleen Norris, author of "Mother" and "The Rich Mrs. Burgoyne"—is a collection of short stories. The book should not be judged by the opening story, which gives the title to this work, as it is not as good as many others. "What Happened to Alanna" and "The Friendship of Alanna" are two good stories about the family of an Irish politician. "Making allowance for Mamma" is both funny and clever.

"The Gay Deceiver" is a good character study. There are a number of other good stories in this volume.

The industrial question looms large at the present time and anything that brings the employer and employee closer together should be welcomed. William C. Redfield—a prominent writer on this subject—has brought out a book, "The New Industrial Day." It should be of interest to every citizen, and every employer of labor should read it. He believes the workingman should be considered as an asset and not as an expense.

"Injurious Insects, How to Recognize and Control Them" is one of the new books that should be of great practical use. The author divides the insect pests into three groups: 1. "Pests of garden and field crops;" 2. "Pests of orchard and small fruits;" 3. "Pests of the household." The book has some 600 illustrations and is well indexed. To exemplify the usefulness of this index take the article on the cut worm which is found on page 140. Referring to treatment it recommended poison bran mash but the formula was not given. Looking up bran mash in the index you will find it on page 68 where it is told how it is made.

Those having trouble with "injurious insects" of the garden, orchard or home will receive help by consulting this up-to-date treatise.

I think most every one likes to know something about the author of any book they have read and enjoyed. Readers of "The Spy" and the "Leatherstocking Tales" will be pleased to know that at last we have a life of James Fenimore Cooper. There is probably no early American writer about whose personality we know so little. The latter part of his life was embittered. His experiences at that time led him to discourage any attempt to write his biography. His wish has been respected up to this time. However, people naturally wanted to know more about an author the popularity of whose works is still undiminished. The work is written by Mary E. Phillips and is beautifully illustrated.

Good novels are scarce—I am referring to recent fiction—so it is a pleasure to have the opportunity to read one that is much above the average. "The Happy Warrior"—by A. S. M. Hutchinson, author of "Once Aboard the Lagger"—is undoubtedly a good novel. The title is the same as that of one of the great poems written by William Wordsworth and the book opens with a quotation from this poem. "The Happy Warrior" would be worth while if for no other reason than that it called attention to Wordsworth's great poem. The novel is one of English life and has rather an unusual plot. Those competent to judge predict a brilliant future for the author of this popular novel. America has sometimes been called "A Nation of Inventors," and there is ample proof that the world has been enriched by numerous American inventions. Consequently "Leading American Inventors" by George Hies should be of peculiar interest. We are told about John Stevens, inventor of a successful screw propeller, Fulton and his steamboat, Whitney and his cotton-gin, McCormick and his reaper, Elias Howe and his sewing-machine and many others.

All lovers of Dickens will be pleased to have the privilege of reading "The Dicken's Originals" by Edwin Pugh. The book is illustrated with photographs of the characters in real life from whom the well known characters in his stories were copied. "Mr. Micawber," who was always waiting for "something to turn up," was his own father, John Dickens; "Mrs. Nickleby" was his mother; the "Cheeryble Brothers" were two merchants of Manchester, England, by the name of Grant. Walter Savage Landor—called by E. V. Lucas in his "Wanderer In Florence," "The Great English Florentine"—was the original of "Lawrence Boythorne" in "Bleak House." There is much of interest told about other originals of well known characters in his books.

"Tangles" by Margaret Cameron is a volume of short stories of a humorous character. The first story, "Who Laughs Last" is one of the best in the book. "The Pipes o' Pan," "The Little White Hin" and "The Way to the Wedding" are other good stories. In fact the most of them are above the ordinary.

Two books have just been added to the library that should be of interest to poultry raisers. "Standard Perfection Poultry Book" by C. C. Shoemaker is a small volume containing a great deal of knowledge on this subject in a condensed form. "How to Keep Hens for Profit" by C. S. Valentine is a larger work. "Improving the American Hen," "The American Hen and American Money," "Eggs of the American Breeds," "Mother and Chicks," "Handling the Chicks" and "Common-sense Handling of Common Diseases" are some headings of chapters. "A Chautauqua Boy in '61 and Afterwards" is a volume of reminiscences by David B. Parker. He fought in the Civil war as a private. He was rapidly promoted. He was made "Superintendent of the Mails and Dispatch-bearers of the Army of the Potomac" and later on he had charge of the reconstruction of Postal Service of Virginia and at one time was United States Marshall for Virginia. After the war he spent a number of years in the Postal Secret Service. He was closely associated with President Lincoln, and he knew intimately Presidents Johnson, Grant, Hays, Garfield. A great many volumes of reminiscences have been written about the Civil War but very few give as good an idea of some phases of the war as does this book. We all realize the importance of good homes, and anything that would improve them should be very welcome. "Increasing Home Efficiency"—by Martha Bensley Bruere and Robert W. Bruere—contains some excellent advice about the home. The following headings of chapters: "What is the Home For," "Home Administration," "The Home and the Market," "How Shall We Learn to Keep House," "The Cost of Children" and "Savings and Efficiency" will give some idea how the subject is taken up.

In "Village Life in America 1852-1872" by Caroline C. Richards we are given a very attractive picture of life in a village in New York State at a very interesting period in our history. She began the diary when only ten years of age and kept it up for twenty years. We see things through the eyes of a growing child and a very observing child, at that. The book has an introduction by Margaret E. Sangster. She says, "I have read thousands of books. I have never read one which has given me more delight than this." This is high praise coming from such a source.

Boys experimenting with wireless telegraphy will be glad to know that one of the books recently added to the library is "Principles of Wireless Telegraphy," by George W. Pierce, A. M., Ph. D., assistant Professor of Physics in Harvard University. This volume contains the non-mathematical problems of a course of lectures entitled "Electric Waves and their Application to Wireless Telegraphy." He gives something of the history of the development of wireless telegraphy. The book is somewhat technical but we trust that those seeking help along this line will receive much aid from it.

"The Last Leaf, Observations During Seventy-five Years of Men and Events in America and England," by James Kendall Hosmer, L. L. D., is a volume of reminiscences that should appeal to a large class of readers. The author knew a large number of the great men of his day and he pictures each one in a few terse words or relates some anecdote which exemplifies the character under discussion.

"Masterpieces of the Masters of Fiction" should have many readers. The author critically studies some forty great works of fiction. Those who are more or less familiar with these great novels will be glad to renew their acquaintance with their favorites through this interesting review. Others who have not read these masterpieces and have not the time to do so may learn much about them by reading this book.

Anything from the pen of W. W. Jacobs is always welcome. "Short Cruises" contains an even dozen short stories. They are all good. You ought to read "Her Uncle" and "A Love Knot." Rider Haggard became famous through his novels of South African life. He acquired his knowledge of the life in South Africa when he was private secretary to Sir Henry Bulwer at Natal and later held the same position with Sir T. Shepstone, Commissioner of the Transvaal. His stories are weird romances. "She" was one of the best known and most popular of these. It was written in 1887. Later on he wrote a sequel to this story called "Ayesha." This novel in which the characters of "She" reappear is in this week's list of books.

A complete list of recent additions to the library is given below. —R. T. G.

PUBLICITY HOME TO ROOST

A great many newspapers are very urgent in reform work and give as much publicity as possible to the measures they desire to have carried out, but when the publicity strikes home and they are obliged to reveal a few facts about the ownership and management of their own enterprises they attempt to restrain the enforcement of the national newspaper law. There is seemingly no great need of opposing the regulations which have been placed on the newspapers of the country by the Federal Government; indeed, such opposition seems childish and contrary to the preachments of many journals that are continually giving publicity to less needed reforms than the one suggested in the management of their own papers.

While the right of the admission of newspapers to the mails is something which is worrying the publishers, the other stipulations need cause no particular worry.

Requiring a paper to reveal its ownership is not taking away the freedom of the press; the prohibition of veiled advertisements is a proper regulation, and the publication of the circulation of the papers is a protection to that vast army of advertisers.

The newspapers make the public take the medicine of publicity, and should not be entirely averse to taking it themselves. The newspaper law, if sustained by the Supreme Court in the numerous test cases, should prove a mutual benefit for newspapers and public alike.

GRAFT VS. CORRECTIVE METHODS

Apparently the only effective way in which to determine whether grafting is being carried on in a State department is the one which is being utilized by Gov. Sulzer of New York. He has started a commissioner on an investigation of the Highway Department and the commissioner and his experts will look into all the contracts concerning road building.

Gov. Sulzer is determined that no one will have reason to charge his administration with grafting, and he takes this method of ascertaining how much the state is losing yearly by unwise appropriations, which he is certain have been made. The charitable institutions and the Department of Public Works will come under the scrutiny of his investigators before they are finished.

HAVE ENOUGH HOLIDAYS

Action by the Speaker of the House of Representatives killed the bill making January 1 a legal holiday in this state. This is not to be much regretted, however, for it would seem that Massachusetts is well supplied with holidays at present. The first day of the year does not make itself adaptable to the pursuit of any particular sports or other pleasure. The situation as it now stands, when one may celebrate the ushering in of a new year in any manner which he desires is better than the one which was proposed.

It is not necessary to have the Legislature act in order to enjoy this or any other day. In a period of the year when the weather is not apt to be excellent the only amusement that is available is found within doors. The bell ringing, singing and general revelry are enjoyed fully as much as they would be were January 1 constituted a legal holiday.

THE AMERICAN NOVEL

"The 'great American novel,' which may have been written, but is still awaiting publication, will deal neither with the rich nor poor exclusively, nor with the middle class, but with all sorts and conditions of men."—Boston Globe. Which brings up the question of what kind of literature is being foisted upon readers and lovers of novels. True, the great American novel has yet to be written and those books that have been meeting with general approval and subsequent popularity have been but shallow treatises on life as the average American finds it.

Then there is the old question of whether the poor prefer to read stories about themselves rather than about the rich. This has been much discussed of late among writers and literary "hacks." Many have the plausible theory that a class of people prefer to read about characters in a different sphere of life than their own. Others believe that the majority of readers are more interested in their own class. The sale of the hundreds of popular novels is no indication of a trend either way. However, if the novelist is clever enough, he can make his book interesting to every class.

McDEVITT'S PUNISHMENT

The punishment set forth by the Senate committee on rules for Senator McDevitt's ill-considered charges of attempted bribery on the part of a member of the House is severe, but the offense was not light. A man who makes the accusations he did and does not prove them, must expect something more than mere reprimand. All the more must he be careful in his utterances if he is a member of a legislative body.

Perhaps this particular incident may have some lesson for certain persons in unofficial positions who are too prone to talk of corruption and graft among public officials without any evidence to back them up.

ANOTHER LABOR CONTROVERSY

Four of the strongest labor and industrial leagues in the state are at present attempting to prevent the merging of the Board of Labor and Industries with the Industrial Accident Board, as favored by Gov. Foss in his last message. They claim that the only arguments before the Legislature in favor of the transfer are contained in the report of the Commission on Economy and Efficiency and in this same message.

The Economy Commission points to two places where the functions of the two boards are alleged to overlap.

First, an unnecessary duplication of reports. This, the leagues says, is a point of minor importance.

The other point and the principal one at which duplication is alleged is in the matter of safeguarding machinery and the prevention of accidents. This is the only point of importance made by the Governor's message and is the only point upon which the Industrial Accident Board has laid any stress.

The possible duplication of efforts is an insufficient reason for handing over to a specialist board the whole department of labor which is to assume the big, broad, comprehensive powers of enforcing all the labor laws of the Commonwealth and inspecting all the industrial establishments.

The transfer is opposed by the executive committees of the following organizations: Massachusetts Consumers' League, Massachusetts Child Labor Committee, Women's Educational and Industrial Union and the Women's Trade Union League.

When one considers that at the last election in Boston but forty-one per cent of the voters registered, it is no wonder that here is a host of criticism in the affairs in the Hub. If men do not have interest enough in their own immediate government and in their right of suffrage to vote, it is perhaps time for the women to have the ballot. The women are not over-interested, however, for in Revere last week but forty-seven per cent of the fair sex registered, and but forty-four per cent in Boston.

HAIL TO SPRING

(Original)

Hail to spring, lovely spring!
Now the birds begin to sing;
Pretty little birds in gray,
Singing, fly from brae to brae.

Hail to spring, vernal spring!
Merrily does the plough-boy sing,
While his horses jog along
To the music of his song.

Hail to spring, gladsome spring!
Loud we'll make the welkin ring;
Life's ascending from the earth;
Fields and trees are giving birth.

Hail to spring, blithesome spring!
With your advent we now bring,
While the birds and plough-boys sing,
All nature's simple offering.

HELEN KELLER TO LECTURE AT TREMONT TEMPLE

Edwin Bower Hesser announces the first Boston appearance of Miss Helen Keller and her teacher, Mrs. Macy at Tremont Temple on Monday, March 24th. Miss Keller will deliver an address on "The Heart and the Hand"—really, the story of her remarkable life.

Helen Keller has been known to the world ever since she was seven years old, when the first reports of her education were published, telling how a deaf blind child had learned to read and write in six months. Her life has been an unbroken series of triumphs over obstacles. Deaf and blind at the age of nineteen months she remained in intellectual darkness until she was nearly seven. Then Mrs. Macy (Miss Sullivan) a graduate of the Perkins Institute where Dr. Howe had done his great work with Laura Bridgman, went to Helen Keller's home in Alabama, and began her education. At the age of ten Helen Keller learned to speak. At sixteen she was preparing for college. She graduated from Radcliffe College in 1904, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Arts cum laude (with distinction). While she was in college she wrote "The Story of My Life," which has been translated into fifteen languages.

During the past year she has taken another step forward in her remarkable career. Under the instruction of Mr. Charles White, a teacher of singing at the New England Conservatory of Music, she has greatly improved her speaking voice. During the summer of 1912 she spoke before a convention of teachers of the deaf at Providence, R. I. This was the first time that she stood alone on a public platform. A few months later she addressed an audience of physicians at the Otological Congress held in Boston at the Harvard Medical school. The success of these experiments has encouraged her to appear before the general public.

"PINK LADY" AT THE COLONIAL

Never has a musical comedy received a warmer reception on a return visit to Boston than did "The Pink Lady" at the Colonial Theatre last week. All of the old favorites of the original cast were remembered with enthusiasm. Of course the four particular favorites are Frank Lalor, Hazel Dawn, Alice Dovey and Alice Hegemen, but all of the old cast were warmly welcomed.

The Herald said: "It was received with the same satisfaction which greeted its initial appearance. It was received with the cordiality and enthusiasm which its merits deserved."

The Transcript after much praise of the principals spoke of the performance as "As effective and pleasant an entertainment as Boston has witnessed."

The Traveler says that "The Pink Lady" is funnier than ever. And so it went. It will be many a long day before a more popular offering will be seen in Boston.

Seats are now selling two weeks in advance and mail orders will receive the most careful attention if accompanied by remittances.

NEW YORK HIPPODROME

"Under Many Flags" the wonderful new series of world famed spectacles at the New York Hippodrome has passed the 320th. performance and is still the most popular and fascinating entertainment of the metropolis of the Western Hemisphere. There was recently added the dramatic spectacle "Gypsy Life" in three picturesque scenes, set in the hills of Hampshire, England. In the second scene there is presented a three-ring mammoth circus and the third scene is the greatest thrill of all, The Plunging Horses.

Thirty-three Indian chiefs, the last leaders of the Redmen of the U. S. visited the Hippodrome after the Presidential ceremonies at Fort Wardsworth, Staten Island, last week. It was their first visit to the great playhouse and they applauded long and loud when the Plunging Horses came on the great stage and plunged into the big tank. They were under the guidance of U. S. Indian Commissioner Abbott, Major T. McLoughlin and Major Burke.

"Duxbury and Its Origin"

Subject of a Talk by Rev. E. J. V. Huiginn Before Manchester Men's Brotherhood.

Rev. E. J. V. Huiginn of Beverly addressed a large gathering of men at the Men's Brotherhood on Monday evening at the Baptist church, Manchester. He spoke on "Duxbury and its Origin."

He said in part: "When I went to Duxbury there was very little known about its first settlers, its roads, or its churches. I was interested to know more concerning these things, and I started out in search for facts. First I came across an old cemetery over-run with weeds, with the tombstones tipped over and a great many missing. Looking into this matter, I found many of the stones reclining against the hearth stones in the homes of relatives of the deceased. I at once took steps to straighten these matters out and therefore founded the Duxbury Rural society.

"We began at once on the cemetery near Hog's Point, and looking into the old records we found that the body of Myles Standish must be buried there. The records told us that the grave was marked with triangular stones. We dug at this place but did not discover the body. I then went into town meeting, and blew up everybody there until I was given the privilege of working out the records of the old town. I got permission and went to the town clerk and obtained the records 150 years back. I found out where the first roads were and how many there were at that time, and by whom built. I found out the place of the first meeting house and the first minister's house.

"It was Brewster who put in the first three roads in 1632 through Duxbury. In 1638 Standish & Brewster tried to get the town put the roads in good condition, but we do not find any records that this was ever done. In 1715 the town voted to build a new road nearer the seashore. We found that the first meeting-house was west of the road.

"The first ministers house was placed near the church and the land was granted by the town. In the records we found when the town was authorized to have a seine-net placed at Morton's hole to catch fish. In 1688 Mr. Wordsworth, the town clerk, died, stating that there had been 84 deaths during his time of clerkship.

"Standish, who had died in 1656, was said to have been buried in various places, but the records pointed to the fact that 2 boys, 2 women and an old man were buried in the spot supposed to be the grave of Standish and his family. I got permission to dig for their graves and tried to prove once and for all that Standish was buried in Duxbury. We dug and found the bodies of 2 boys, 2 women, and an old man. We proved without doubt that the 2 boys were his sons as they were about the age of 16 years at their death as the records showed. The women were no doubt the daughters of Standish; the body of the old man was without question the body of Myles Standish himself, for the construction of his head was the same as the descendants that stood by as we took their bodies up and out of the graves. We know Standish was an old man when he died, and the records showed that all were buried exactly as found.

"We have for a certainty cleared up the resting place of Standish and his family. We built new boxes and replaced the bodies in the grave which we had dug.

"We looked into the matters pertaining to the old ministers and their places of worship and found that many things had never been recorded.

"After our work was done we had an attested copy made of our proofs and then had the matter placed in book form for the coming generations to read."

A social hour followed and a lunch was served. Mr. Tyler was appointed secretary because of the resignation of Robert M. Baker. The next meeting will be next Monday evening.

"THE SONG BIRDS" AT B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE

One of the biggest and most unique novelties of the season is promised for B. F. Keith's Theatre next week in William Burress' musical production, "The Song Birds." This is a splendid organization of brilliant soloists, most of whom have been identified with the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York, in a series of impersonations of the famous operatic stars of the present day. All of the oddities and characteristics of the great singers are burlesqued in the most amusing fashion. The Thomas A. Edison Kinetophone will exhibit a brand new series of talking motion pictures, and another brilliant feature will be the Royal Kitamura Japanese

MANCHESTER

JOHN W. CAMPBELL

John W. Campbell, in the provision business in Manchester for 25 years, passed away at his home on School street, Manchester, last Tuesday night at the age of 57 years, 11 months, after a lingering illness for the past two years.

Mr. Campbell was born in Swampscott, April 29, 1855. When a boy his family moved to Boston, where he was educated in the public schools. He came to Beverly Farms in 1882 and in November, 1885, he came to Manchester to work for the late Clifford Goodridge, who was in the meat and provision business. He shortly went in business with Mr. Goodridge, and later with Frost Hubbard. He continued in the business until two years ago, when he sold his interest in the firm of Campbell & Hinchliffe, to the latter and retired because of failing health.

Mr. Campbell was a man highly respected in the community. In his capacity as provision dealer for a quarter of a century, he was brought in touch with shore residents, many of whom dealt with him for that number of years.

He was a charter member of the Manchester club, and was honored by his townsmen by being elected several years a member of the Republican Town Committee. He was also a member of the Pilgrim Fathers and of the A.O.U.W.

He is survived by a widow and two sisters, Mrs. William H. Nye and Mrs. William E. Thomas, both of Watertown.

Funeral services were held this afternoon from his late residence on School street. Rev. C. Arthur Lincoln, formerly of Manchester, now of Lowell, officiated. Interment was in Rosedale cemetery.

Troupe of Oriental acrobats and wonder workers. The Bison City Four, the policeman, the dago, the bartender, and the tramp, will blend a series of melodies musical numbers with a picture of daily life on the streets of New York, while Carl Henry and Nellie Francis, late stars at the head of their own company in the musical comedy field, will appear in their latest medley of foolishness and chatter.

Mrs. A. G. Warner was called to Warren, Me., yesterday because of the serious illness of her father, who is suffering with pneumonia.

Dr. J. R. MacKinnon of Dorchester, a dentist, is to open an office in Manchester. He has hired the house on Church street, formerly the home of Frank P. Knight and family and will take occupancy in April or May 1.

The Manchester Woman's club announces a concert by the Angelus Quartet, March 26th, at the Town hall. Tickets will be on sale at the club meeting on Tuesday and later at Allen's drug store. General admission 25c, reserved seats 35c.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter B. Calderwood are to occupy the cottage on Elm street, recently the home of the late G. F. Allen. Mrs. Allen, who makes her home with Mr. and Mrs. Osborne Leach in Danvers, is quite feeble.

Miss Vera Kitfield, a student at the Posse gymnasium, which was destroyed by fire at Boston last Saturday, was one of the unfortunate young ladies who lost clothing and other articles in the fire.

Visitors at the auto show in Boston this week have received a welcome reception at the booth of Green & Swett Co., and also at the booth where Frank Sinnicks was in charge. The latter booth had a display of something new in the line of a quick-detachable rim for autos. The innovation has been tested out on light and heavy cars and has given the most gratifying results. It is said to be a wonder and is one of the best of the new things being introduced at the present time.

The entertainment given in the Town hall last Friday night by the Essex Comedy Co., was a splendid thing and it was a pity the hall was not crowded. There were over sixty people in the show and naturally it cost considerable to put it on. In every way the show was of first class order. It was a minstrel-comedy performance. Arthur C. Story was the interlocutor. Neil Cody and Ollie Ahearn of the ends was a team that would be hard to beat in amateur theatricals. Miss Rebecca Andrews was one of the soloists.

THE RAMBLER

Horrors! The Rambler finds that the high cost of living has received an added blow in the price of ladies' spring hats. They are higher than ever, both in price and in regard to their superfluous plumage. Yes, girls, you've got to dig a little deeper for that "dream" of a bonnet this season if it is going to grace your curly locks on Easter morn.' The Rambler does not pretend to know much about women's apparel, but the shock which he received when told the prices on ladies' hats by several milliners with whom he was talking (business) gave him a bad case of cold feet. "Here's a perfect dear of a hat trimmed with roses," said one fair purveyor of ladies' headgear. "How much do you suppose it's worth?" she quired. We made a "stab" at the price, telling her that it might be worth $5, which was $3.98 more than we care to give for it. When she told us that we could not elope with that hat from the store until we had deposited 25 simoleons in the cash register, we hied ourselves to the nearest cigar emporium to forget our troubles in the smoke of an im-pure Havana. Yes, we meditated on the cost of high living (a new expression) and wondered why so many members of the male persuasion contemplated matrimony the next spring.

Heard in Puritan Massachusetts. Teacher:—"What were the laws which Edmund Burke wished to have repealed?" "Well, one of them was the law that a man mustn't kiss his wife on Sunday."

Miss Helen Burnham arrived in town yesterday for a few days visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Burnham.

Mrs. Hannah Tappan was in charge of an entertainment at the Chelsea Soldiers' Home Wednesday evening of this week. The program follows: Orchestra selection; reading, Miss Mary E. Knowles; violin solo, Conrad Horgan; song and dance, Bertha Nyles; reading, Miss Nyles; violin solo, Master Walter Nyles; solo, Miss Purcel; song, Mrs. Dennen; character sketch, Mrs. Glascoe. Mrs. Tappan is Soldiers Home Aide for the division president.

PANAMA CANAL IN KINEMACOLOR

"The Making of the Panama Canal" in wonderful Kinemacolor natural color motion pictures will be the attraction at Tremont Temple, Boston, for five weeks starting Monday, March 17th. The performances will be given twice daily, at 2.30 and 8.15, the prices ranging from 25c to $1.00.

"The Making of the Panama Canal in Kinemacolor" is a pictorial reflection of the most colossal engineering feat in the history of the civilized world—the accomplishment of four centuries of dreaming, and a testimony to the courage and indomitable perseverance of the forces directed by the master mind of Colonel Goethals, acknowledged by all the world as the inspiring genius of the huge undertaking.

No detail of the gigantic work has escaped the Kinemacolor experts. To witness the exhibition gives a much better idea of the undertaking in its entirety than could be gained by an actual visit to the Canal Zone at Panama. In the color-films you are shown dredges excavating huge masses of earth, suction drills that bore into the soil and automatically remove the earth as it is loosened, the pouring of concrete between the vast guide walls and the blasting away of a mountain in one single explosion.

Of almost equal interest are the actual scenes of the Balkans War, produced by the same method of natural color photography and motion.

A PROGRESSIVE NEWSPAPER

Springfield Republican

MASSACHUSETTS

HONESTLY DEVOTED TO THE SERVICE OF THE PEOPLE

Independent of Selfish Political, Personal or Financial Influences

COURAGEOUS, ENTERPRISING. INTERESTING

ESTABLISHED IN 1824 BY SAMUEL BOWLES.

DAILY (morning) $8; SUNDAY $2; WEEKLY $1 a Year.

The Springfield Republican stands for political progress and social justice. It has stood for these causes consistently and strongly during the 88 years of its career. It stands also for honesty in all of the relations of life, personal, political, commercial, industrial, national and inter-national. It considers that honesty is an essential basis of real political progress and social justice. It refuses to follow popular leaders who lack this fundamental virtue, however captivating and eloquent.

The Republican has a profound faith in democratic institutions, but it recognizes clearly that the safeguard of a progressive democracy is universal education, developing an enlightened electorate, which may deal justly with the difficult problems that modern civilization presents. It looks forward, through the agency of such an electorate, to an increasing restraint of the aggrandizing activities of powerful individuals and groups, to the end that there may be a juster distribution of the fruits of labor and a fuller realization of the ideal of the commonwealth.

The Republican seeks to embody its principles in its own service to the people as a newspaper. It strives ever to deal with its public honesty in its presentation of the news of the day. It tells no tales to promote its sales. It aims to educate, to enlighten and uplift its readers; and yet to interest and entertain them by honest methods. Its editorial page is one of the strongest, keenest, broadest, in the country. It deals with all the subjects that concern humanity in the spirit of helpfulness, of healthier, happier living.

The Republican gives a news service that is real, not flashy. It commands the best agencies for its general news, often supplemented by special correspondence. It covers its home territory with remarkable thoroughness, and its liberal treatment to literature and to the arts, sciences and industries. The Sunday Republican is especially rich in delightful literary and other diverting features and departments.

THE WEEKLY REPUBLICAN

Under the direction of Frederick Villiers, the world-famous war correspondent, an intrepid body of Kinemacolor experts daily risked their lives for many weeks so that the world might see the War in the Balkans through the eyes of the Kinemacolor camera.

The campaign around Adrianople provided the most thrilling portion of the Kinemacolor films—but additional topics are reaching America frequently. The contrast between new and old is obvious in the twenty bullock carts that are seen dragging the heavy guns to strategic positions, and the automobiles used to whisk the generals from point to point.

Town Affairs

WITH THE MANCHESTER BOARD
OF SELECTMEN AND OTHER
TOWN OFFICIALS

At their weekly meeting Tuesday evening the Selectmen made the following appointments:

James Hoare, Clarence W. Morgan and George S. Sinnicks, fire commissioners.

George D. Haskell, janitor Town hall building.

James Read, caretaker town clock.

Dr. G. W. Blaisdell, physician on Board of Health.

Wilbur B. Paige, caretaker of almshouse, and Mrs. Paige, matron.

The board took no action on the appointment of a chief of police, nor on a superintendent of moth suppression work, nor caretaker for Tuck's Point picnic ground.

The Water Board has organized with G. E. Hildreth as chairman and secretary. T. W. Long has been re-appointed clerk; George Evans, supt., Wm. J. Lethbridge, foreman; Archie Greenough, engineer at Home Station; W. W. Soulis, engineer of Gravel Pond Station; Wm. D. Cook, assistant engineer.

The town voted to improve Proctor street, at the junction of Masconomo street, by building to full measure of the highway, constructing a retaining wall, and erect a fence on wall. To that end, the supt. of streets and the board were to have looked the ground over yesterday. The work will be started at once, it is understood.

In accordance with the vote of the town to buy a pair of horses for the fire department, the town veterinary, Dr. J. J. Riordan and Fire Commissioners Geo. S. Sinnicks and Clarence W. Morgan went to Boston last Friday and selected a handsome pair of brown horses, 6 and 7 years of age, respectively. They were brought down over the road Monday. Those who pretend to know something about horses say they will make a splendid pair — a team to be proud of. They are Ohio horses. Fewer Canadian horses are found on the market today because of the 30 per cent. duty charged on bringing horses into this country.

People get into a hole, then try to induce others to get them out.

BERNARD BOYLE TRANSFERRED FROM WINNIPEG TO BOSTON

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Leo Boyle, who moved from Manchester last summer and went to Winnipeg, Manitoba, where Mr. Boyle was sent as one of the U. S. immigration inspectors, are glad to learn of Mr. Boyle's appointment to the Boston Custom house. The transfer was brought about by the resignation of Henry T. Bingham, who put in some good work toward favoring the Manchester young man in place of the forty or fifty others who were waiting for a chance to get in the service at the Boston station. Congressman Gardner was the guiding power in effecting the change after Mr. Bingham had done his part, and the Congressman's endeavors will be more appreciated when it is realized that Secretary Nagel of Pres. Taft's cabinet wanted to supply another young man for the position instead of Con. Gardner's choice.

GARDNER'S PERSISTENCY WON OUT FOR MANCHESTER MAN

An Associated Press despatch from Washington dated Monday contained the following:

"In two of his first official acts Sec. of Labor Wilson favored one Massachusetts Congressman and decided against another. Strangely enough, Mr. Curley, a Democrat, was the one denied, while a request of Mr. Gardner, a Republican, was acceded to.

*****

"For some time Congressman Gardner has been asking the Department of Commerce and Labor to transfer Bernard L. Boyle, a son of Representative Patrick H. Boyle of the Massachusetts Legislature, from Winnipeg, where he is employed as an immigration inspector, to Boston. Commissioner of Labor Keefe recommended the transfer, but Sec. Nagel refused to order it. When the Department of Commerce and Labor was split up and Mr. Wilson became Secretary of Labor, Mr. Gardner renewed his efforts in behalf of Mr. Boyle and today Sec. Wilson signed an order transferring him to Boston.

"Back of the Boyle incident is a curious story. Secy. Nagel, it seems, wanted the position at Boston for his secretary, Herbert A. Stevens. When Mr. Nagel refused to transfer Boyle, Keefe refused to recommend Stevens for a position as immigration inspector. There was a deadlock which was not broken until the Administration changed hands, when the Gardner-Keefe combination won out."

Too many relatives spoil the legacy.

MANCHESTER

Harry Davis is planning on opening a shop for sharpening lawn mowers in the rear of his house on Vine street. An electric motor will be used for the work.

Jerry, the famous fire horse, was returned to the fire department yesterday because of his dislike to living on the poor farm. He kicked and tore around until it was not safe to stand near him and so Keeper Paige returned him as unsafe for farm purposes. It is hardly known what to do with him under the circumstances.

W. R. C. ANNIVERSARY

Allen Relief Corps of Manchester celebrated its 24th anniversary last evening at the headquarters in G. A. R. hall. The members of Post 67, G. A. R., and Sons of Veterans were present as guests. Mrs. Rita Mitchell, chairman of the entertainment committee gave out the following program:

Words of welcome, Miss Mary Morgan, president; solo, "Tit for Tat," Mrs. Alice Lee; reading "Roslin's Surrender" (encore, O'Grady's Goat), Mrs. McMurphy of Beverly; solo, "Elder Lamb's Donation Party" (encore, Dear Old Ireland), Rev. A. G. Warner; Crow song and sketch, seven young ladies of the corps; reading and monologue, "Her Cuban Tea," Mrs. McMurphy; solo, "I Will Love You when the Silver Threads Shine Among the Gold," Mrs. Hattie Preston; reading, "Santa's Romance" (encore, "The Village Seamstress"), Mrs. McMurphy.

Following the entertainment remarks were made by John C. MacKin, H. C. Swett, H. T. Bingham and Enoch Crombie. Mr. Crombie said in part: "Some 24 years ago this corps was started and I with others, thought that the plan of having a corps would fall through, but through the efforts of the members, the corps has grown from 21 to 108 members, a remarkable growth. The work done by the corps is known without any explanation from me, and I, as commander of Post 67, am more than proud of our girls. It is my wish that they keep on in their work until the last one of us has gone beyond. Let it ever be said of them 'Well done, good and faithful servant.'"

Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served during the evening and the men were furnished with cigars. A general social hour brought the anniversary to a close.

Asphalt and an Accident.

Asphalt, with which so many roads are paved, was found by accident. Many years ago in Switzerland natural rock asphalt was discovered, and for more than a century it was used for the purpose of extracting the rich stores of bitumen it contained. In time it was noticed that pieces of rock which fell from the wagons and were crushed by the wheels formed a marvelously fine road surface when assisted by the heat of the sun. A proper road of asphalt rock was then made, following upon the discovery, and in 1854 an experimental roadway was laid in Paris. From that time the use of rock asphalt for the making of roads and pavements has increased and extended to many countries.

A Household Maneuver.

"And what," asked the caller after he had been shown all over Mr. Bobbs' new house, "is that pretty little article hanging over the piano?"

"Don't you know?" answered Mr. Bobbs enthusiastically. "Why, that is a handy match receiver, made by Mrs. Bobbs. I scratch a match and use it. It must not be thrown on the floor. There is the receiver. Holding the burned match carefully in my fingers, I move the piano away from the wall to the center of the room. Then I go down in the basement and get the stepladder. I place the stepladder against the wall, mount it, deposit the match in the receiver, climb down again. I then return the stepladder to the basement, come back and move the piano into its former position. There's nothing like having these things about the house. It makes neatness and discourages smoking."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

One of the Antiques.

"There," said the man who had purchased a pedigree that reached back to the "coming over" of William the Conqueror, "is a gold snuffbox that was used by one of my great-great-grandfathers."

"Very interesting," replied the gentleman who was examining the thing. "Very interesting, indeed. I had no idea that the 'made in Germany' mark had been in use as long as that."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Sad Mistake.

The wife cooked a dish of prunes, which appeared to find no favor with members of the family. The prunes "went begging" for a day or two until the husband, tired of seeing them, decided to get rid of them.

The next evening he found a big dish of prunes at his place.

"You liked those other prunes so well," said his wife, "that I thought I would cook some more."—Indianapolis News.

The Ruling Passion.

A young contractor in a Missouri town found himself after the war in dire financial straits. He owned a few pieces of property, all of which were mortgaged, the mortgage in each instance being held by an old man who lived with his one son, Brocky, in a tumbledown but that could not be rented to any one else. In the course of time the miser foreclosed, taking over all the contractor's property, which was valued in excess of the amounts loaned. The contractor began to pay rent on the house in which he lived. Three months after the foreclosure the miser lay dying. An urgent message reached the contractor, and he, supposing that the other, knowing his end to be near, wanted to make what restitution he could for the good of his soul, hurried down to the cabin. He found the old man in a rickety bed, covered with a tattered quilt and an old overcoat. The contractor bent his ear hopefully to the other's lips. The miser drew a long breath, clutched the quilt in a skinny hand and whispered:

"Pay your next month's rent to Brocky."—Kansas City Star.

HOTEL EDGECLIFF DESTROYED

WHOLE NORTH SHORE ILLUMINATED
BY BIG HOTEL FIRE

The Edgewood Hotel at Briar Neck, Gloucester, was totally destroyed by fire Monday night. It was a four-story wooden structure, owned by Maylon Watson, erected ten years ago and has been run as a summer hotel and beach house. An addition was made three years ago.

Recently carpenters have been at work making additions and repairs for the coming season. When discovered by residents on Eastern avenue at 7 o'clock Monday night the entire building was apparently in flames and as there was no hydrant nearby, nor means of extinguishing a fire, nothing could be done but to let the flames burn themselves out.

There is quite a cottage settlement at Briar Neck to the west of the Edgecliffe, while to the north is a pavilion and theatre at Long Beach and to the eastward the Long Beach settlement of 25 summer cottages. All are unprotected, there being no hydrant service. A long vacant space separated the hotel from both of these settlements.

Mr. Watson places his loss at $30,000, which is partially covered by insurance. Mrs. Chick, the hotel manager, lost furnishings valued at $5000, on which there was an insurance of $2000.

The fire was discovered and the alarm given by Mounted Police Officer Tuck at Bass Rocks.

The glare of the blaze could be seen for many miles. Telephone calls from Manchester, Ipswich and all along the North Shore indicated that many thought the fire in Magnolia.

"SHIFT OVER TO THE DEMOCRATS."

SO SAYS CONGRESSMAN A. P. GARDNER OF HIS REPUBLICAN CONFRERES

Congressman Gardner, who joined in giving a farewell dinner to Ex-Congressman "Nick" Longworth, the other night, says he finds that since the sceptre of government passed from Republican to Democratic hands most of his old friends in Washington connected with the departments are life-long Democrats.

Men whom he had regarded as loyal Republicans now say they have always been Democrats. They represent a class in Washington that shifts with every change in the political complexion of the administration.

Mr. Gardner is not taking kindly to the idea of reorganizing the Republican party of the country by the Old Guard and states that he will refuse to join hands in any movement headed by men who took to the woods when the fight to preserve what was left of the old organization last fall was being waged.

He is one of those Republicans who wants to see President Wilson make good on the ground that a failure to make good would mean hard times. He would be loath to see a panic, as all classes would suffer and those who could least afford it would be the hardest hit. Mr. Gardner is keeping his eye on Massachusetts local affairs, but at present he is unable to see how the Republicans are going to regain the state if Governor Foss runs again.

"THE GARDEN OF ALLAH."

"The Garden of Allah" will be seen for the last times in Boston at the Boston Theatre beginning Monday. No other New England city will be visited by this monster organization with one exception of Springfield, Mass., where a stay of one week will be had at the Court Square Theatre to accommodate theatregoers of Western Massachusetts. The company plays Springfield en route to Baltimore and Washington. The route for the coming season comprises Canada and the Middle West, and New England has its last opportunity to witness what is said to be the greatest dramatic spectacle ever staged in this or any other country, the coming week.

A very pleasant evening was enjoyed at the home of Mrs. Fred S. Lycett last Thursday evening when the ladies whist club held their first Gentleman's Night. There were ten tables. Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served by the ladies.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Foster of Winchester were in town on Wednesday.

Mrs. T. W. Preston of Boston was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar P. Story Tuesday. Mr. and Mrs. Preston and family will leave shortly for California where they will make their home. Mr. Preston was the owner and proprietor of the Indian Store and will be greatly missed by his patrons.

D. C. Ballou and L. T. Foster attended the Boston Auto Show on Tuesday.

Frank Dunbar had the misfortune to cut one of his fingers quite badly while at work on the casino at the beach the first of the week.

William Douglas, who is suffering from poisoning in his finger caused by a splinter, is getting along nicely.

Charles Wilkinson is recovering from his recent illness as rapidly as possible.

The Ladies' Aid society will hold an old fashioned baked bean supper and dance on Easter Monday evening. It has not, as yet, been decided whether same will be held in the Men's or Women's club house. Further arrangements will be announced in next week's issue of the North Shore Breeze.

WENHAM

Palm Sunday and Triumphal Entry will furnish the theme of the sermon at the village church Sunday morning, by the minister, Rev. F. M. Cutler. Sunday school at noon. The usual meeting of the Y.P.S.C.E. will be omitted in order to permit those who desire, to attend the union C. E. meeting at 5.30 in the First Baptist church, Salem. The feature of the 7 p. m. service in Wenham, besides a special musical program, will be a stereopticon address on China, the land studied this winter by the mission class.

At 4 p. m. Wednesday the Ladies' society will hold their regular meeting and at 6 they will serve a public supper. Following the supper there will be a social entertainment. This day is the actual date of the Livingstone centennial. But Livingstone anniversary exercises will be deferred until the following Sunday.

Church night, will be observed Thursday at 7.30 with a meeting for mission study, and by general exercises commemorative of Holy week.

"Markets and Festival Days in Europe" will be the topic of a stereopticon lecture in South Hamilton by Miss Margaret C. Bolles, the traveler, Tuesday, at 8 p. m.

Mrs. C. F. Elliott and Mrs. R. Davis recently made generous gifts of magazines to the Wenham Y.M.C.A.

Charles T. Quinby and F. M. Cutler have been appointed collectors by the Progressive party of Massachusetts. The party is now raising its 1913 campaign fund and asks each town to pay at the rate of 50c per vote. Wenham cast 51 Progressive votes last fall.

The Wenham Village Improvement society announces a course of lessons in practical cooking, to be given in the tea house, by Miss Ewart of Boston, on Tuesday afternoons in April. The committee in charge are Mrs. E. R. Anderson, Mrs. E. B. Cole, Mrs. B. H. Tracy, Mrs. Arthur Prince, Miss Gertrude S. Metcalf, Miss Carrie Merrill. The course is open to all members of the society.

BEVERLY FARMS

On April 4th, the Girls' club of the Baptist church will hold a special meeting and at that time listen to an address on "The Art of Right Living" by Miss Stern of Boston.

Miss Jane M. Watson's adult class in dancing, which completed its second course of the season last Monday, will continue to meet for several weeks.

"THE GOVERNOR'S LADY" LAST WEEK

Whatever David Belasco sets out to do — he does — and whenever his name, either individually or in association with some one else, is affixed to a play, an organization or a production, it is an absolute assurance of the merit and excellence of the offering presented; thus the playgoers become en rapport with the master producer and as a result his offering is accepted as the best that brain, energy or capital can supply.

William Elliott and David Belasco's marvellous presentation of "The Governor's Lady" now at the Hollis Street Theatre on its final week, as previously made engagements elsewhere necessitates its removal to "Green Fields and Pastures new" — is an example of what a producer can do with a play that has the elements of a dramatic possibility in addition to its literary value.

"The Governor's Lady" has been the dramatic sensation of the season, disclosing the superior bravery of womanhood at the crucial moment of great trial and privation, as well as illustrating the extent of self-sacrifice a woman will endure fighting for what she contends is right.

Kipling's famous line "The female of the species is more deadly than the male" has found a stage improvement in this play, for it reversed the theory of Kipling and reveals a story of today founded on what might be logical incidents in the life of any one; and therein lies the big success of this truly wonderful play.

When people come three and four times to witness the same performance then the true mission of the stage has been fulfilled, as it surely appeals to that indefinable something in every human breast that seeks for more, and sends the auditor home with better resolutions made for the day to come.

Boston will be the only city in New England visited by "The Governor's Lady" this season. There will be matinees on Wednesday and Saturday with the engagement ending on Saturday night, the 22nd.

BEVERLY FARMS

Mrs. S. John Connolly has the sincere sympathy of her many friends here over the loss of her sister, Mrs. John E. McElroy (Gertrude M. Hill) who died in Brookline very suddenly last Saturday. She was well known at the Farms, where she has been a frequent visitor and has a host of friends who mourn her loss.

Preston W. R. Corps was well represented at the Essex County convention held in Haverhill Wednesday.

George West Larcom, the local carpenter-contractor has purchased a Ford automobile which he is using in connection with his business.

Peter Ward moved his lunch and bakery business into the store in the Pierce block this week. Mr. Ward has had new counters and fixtures installed and the place is, indeed, a model one.

Rept. Allison G. Catherson addressed the members of O. W. Holmes council after the business meeting last Tuesday evening at which time the doors were open to the public. Rept. Catherson spoke on "The Legislature," referring particularly to the work of the committee of social welfare of which he is a member. His address was very interesting and instructive and at its close Mr. Catherson was thanked heartily for his address.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Smith of High street are rejoicing over the addition to their family circle of a girl which arrived last Friday evening.

Thos. D. Connolly, 2d, has a position with the Michigan Automobile Co., and has been one of the selling agents at the Boston Auto show this week.

The Ladies Sewing circle was entertained last evening by Mrs. Otis N. Davis at her home on Everett street.

Nicholas Lawlor and family moved into one of the McTiernan cottages, High street, this week.

Miss Anna F. Maguire of Laconia, N. H., has been visiting friends at the Farms the past week.

The auto show in Boston this week has been a strong attraction for many Beverly Farms people.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis L. Murray of Newark, N. J., have been visiting friends at the Farms the past week.

O. W. Holmes council, K. of C., expect to occupy their new quarters in the Marshall block the end of this month.

Henry L. Mason, a well known Beverly Farms summer resident and a member of the firm of Mason & Hamlin, gave a most interesting talk at the Beverly Farms school hall last Friday evening, on the construction of the modern pianoforte. A finished key board was sent down from Boston and was set on a standard to show the mechanism—also another one to show the kind of wood and the workmanship used on a model key board. In a brief way the process and time used in seasoning the wood and, in fact, the whole construction was told in a decidedly pleasing manner. Miss Bertha Holbrook of Boston, a talented musician, rendered several selections on the piano. A concert was given by the Beverly Farms band. The next in the course of entertainments will be Friday evening, April 11th. Mr. H. LaRue Brown will give an address on the Minimum Wage. Mr. Brown is a very interesting speaker and his connection with the Mass. Minimum Wage Commission will give weight and authority to his opinion. His talk may throw some light on the question of the high cost of living.

Miss Edith Bailey of Woonsocket, R. I., has been the guest of relatives and friends at the Farms the past few days.

Ernest Babkirk, who recently went into the provision business for himself and drives a butcher wagon to Manchester and Magnolia, has leased quarters on the grounds at W. F. Low's on Vine street and has a storage room fitted up and will serve customers who may call.

"THE ROUND UP" COMING TO THE BOSTON THEATRE

Back to the Boston Theatre, and for another wonderful engagement without doubt, beginning Easter Monday, March 24, comes Maclyn Arbuckle in Klaw & Erlanger's massive production of Edmund Day's vivid and stirring play of Western life, "The Round Up." Bigger and more wonderful than ever in its great scenes and its marvelous battle scene, with its great cast headed by Maclyn Arbuckle as the sheriff, and with the cowboys, Indians and bronchos it will again be a supremely sensational and popular Easter attraction for theatregoers

BEVERLY FARMS

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Wyatt of Pride's Crossing have gone to Washington, D. C., for a two weeks' stay.

There will be a public entertainment conducted by the boys of the Pastor's Hour next Friday evening at the chapel of the Baptist church. It will be something new for Beverly Farms in the entertaining line—a moving picture show. The program in part will be as follows: Dicken's Christmas Carol, musical selection, Five Wise and Five Foolish, musical selection, Eddie's Mistake, music, The Panama canal, songs. The parable of the good Samaritan. Music will be rendered by the John West orchestra. A collection will be taken at the door. The proceeds will be used toward the purchase of a stereopticon outfit.

Members of the Baptist church held a cottage service at the home of Addison Davis, Preston place, Monday evening. On Tuesday evening the Girls' club gave a surprise party at their meeting. It was unique and entertaining. On Wednesday evening the pastor delivered an address on "Peter after the death of Christ" before a large audience. An address on the same topic will also be given next Wednesday. Last evening the regular meeting of the Pastor's Hour class was held. The meeting concluded with special gymnastic exercises and drills under the direction of Mr. Davenport of the Beverly Y.M.C.A. This evening the members of the Helping Hand class are to give a magazine concert. Next Sunday evening there will be a special lenten service with addresses on "The Story of the Cross" and "Forgiveness." There will be special music by the choir and S. A. Gentlee of Beverly will also sing several songs.

George Thompson, recently appointed on the spare list of eligibles for clerkship at the Beverly Farms post-office, has in consequence resigned the position which he has had for several years as assistant at the Pride's post-office.

CONGRESSMAN A. P. GARDNER REMINDS LOCAL YOUNG MEN OF POSITIONS

The following letter from Congressman Gardner will be of interest to young men who may desire to become officers in the marine corps. He says:

I desire to call the attention of the young men in the district I represent to the fact that there are 14 vacancies in the grade of second lieutenant, United States Marine Corps. The pay of a second lieutenant is $1700 per annum, with liberal allowances for heat and light. The examination for these positions will be held on July 14th, 1913 in Washington and in such other localities as present a large number of candidates. The requirements of the examination are expected to be severe.

If any young man between the ages of 21 and 27 desire to try this examination they should apply at once to the Major General, commanding the United States Marine Corps, Washington, D. C. Blanks will at once be furnished on which to make a formal application to take this examination.

Further information can be secured at the Marine Corps Recruiting Office, 61 Hanover street, Boston, Mass., or from the undersigned.

Very truly yours,

A. P. GARDNER.

TITUS'

THE GREAT
PALATIAL STORE

SALEM, MASS.

Mute, Yet Speaking With Golden Eloquence—

TITUS' RUGS

They're made by the oldest and most modern equipped mills in the country and the wool which they use is imported. It comes from sheep that are raised on the more or less barren hills and mountains of cold eastern countries. This particular kind of wool being of greater toughness, of longer and more wavy fibre than our American product, hence when woven into rugs it gives them qualities of durability and wear that are unexcelled, while its silken texture lends itself most admirably to the process of dyeing. Before it is used, however, it is subjected to several scientific processes of washing, carding and purifying, when it is ready for the loom. In the designing of the patterns and the mixing of the colors the most expert, artistic talent is employed. The result of all this extreme care and skill is that our rugs exhibit not only the lustrous beauty and richness of color and finish of the choicest American made rugs, but many of them are also faithful reproductions in design and color of notable Oriental weaves.

Titus' Rugs Are Equally Distinguished For The Uniform Reasonableness Of Their Prices.

Our extensive large rug output secures for us, when buying, the very lowest discount price. This together with our small store expenses enables us to quote prices that are lower and give values that are greater than those obtained from smaller houses — a financial consideration of great importance to every house-keeper. Hence here, Tapestries of good quality are as low as $12.50. Brussels are from $20.00. Axminsters, high piled, from $18.00 and French Wiltons even as low as $35.00. The Sterling character of TITUS' rugs afford their users the greatest satisfaction and the longest wearing service.

With much pleasure we anticipate your presence to examine them.

Chafing Dishes and Percolators from Daniel Low's

For the last few years Chafing Dishes have been steadily increasing in popularity, until today it would almost seem as if no home were quite complete without one.

They lend themselves readily to a large variety of uses, some of which are just now beginning to be appreciated. They are invaluable for the hasty breakfast, the impromptu luncheon, the late supper and the Sunday night tea. They are particularly useful to those hostesses who must get along without servants as they may do light cooking right at the table without absenting themselves from their guests. They are always ready for the unexpected guest, making it easy to prepare a dainty meal hastily.

MISSION STYLE CHAFING DISH

This is one of our most popular Chafing Dishes. It has simple, dignified lines and is very substantially built. Capacity, 3 pints.

Price, in either copper or nickel plate, $7.50; with tray $8.75.

The copper Dish fits in particularly well in a room with mission style furniture.

We have several patterns of Coffee Percolators. They are all well made, easy to clean, and economical to operate.

The one illustrated is of graceful design and the construction is such that it is very easy to take apart to clean. It can be furnished in nickel or copper in either size at the price quoted.

2 pint size (6 cups), $8.25

3 pint size (9 cups), $9.00

We have others for $5.00 and $5.50

The prices quoted include delivery within the limits of our Retail Store delivery. Orders shipped by express at customer's expense.

We have a leaflet illustrating several styles of Chafing Dishes and Percolators which will be sent free for the asking.

As a wedding gift, a Chafing Dish or a Percolator is most acceptable.

No. 12

SOCIETY NOTES

The John R. McGinleys of Pittsburg will spend the coming summer at Manchester, and will again occupy the F. C. Stevens house on Smith's Point.

◆ ◆ ◆

The Robert Jordans have decided to change their place of abode for the summer. Instead of going to Hamilton, where they have been spending much of their time since their marriage, they will go to Beverly Cove where they have just leased through the Boardman agency the Pickman grey house on Neptune street. This was occupied last season by the W. Harry Browns of Pittsburg. The Browns, it is understood, will go abroad this season.

◆ ◆ ◆

Among the many weddings arranged for the early part of April, none will be more brilliant than that of Miss Elizabeth Sears, the elder daughter of Herbert M. Sears, of Boston and Pride's Crossing, and Bayard Warren. The marriage will be celebrated in the Arlington street church, Boston, Tuesday, April 8, and will be followed by a reception at the Sears residence nearby.

◆ ◆ ◆

Mrs. George Lee and daughter, Miss Margery Lee, are to remain at Laurel-in-the-Pines, Lakewood, until the first of April, when they will return to their Brookline home.

◆ ◆ ◆

Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Mitchell, who are at Fernandina, Fla., for the winter, expect to remain there until the end of April when they will return to their estate at Manchester.

◆ ◆ ◆

It will be of interest to many North Shore people to learn that the beautiful summer estate of the late Mrs. Levi Z. Leiter at Beverly Farms becomes the property of her son Joseph Leiter. The will was recently probated. It is expected that Mr. and Mrs. Leiter will spend more of their time than usual on the North Shore.

SOCIETY NOTES

Miss Faith Simpkins of Beverly Farms, will be a brides-maid at the marriage of Miss Dorothy Gardner Williams and Monroe Eyre Pinkard of San Francisco, at St. John's church in Washington, on Tuesday, April 15. The Misses Alys and Julia Meyer will also be of the bridal party. Harold Tweed and Quincy A. Shaw, 2d, of Beverly Farms, will be among the staff of ushers.

◆ ◆ ◆

Dr. J. Henry Lancashire came on from Detroit last week to join his youngest daughter, who is in school in New York, and accompany her on to Beverly Farms, where she is spending the Easter recess with her sister, Mrs. Lawrence White.

◆ ◆ ◆

F. Langdon Humphreys of New York and Morristown, N. J., has returned to his home after a short visit to Mr. and Mrs. James C. Barr of Beacon street, Boston. Mr. Humphreys is the son of former Dean Humphreys of West Point, and is the owner of "Llwynderry," one of the finest estates in New Jersey.

◆ ◆ ◆

Mr. and Mrs. Eben D. Jordan with Miss Dorothy Jordan, and Miss Elizabeth Wells, who is their guest, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fulton Cutting of the North Shore summer colony and their daughters, were of those sailing from New York last Saturday on the Canopia for the Mediterranean. Miss Wells is to remain with the Jordans until June, when she will join her mother, Mrs. Frank Wells, who is now abroad, and return home with her during November. The Jordans plan to spend part of the summer at their West Manchester estate.

◆ ◆ ◆

Newcomers to the North Shore this season will be the John L. Halls of Boston, who have just leased through the Boardman agency, the J. W. Merrill house, "Lodgehurst," on Smith's Point. The Halls have usually summered on the South Shore.

SOCIETY NOTES

The Larcom cottage on Hale street, Beverly Farms, has been leased for the season to Alfred S. Dabney. Last season Mr. and Mrs. Dabney occupied the Palfrey house at Pride's Crossing.

◆ ◆ ◆

Mrs. John L. Thorndike and daughter Miss Alice Thorndike, and Hon. and Mrs. George H. Lyman of the North Shore colony, were of those sailing from Boston last Saturday on the Canopic, for Naples.

◆ ◆ ◆

Saturday, April 12, has been set as the date of the marriage of Miss Josephine Dorr, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Dorr of Cambridge, to William Eustace Russell, elder son of the late Governor Russell. The wedding will take place in the Unitarian church on Marlboro street, Boston, and will be a large affair. The Dorr's summer at The Brownlands, Manchester.

◆ ◆ ◆

Former Secy. and Mrs. Meyer will continue to occupy their home on Scott circle, Washington, until toward mid-April when they will come direct to Hamilton where the wedding of their daughter will take place.

◆ ◆ ◆

Miss Jane Fairfield, daughter of Mrs. James C. Barr, who attends school in New York, is with her mother in Boston for Easter, after which she will visit her grandmother, Mrs. George Fairfield, wife of the late scientist of the U. S. Coast and Geodetic survey, in Washington.

◆ ◆ ◆

Owners of motor boats along the North Shore will be interested to learn that the bill which provided for the licensing of motor boats was killed in the Massachusetts house of representatives Wednesday.

Real Estate and Improvements ... Up and Down the North Shore ...

We are informed by Walter L. Harris of Salem and Manchester that the Land court has just completed establishing title to Little Ram Island, in Manchester harbor,—the nearest of the several islands in the harbor to the Smith's Point shore. The title has been in dispute for some years. It is now recorded in the name of Walter L. Harris. The island comprises some 2 1-2 acres and is covered with a thick growth of shrubbery and trees. It is connected with the main land at low tide.

George S. Sinnicks has bought from Fred M. Johnson, the latter's attractive new cottage on Bennett street, Manchester. The deeds are made out in the name of G. Albert Sinnicks, the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Sinnicks.

Transfers of real estate recorded this week at the probate court include the following, all in Manchester:

Mary M. Raymond of Milton, conveys to Pearl B. Arnold of Boston, land on Sea street and Old Neck road, 44.46 by 60 feet.

Mary M. Raymond of Milton, conveys to Harriet J. Bradbury of Boston, land on Old Neck road, Manchester.

Frank A. Morgan conveys to Austin C. Jones and he to Teresa P., wife of Frank A. Morgan, land on North street, 64 by 193 feet.

The Essex County Club Fire

While the destruction by fire last Friday morning of the Essex County clubhouse of Manchester will put a damper on the social life of the club the coming season, it will by no means suspend the social activities. Immediately the news of the fire reached the executive committee a special meeting was held in Boston and everything is being done and will be done to provide a headquarters for the summer. Of course it is out of the question to think of a new structure for this season. When a new clubhouse is built it will be along more substantial lines than the old building, which was originally intended for summer use only. As is well known the club has been open all winter for the last two years.

The following committee is at work: A. Lithgow Devens, chairman; T. Dennie Boardman, George F. Willett, George E. Warren and Wallace Goodrich. Some sort of a temporary quarters will be provided. Perhaps the large barn will be brought into use; maybe a large "portable" building will be provided; or it is possible that one of the numerous cottages near or adjoining the grounds could be leased for a clubhouse. At any rate something of a temporary nature will be provided.

Of course the tennis and golf plans will not be changed in the least, and the band concerts will undoubtedly be given during July and August as usual. No doubt the dinner-dances will be scheduled also.

Miss Mary McGill, the housekeeper, who was so seriously injured by jumping from the roof, is still at the Beverly hospital. It was found that she had broken bones in both ankles. Her condition is not as serious as at first supposed. The three men who escaped by jumping from the roof are alright. One of the men broke two fingers.

Hundreds of people visited the ruins Sunday—townspeople and visitors from nearby towns, as well as a large number of summer visitors, many of whom motored from Boston on purpose to see the remains of the building.

"There will be no band concert today" was conspicuously displayed amid the ruins last Sunday. Somebody had found the card among the office stationery remains and had placed it there as a joke.

DECRY CALAMITY HOWLERS

PUBLIC GETTING WORST OF RESULTS OF "KNOCKING" RAILROADS

For the information of the high and humble it may be announced that of the 7,130 common stockholders of the Boston & Maine, 7,100 have an average holding of twenty shares each. The attacks of Louis D. Brandeis on the affairs of that Company, supported by the Lawrence interests, are perfectly well understood by all concerned. But, as the Boston News Bureau points out, the feature which commands attention, now that it is a practical certainty that at the May meeting dividends on Boston & Maine stock will be discontinued—1 per cent has already been declared payable April 1—is the preponderance of ownership of the stock by persons of moderate means.

Boston & Maine has a common stock issue of $39,505,000, of which the Boston Railroad Holding Co. (New Haven) owns $21,918,900. There are just 24 other stockholders who own over 500 shares.

The number of shareholders owning five shares and less would probably give Boston & Maine the record share distribution of any corporation in the country.

James J. Phelan, of Hornblower & Weeks, the well known Boston bankers, insist that there has been too much calamity howling and that both the Boston & Maine and the New York, New Haven & Hartford have been seriously injured by the agitators who, for personal reasons, have inaugurated a campaign against the two companies.

All of the stockholders, both in the New York, New Haven & Hartford and the Boston & Maine, have been put at the mercy of Louis D. Brandeis and the people who are egging him on for no other than personal and selfish reasons. They care not a rap for the thousands of stockholders, including all sorts and conditions of New England's citizenship, if but those personal and mercenary aims can be accomplished.

Queer things, these alleged wise saws. "Know thyself," for instance. On the other hand, "familiarity breeds contempt." How do you dope that out?

Often, after a man has done his duty, it refuses to stay done.

Getting married is so easy that most bachelors are suspicious of it.

CHAPTER I.

The City Editor's Assignment.

MR. PALMER—"You will start for the south tomorrow and write a series of letters on the educational and social conditions existing in that section. Avoid the cities and beaten tracks and let your pictures be drawn from life. This will be an order on the business office for what money you may need.

Such were the orders I found one morning on my desk in the city editor's room of a well known Boston newspaper. Of the labor involved in such an assignment I was ignorant, and I saw only a pleasant trip in that part of my country in which I had never traveled. I had been employed on the paper for a comparatively short time—in fact, I had been in journalism for a period of less than two years—so that such an assignment as the one now given me was highly flattering to me, and I knew it would be equally gratifying to my father, who had watched my career with that interest which attaches solely to an only son. I had not been out of Harvard very long when I had taken the advice of an eminent literary man, a friend of my father, and entered journalism as a first stepping stone to literary distinction. The few short stories I had written, however, had been returned to me by the magazines to which I had sent them with a promptness that was calculated to dampen my ardor and otherwise to discourage me. I had been led to believe that my style was exceptionally good and that I was not without a keen sense of humor, at the same time possessing a proper appreciation of the pathetic.

I had taken a prize at the high school for an essay, and later, when my talents began to develop at the university, I was elected to fill a place on the editorial staff of one of the monthly periodicals published there. I was chagrined, therefore, when my manuscripts, written legibly on fine linen paper, tied with the best silk ribbon to be had, came back to me. I began to form a very poor opinion of our magazines. Possessing an independent fortune, I determined to publish my writings in book form at my own expense. I took my manuscripts to a publisher, who, honest man that he was, was kind enough to tell me that people did not think much of books published at the author's own expense. Determined at length to get a proper estimate of my work, I sought out an old friend of the family who had achieved fame by his pen. He reviewed my stories and in a ruthless sort of way, as it seemed to me then, told me that some of my ideas were good, but expressed clumsily. He advised me to cease all attempts at literary composition and to seek a place on a newspaper. "Writing must become a habit with you," he said, "before you can hope to express your thoughts gracefully. What you need most is ease, and if you can avoid the pitfalls of journalism you may in time succeed in your ambition." It took me just another six months to make up my mind to follow his advice, and when I did so it was with some degree of humiliation that I discovered that there was not a reporter on the paper who did not write better than I. Constant application in my new undertaking, however, and the hard work I had done at the university soon brought me my reward. I was being singled out constantly for important local assignments, and once I had been sent to Washington on a delicate mission.

I picked up again the order which lay on my desk and read it over the second time. I thought I saw the earmarks of politics in it, and, while the racial question was not mentioned, I believe that it was this problem I was to discuss. I had made a suggestion on this line some months before, but the managing editor had not taken kindly to the idea at the time. The order as I read it over seemed indefinite, I thought, and I started with it to the managing editor's room. As I presented myself before that austere little cripple—physical, but not mental, for mentally he was a giant—I was outwardly calm, but my heart was beating a tattoo inside, for there were few of us who did not fear to stand before him unless very sure of the ground on which we stood. I said, however, in a businesslike way, as if such assignments were daily occurrences to me:

"I have come to see you about this assignment, sir."

"What assignment?" he asked.

"For me to go south tomorrow," I answered.

"Oh, you are Palmer, are you?" he said, calmly looking me over through his spectacles. "I thought you were older. I have noticed your work and gave you the present assignment on account of it. Have you come to say you are not equal to it?"

I was somewhat surprised when I learned that he did not even remember me, but the fact that he had judg-

"Oh, you are Palmer, are you?"

ed me by my work was at least gratifying, so I hastened to say:

"No, sir— I feel perfectly able to do the work, but the order appears a little indefinite to me as to time."

Without looking up again, for he had resumed his proofreading, he said:

"Take your own time, but I shall say two months ought to suffice. What I want are facts, not discolored, distorted pictures."

Bull Chasing In London.

From the time of King John till 1839 Nov. 13 was known as bull running day in Stallford. A seventeenth century historian gives an interesting account of the observance.

"The butchers provide the bull and place him overnight in a stable belonging to the alderman. The next morning proclamation is made by the bellman that each one shut up his shop door and gate and none under pain of imprisonment do any violence to strangers; none to have any iron upon their bull clubs or other staves, which they pursue the bull with. Which proclamation being made and the gates all shut up, the bull is turned out of the alderman's house, and then hivie skivy, tagrag, men, women and children of all sorts and sizes, with all the dogs in the town running after him."

At the close of the chase the animal was killed and its flesh sold at a nominal rate to the burghers.—London Spectator

I. M. Marshall Gives Talk on Panama Trip, Before Brotherhood.

I. M. Marshall, editor of the Manchester Cricket, gave a very interesting talk before a large gathering of men at the meeting of the Baptist Brotherhood last Monday evening. His talk was about his trip to New Orleans and the Panama Canal a few years ago.

Mr. Marshall said in part: "My daughter and I left here on Saturday, Feb. 5, 1910, for a trip to New Orleans and Panama in company with other Eastern people. As we left New England, and made our way toward Chicago, I noticed the difference in the amount of snow that covered the ground along the Berkshires and the amount grew less as we neared Chicago. Arriving there we made our headquarters at the La Salle hotel. This hotel is 22 stories high, has 1150 rooms and could hold at one time 2500 people. It's cost to build was $7,000,000.

"Although it was Sunday, one would hardly know it, for the theatres were open for business and many other attractions were to be found. My daughter and I took a trip to the Children's hospital where Miss Sjolund is situated. She took us over the building, we covering ourselves with frocks to protect the sick children from possible infection with germs. I say this to dispel the belief that the hospital authorities are careless.

"As we left Chicago and got out a little way we saw the harvesters getting in their late crops; there was corn on every side of us. Next morning we awoke to find that the scenes of the night before had completely changed; instead of corn we saw cotton plantations. We could see here and there a tree in blossom and we could hear the songs of birds. Our first stop was at Vicksburg. The principal thing that interested me here was the National Park, the scene of many battles. The cemeteries were also interesting, for there are 16,000 Confederate soldiers buried in one cemetery. We left this city and went on to Natchez, then to Baton Rouge.

"We arrived at New Orleans on the ninth of February and stopped at the Gruenwald hotel, where we held our convention. I found the city a great commercial center, shipping coming down the Mississippi and leaving cargos to be re-shipped to all parts of the world. The population is largely French. An interesting feature of the city is the land is several feet below the level of the river. The cemeteries contain thousands of tombs, for graves are impossible, as water is found but a few feet below the surface of the ground. The streets are well laid out and are lined with beautiful palm trees.

"Sunday morning we sailed for the Gulf of Mexico, and our trip was the same as all long water trips. It is needless to say I did not eat very much during the trip. We arrived finally in the harbor of Colon. The soft breezes came out from the shore, and we were soon on land, much to the satisfaction of all. The scenes were different here than they were in the East. We looked about for a short time and were then taken in charge by Col. Goethals, chief engineer of the canal who put us aboard a special train to cross the isthmus. The railroad was 47 miles long and in its construction there were 127 people killed or died to every mile, caused by sickness, and poisoning by insects. It cost $8,000,000 to build it and has paid $75,000,000 as profits. In early days it cost $25 for car fares across, today you go across in a few hours at a cost of $2.40.

"After a few hours' ride we came over onto the other side, and put up at the Tivoli hotel, a government building. Its construction is different from ours, as the needs are different. In the afternoon we went to Culebra the headquarters of Col. Goethals who gave us the history of the work, and explained about its construction.

"The canal is certainly a wonderful piece of work. It is 47 miles long and is built through a zone owned by the United States, 10 miles wide, which was bought by the U. S. together with all of the property rights of the Old French company for $40,000,000. It will be when completed 85 feet above the level of the sea. The wages of laborers interested me very much, drillers get 30 cents an hour, common laborers 16 cents an hour, the crane men $185 a month, and the engineers $210 a month. There are 600 miles of track laid along the trenches, and the men seem to take the work to heart as though it was a personal work.

"Panama is an interesting old city. It was a thoroughly foreign scene.

The buildings are built very open because of climate, and are of cement. Their markets were interesting to me because of the articles of food, among them live lizards. All their meats are salted if dead, because of the heat. They try to sell everything alive in order to preserve it.

"Sunday at Panama is a great day. The great events of the week happen on Sunday. The grand lottery takes place on Sunday morning when the drawings draw a large crowd. The chief prize is $7000.

"Its old Spanish buildings were also very interesting, as well as the old ruins at Old Panama which are still visible. After our stop here we went back to Colon then on to Bocas del Toro, founded by the United Fruit Company. Here we took on 47,000 bunches of bananas and started on our homeward trip. We arrived in Chicago, where the party broke up, and then came on to Niagara Falls."

At the close of the talk ice cream and cake was served by the entertainment committee.

An exploded theory is apt to be heard by everybody except the theorist.

Women like to attend a social function in order that they may be able to criticise it properly.

(The Boston Post prints daily a short original story for which it offers six prizes: $10 for the first prize, $5 for second, and $2 for each of the other four. The first prize of $10 was awarded Mrs. W. C. Rust of Manchester, last week, and the story was printed in the Friday edition. We reprint the story in full.—EDITOR).

"Yes," said John Atherton, "I'll marry Maria. It was poor Jane's wish before she passed away. Of course, my daughters won't like it, but what's a man to do in his lonely old age? They're married and gone and I'm left all alone in the old home, without a soul to care for me. True I have old Jerry and he's good company, but as we sit by the fireside in the winter nights, Jerry and me, we feel kind o' lonesome, and I know Maria will say yes if I ask her—Hello, Jerry, who comes a-knocking this time o' night?"

"Good evening, John Atherton, pretty bad sort of night, kind of lonesome ain't you—thought you might like some of my homemade biscuits. I know these cheesecakes will taste mighty good and I just brought along a jar of raspberry jam—Yes, I made it myself, so I reckon it's pretty good."

"Why, Maria Hilton, it's real nice o' you to think o' me and to come across that meadow a night like this. Won't you stay and we'll have a cup o' tea together. It'll be kind o' social like."

"Well, I don't mind if I do stay and take a cup of tea with you John, for it's a bit lonesome over to the farm since the good Lord took my Jim. Tillie's a good sort of a girl and does pretty well around the house and Tim he can manage all right looking after the horse and cow, but after all it's not the kind of life to live."

"Say, Maria, the fire seems to burn brighter in that old grate tonight than it has for some time and these biscuits they do taste good, and you say you made these cheesecakes. Well, I hope I may get plenty more like 'em. I reckon you may pass me some more o' that jam—it's the best I ever tasted."

"Well, John, I'm real glad I came over tonight, seeing as how you're enjoying your supper, and everything's homemade."

"Yes, Maria, and everything does seem kind o' homelike. After all, there's nothing like a woman in the house to brighten things up."

"That's so, John Atherton, that's so. Well, I must be going now. I did enjoy that cup of tea and I'm glad I came over."

"I'll just get my hat and coat and walk home with you. Come on Jerry."

"Well, this house does seem strange and gloomy sure enough. Tillie, Tillie, girl, where are you? Come here, light this lamp and stir the fire. Put on another log of wood. Where's Tim? Tell him to see to the horse and cow and lock up the barn for the night, then come into the sitting room and read your chapter."

"Yes, marm, and please, marm, there's been a lady here to see you while you've been gone. I told her you were over to Mr. Atherton's and golly she looked black as thunder. She scared me nearly out of my wits, she did. Tim says to tell you the chores be all done, and law, marm, I hope that woman don't ever come here again."

"Hello, Lindy, is that you? Kind o' early, ain't you, this morning?"

"Yes, father, I was over to widow Hilton's last night and her girl told me she'd come calling on you."

"Yes, that's so, gal; she stayed to tea and we had a real nice social time, quite homelike."

"Well, John Atherton, you ought to be 'shamed of yourself. What do you think Mary Ann and Christina Jane will say and Kate—nice how'd you do—an old man like you asking a widow to take tea with you."

"Yes, that's so, gal, that's so, but I've a mind to ask her to stay for good and to take me for better or worse."

Bang went the door and off flew Lindy.

John Atherton had been busy all the morning and had just sat down in his old arm chair.

"Well," said he, "I reckon I've earned a rest. What do you say, Jerry, old boy?"

At this, Jerry wagged his tail and lay down at his master's feet. The old man was dozing and dreaming of days of long ago when his little children now married and gone were playing around his knee.

"Goodness, Christina Jane, how you startled me! I was just dreaming of you and your sisters."

Quatrains

(By Joseph A. Torrey.)

LIFE

Life comes from dying seeds
In a dark soil,
From blood and tragedy,
From tears and toil.

COMPENSATION

Here suffering is our lot;
In heaven we suffer not.
Our suffering in a world of sense
Will find in earth or heaven a recompense.

DISCIPLINE

God might have made a better world than this,
With less of sin and more of bliss.
It may be that the world we're in
Is but a stage of discipline.

CHARACTER

Not what you have, but what you are,
Not where you live but how you live;
Happiness is near, not far,
Joy, not what you get but give.

"Now, father, more like you were dreaming of that widow Hilton. What's this nonsense you were talking about this morning to Lindy; going to make a fool of yourself, eh? Well, we, none of us, will darken your door again if you do, that's all I can say."

"Well, I reckon that's enough, gal." And this time when the door was shut it shook the house like an earthquake.

The following day, tired and lonesome, John had again drawn his arm chair up to the fire and had fallen asleep. Softly the door was opened and his daughter Kate walked into the room.

"Dear old dad," she said, as she looked at the sleeping figure. "How glad I am his life is now to be brighter."

She leaned over him and kissed his forehead. The old man awoke.

"Hello, dad, I've heard the news and I'm glad of it. Maria will make you a good wife."

"Yes, gal, my mind was made up, you see; to change this lonesome life and I thought my Kate would stand by her old dad."

A little girl's father had a round bald spot. Kissing him at bed-time not long ago, she said: "Stoop down Popsy! I want to kiss the place where the lining shows."—Tit-bits.

It's all right to take time by the forelock, but don't tell your troubles before they happen.

In getting to the top every man must be his own elevator.

WATCH TOWER IS BEING ERECTED

Work has been started on the erection of an observation station on the summit of Moses hill by the State forestry department, being one of their system of watch towers that are being erected in zones throughout the state for the protection of forests from devastation by fire. Moses hill is in the Essex woods just over the line in the town of Essex and but a few hundred feet from the famed Agassiz boulder in Manchester. The tower will be constructed of steel, forty feet high with a glass enclosed room at the top fully equipped with a powerful field glass, charts and a telephone so that the watcher can, the moment any fire is discovered, notify the nearest fire warden in the district. These towers command a view for twenty-five miles in either direction, each observer having 400,000 acres in his care. The nearest tower to this is on Baldpate hill in Georgetown, Mass. Oscar Noyes of Newbury has been appointed watchman at the local station.

THE B. & M. STOCK

Louis D. Brandeis has stated that the drop in Boston and Maine R. R. stock has not been due to "knockers," but because the New Haven managers of the road have not "been using arithmetic" in their methods. Many persons who claim to be close to the railroad authorities assert that the knocking which the road has received from the Public Franchise League and the Chamber of Commerce of Boston, coupled with the suits by the Federal government for alleged violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, had much to do with the depreciation in value of the stock.

Whatever the cause, it is hard to perceive how such inveterate "knocking" of any quasi-public corporation is going to help the public or the road. In the past few days common stockholders have lost thousands of dollars owing to the depreciation in the value of the stock which they hold. In most cases these common stockholders can ill afford to lose the money which their stock represents and quite naturally they do not look in favor at the various causes for the drop. The public is virtually the stockholders of any railroad, and a drop such as the one of the last few days comes directly back at them.

This seems to be an age of "knocking." Instead of giving a man a chance to do what he can to build up a corporation in the interests of the public and the company, he is obliged to spend the greater part of his time defending government law suits, which in many cases have proven unnecessary. It seems sometimes as though the officials at Washington were hunting for trouble with a dark-lantern.

To be sure, our railroads are not entirely blameless. Their service may be improved, if we but give them a chance. Such organizations as the Boston Chamber of Commerce have been known to make mistakes, and have more than once broken faith with the public and their own coterie of business men whom they presumably serve. It would not seem that they are protecting their own interests in coming out flat-footed against the railroads of this section. Their interests are centered in more than one way in the corporations and by persistently "knocking" them, they are injuring themselves.

Also, the modern adage, "Get as much out of employer as you can, if you use force to do it," comes indirectly into the limelight as a reason for the depreciation in value of our railroads. The too frequent demands of the engineers for what they term a "square deal" seems to many to be one form of highway robbery. The engineers and all of the employees of the railroad are well-paid, and can apparently find but little cause for complaint. It would seem that some of the money which goes into raises in salary for certain branches of the railroad employes should find its way into the pockets of the common stockholders. The long and gradual decline in the value of the road's common securities for the past 25 years has certainly not been helped any by the adverse criticism.

HIGH SCHOOL CURRICULUMS

There is a great deal of truth in the recent statement of Dr. David Snedden, Massachusetts Commissioner of Education, that "in the upper grades and High schools of Massachusetts we neither know what we are trying to do nor where we are going." It is true that there is no intelligent reason for the presence of many of the subjects in the ordinary High school curriculum.

For many years it has been other people's say-so and not experience that has allowed certain subjects to remain in the courses. As Dr. Snedden says, "We have been taking matters in education on faith and fable." Fable has it that algebra should be taught in the High schools. Yet there is no apparent reason why algebra should be taken up by the student unless he is to become a civil engineer. History, as it is taught today, is of little real use in making good citizens of the school children.

Probably the principal reason for the average High school curriculum is the standard of lessons set as college entrance requirements. When President Eliot said that in "fitting a man for college you can best fit him for life" he was making a rather questionable statement. From the viewpoint of the college president this may seem to be correct, but there have been thousands of graduates from High schools who have been greatly hampered in their life work by the useless studies they took there. The sooner the High schools wake up to the fact that Latin, Greek, German and algebra do not constitute the best weapons in the battle of life the better it will be for the student.

PUBLICITY IN THE CABINET

President Wilson has said that he intends to give publicity to most of the business of the cabinet, but with a collection of men so identical in the interests of the policies of the Democracy it is not evident that any of the heart-to-heart purposes of the administration will reach the ears of the public. On the other hand, no matter how identical the purposes and how intimate the men may be, it is a difficult matter to maintain any degree of secrecy regarding cabinet matters, for the reason that its members are persistently questioned as to what is going on within their body.

It is no easy matter to keep a secret among eleven men, and although there will always be some secrecy in the doings of the cabinet, there promises to be more publicity in the present administration than ever before.

Although there are no "rank outsiders" in the cabinet, the individual members probably do not invite the fullest confidence in each other. If they do the situation will be a novel one. The larger cabinet assumes a situation which might be compared to a town meeting—but little can be kept from the public. And for this reason, if for no other, it is a good thing.

New York is about due for a municipal house-cleaning, and at present it looks as though the only man who would be equal to the task is Dist. Atty. Charles S. Whitman, whose work on the police graft cases has made him famous all over the world. Provided it was on an anti-Tammany ticket, Mr. Whitman would run for mayor, so he says, and everyone who is opposed to Tammany methods and graft is trying to bring about a fusion of the anti forces in an effort to elect him as the city's chief executive at the coming election. The district attorney is too busy on the police cases to go after the nomination, but if there is an honest fusion of the opposing forces of Tammany, New York may look for a thorough spring cleaning in all of its various departments.

The Pennsylvania railroad usually leads in reforms, and it has made a rule recently that should be adopted by all railroads. Hereafter when there is a wreck or a train is stopped en route to its destination, the train crew are obliged to answer correctly questions the passengers may ask as to the cause of delay. It is a sensible plan. Bulletins are to be posted at stations when trains are late, an added convenience.

The Manchester Lawn-Mower Co., is the latest business to organize in Manchester, and it is unnecessary to say the concern will fill a long-felt want, as the North Shore is a place where lawn-mowers are much used, and thus far no machine has yet been invented that doesn't need sharpening once in a while. (We say this from experience). Harry C. Davis, who was formerly with D. T. Beaton, the plumber, is proprietor of the new concern. Several new machines have been installed so that the work can be done in an up-to-date manner. The business will be conducted at 61 School St., cor. ## LOCAL CONCERN HAS INSTALLED BIG IMPROVEMENTS

The improved facilities for handling their business, recently installed at the plant of the D. B. Hodgkins' Sons, at Manchester, places this concern to the front of the numerous firms in the hay and grain business along the North Shore. The changes include first of all a spur track which now lands the cars at the door. In this connection the buildings had to be moved away from the street and nearer the railroad. And in order to handle the contents of the freight cars more speedily new machinery has been installed to lift the grain and various products to the top of the elevator. The grain falls from the car to a receptacle under the building by gravitation and then is conveyed to the elevator by small scoops on an endless chain. By another contrivance the corn is sent into one compartment, the oats in another, and so on,—there being seven compartments. These compartments, in turn, have outlets on the ground floor through which the grain passes by gravitation. The same motive which carries grain to the elevator, will, by change of belts, hoist baled hay from the cars into the loft. The Hodgkins concern, with offices at Gloucester, Rockport and Manchester, is undoubtedly the biggest concern in the grain business on the North Shore. In the period of nearly two decades during which the firm has been doing business in Manchester the patronage has increased steadily and consistently.

Manchester Woman's Club

Mrs. Rachel Noah France addressed the members of the Manchester Woman's club last Tuesday afternoon with reminiscences of her thirty years of stage life.

She said in part: "In 1808 when river steam-boats were just being put into operation my mother, then very young, had the idea that she was talented for stage work. A Mr. Ludlow noticed her talent about this time, and he placed my mother in a drama called 'Margaret, No Song, No Supper.' Soon after this she became acquainted with one of the leading men and married him, his name being Frank McCloud. They soon after moved to Mobile, Ala. At about this time there were but few stars, among the number Booth. His work was marvelous and he played with Mr. McCloud until 1844.

"At about this time I was ten years of age and thought I would like to study to be a teacher. Later in 1861 I went to Rochester, N. Y., to prepare myself for what I thought was my calling, but I did not like the work, so changed my mind, and thought I would like to go on the stage. This I did, my work at first making me very unhappy. It was simply through nervousness and the first part I played, which was, 'Desdemona' in 'Othello' I expected to fail. The night arrived and I went about my work as though I had done it many times before. I succeeded; I could not have done better. My parents were very much pleased with my work and they gave me a great deal of encouragement.

"In these days there were no florists; all the flowers we ever had were wax and they were very scarce. My second engagement was as 'Lady Ann' in 'Richard III,' at salary of $0 per week. There was always plenty of work to be done. Plans were changed often, and this made our work very hard. Most of our work was done in what is known in stage life as the 'green room.' Now, the green room is much misunderstood by those off the stage. No outsiders are ever admitted behind the scenes except on special occasions. A few of the men I remember ever coming into the green room were Charles Dickins and Henry Longfellow. We often had to study well into the night. There were no pink teas or social attractions at this time, for it required all our time in the study of our parts.

"On our night off we always went to see how others did their work. At these times the stars did not have special stage managers. These days the clever vaudeville actors get the money, draw the largest crowds, and get the greatest applause. In '63 and '64 Mr. Fuller was my manager. I received a little more money, and spent most of this upon my clothing, food and shelter. In those days our clothing was not like what is used today, neither was it given to us by the management as it sometimes is today. In our day the lights were from oil lamps and candles. Now they use electricity with wonderful effect.

"In '64 I came to Boston and played in the 'Lady of the Lake' with Agnes Booth and others. The years I spent playing in Boston were of great enjoyment. The people were warm and affectionate. At this time I was playing with Thomas Jefferson and Edwin Booth at the Boston theatre. They were the stars at that time. In those days stage life was like camp life, but now it is more like life in a palace. Things have changed; styles of playing have changed somewhat, but though the great actors have nearly disappeared, the drama will never change."

A quartet consisting of Mrs. Raymond C. Allen, Mrs. Frank G. Cheever, Mrs. F. C. Rand and Mrs. A. E. Hersey rendered the "Boatman Song" in a very pleasing manner. Tea was served, Mrs. J. A. Lodge being the hostess of the afternoon.

MRS. JOSEPHINE WIDGER

Mrs. Josephine Widger, widow of James Widger passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Jennie Dennis, Summer street, Manchester, Sunday, at the age of 64 years. She had been in poor health since the death of her husband last year, but the illness was not serious until three weeks ago when she had a sinking spell which increased until her death. She suffered from dropsy. Mrs. Widger was favorably known by many in town, and her death was somewhat of a surprise to them as her serious condition was unknown by many. She leaves a daughter, Mrs. Jennie Dennis, a grand-daughter, Lydia Dennis, a brother, Granville Crombie, two sisters, Mrs. George Andrews and Mrs. Frank Merrill and a mother, Mrs. Abbie Crombie.

ANNUAL GUEST NIGHT

HARMONY GUILD ENTERTAINS. VERY PLEASANT OCCASION

The annual "Guest Night" of Harmony Guild of Manchester was observed Monday night when the members and guests to the number of nearly two hundred filled to overflowing the little Chapel of the Congregational church where the meetings of the guild are customarily held.

An interesting program was given, consisting of readings by Miss Lacey of Providence and selections by the High school orchestra.

The president of the Guild, Mrs. Raymond C. Allen welcomed the gathering on behalf of the members. The program presented was as follows:

Selection, "Apple Blossoms" Roberts Orchestra

Reading, "The Story of the Breeze" from Maude Adams' play, "The Jesters."

Miss Lacey Selection, "Battleship Connecticut"

Fulton "Dance of the Sparrows" Richmond

Readings, (a) "Delsart-ee" (b) "Woman's Wednesday" (c) "Aux Italiens" (d) "The Ninth Waltz"

Pantomime, "The Girl and the Burglar" Miss Lacey

Selection, "Dance of the Frowsey Heads" Story

Miss Lacey's readings were well rendered. Her imitations in "Woman's Wednesday" were true to life and were especially well rendered. The pantomime was also deserving of special mention. The orchestra, which has been heard with much favor on several occasions the past winter, played well Monday night and was deserving of the applause which it received.

Following the program refreshments, consisting of chicken salad, rolls, ice cream, cake and fancy crack-ers and coffee, were served.

The chapel was attractively decorated with potted plants, ferns, palms, etc. Curtains were arranged at the windows, which gave the room a very homelike and cozy appearance.

Letters remaining unclaimed at the Manchester P. O. for the week ending March 15, 1913: Miss Ettia Brennan, Bastian Bros., Rev. A. G. Brosseau, Dr. B. T. Church, Miss Annie Gylleubaga, Chas. ## LAST WEEK OF THE "PINK LADY"

At the Colonial theatre, Boston, on Monday evening, March 24, that most delightful of musical comedies, "The Pink Lady" which has been the most-talked-of success of the past and present season in Boston, New York and London, will begin the last week of its Boston engagement.

Some musical plays are rich in musical numbers, but lack in story, while others, with a good story, lack in fetching music. "The Pink Lady" more so than any other play of its sort, is happy in its book and music. However, even without a note of music it would be a highly diverting farce.

The music is exceptionally fascinating, and such numbers as "Beautiful Lady," "The Girl by the Saskatchewan," "The Kiss Waltz," "Donny Did, Donny Didn't" and "Hide and Seek" linger long in memory.

The original New York and London cast includes — Frank Lalor, Hazel Dawn, Alice Dovey, and a score of others, with the beauty chorus of sixty.

Matinees will be given on Wednesday and Saturday.

A PROGRESSIVE NEWSPAPER

Springfield Republican

MASSACHUSETTS

HONESTLY DEVOTED TO THE SERVICE OF THE PEOPLE

Independent of Selfish Political, Personal or Financial Influences
COURAGEOUS, ENTERPRISING INTERESTING

ESTABLISHED IN 1824 BY SAMUEL BOWLES.

DAILY (morning) $8; SUNDAY $2; WEEKLY $1 a Year.

The Springfield Republican stands for political progress and social justice. It has stood for these causes consistently and strongly during the 88 years of its career. It stands also for honesty in all of the relations of life, personal, political, commercial, industrial, national and inter-national. It considers that honesty is an essential basis of real political progress and social justice. It refuses to follow popular leaders who lack this fundamental virtue, however captivating and eloquent.

The Republican has a profound faith in democratic institutions, but it recognizes clearly that the safeguard of a progressive democracy is universal education, developing an enlightened electorate, which may deal justly with the difficult problems that modern civilization presents. It looks forward, through the agency of such an electorate, to an increasing restraint of the aggrandizing activities of powerful individuals and groups, to the end that there may be a juster distribution of the fruits of labor and a fuller realization of the ideal of the commonwealth.

The Republican seeks to embody its principles in its own service to the people as a newspaper. It strives ever to deal with its public honesty in its presentation of the news of the day. It tells no tales to promote its sales. It aims to educate, to enlighten and uplift its readers; and yet to interest and entertain them by honest methods. Its editorial page is one of the strongest, keenest, broadest, in the country. It deals with all the subjects that concern humanity in the spirit of helpfulness, of healthier, happier living.

The Republican gives a news service that is real, not flashy. It commands the best agencies for its general news, often supplemented by special correspondence. It covers its home territory with remarkable thoroughness, and its liberal treatment to literature and to the arts, sciences and industries. The Sunday Republican is especially rich in delightful literary and other diverting features and departments.

THE WEEKLY REPUBLICAN

Presents in 16 broad pages the best editorial, literary and special features of the seven daily issues, with carefully edited and rewritten summaries of the important news of the week. It is an excellent home journal for intelligent people who wish to keep abreast of the best thought of the times, as well as of the news of the day, and it costs only ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

DAILY (Morning), $8 a year, $2 a quarter, 70 cents a month, 16 cents a week, 3 cents a copy.

DAILY and SUNDAY, $10 a year, $2.50 a quarter, 85 cents a month, 20 cents a week.

SUNDAY, $2 a year, 50 cents a quarter, 5 cents a copy.

WEEKLY (Thursdays), $1 a year, 25 cents a quarter, 10 cents a month, 3 cents a copy.

Specimen copies of either edition sent free on application. The Weekly Republican will be sent free for one month to anyone who wishes to try it.

All subscriptions are payable in advance. Address

Town Affairs

WITH THE MANCHESTER BOARD
OF SELECTMEN AND OTHER
TOWN OFFICIALS

The board of selectmen made no appointments at their meeting Tuesday night. The three principal appointments yet to be made are: Chief of Police, Supt. of Moth Suppression, and caretaker of Tuck's Point.

The selectmen have appointed the following as official weighers of coal: Miss Ann Coughlin, Roland Knight, Hugh Burke, Geo. L. Knight and Frank P. Knight.

The board of selectmen acted on the petition of one of the citizens to run a moving picture machine in the Town hall, at their meeting Tuesday evening. They voted against it and the petitioner was given leave to withdraw.

It looks as if something definite is now to be done toward providing a new Town hall for Manchester. A committee was appointed at the annual Town meeting and was instructed to make a report at a special meeting. Many people are wondering where a new building could be put, assuming the old location is not feasible. Among the places suggested we hear mentioned the Town Hill, bounded by Union, School and North streets; the property on the corner of School and North streets; and the property on Union street, opposite the Public Library, now occupied by the Trask and Hoyt houses. Almost everybody thinks the building ought to be kept as near the centre of the town as possible.

CARMEN MELLIS AT SALEM

What will probably prove to be a big thing in the concert line for the music-lovers of this vicinity will take place at Ames Memorial hall on the evening of April 15, when Mme. Carmen Mellis of the Boston Opera Company will appear in Salem, assisted by the Kneissel Quartet.

It is seldom that the public is privileged to enjoy the singing of a grand opera star at such close range as is afforded in the "intimate" auditorium of Ames Memorial hall. The coming of the famous singer is looked forward to as one of the musical events of the year. Mme. Schumann-Heink is the only other member of the Boston Opera Company to have appeared in Salem this winter.

Louis Hutchinson and Hollis Bell and Commander Herman Swett will represent the local camp, S. of V., at their convention in Boston next month. Business of importance will take place at the weekly meeting of the camp next Tuesday evening and all are requested to be present.

Mrs. Matilda Hanks of Summer street, has just returned home from New York where she went to take care of a sick sister, Mrs. Josephine Hart, who died Feb. 25th at the House of Rest at Inwood-on-the-Hudson, after a long illness, and who was buried near her husband in the Lutheran cemetery, New York.

Several members of a neighboring fire department were in town the first of the week and spent a short time looking over the Central fire station. They were surprised at the apparatus owned by the town, and remarked in highest praise of the cleanliness of the building. They remarked that it was the finest kept building they had ever visited.

FAMOUS BANDMASTER DEAD

HARRY E. STILES, WHOSE CRACK ORGANIZATION HAS BEEN HEARD MANY TIMES ON THE SHORE, DIED IN LYNN MONDAY

Through the death by blood poisoning of Harry E. Stiles of Lynn at his home in that city, Monday the North Shore will miss a familiar face among them, for Lieut. Stiles, with his famous Eighth Regiment band has delighted many an audience in this section.

Lieut. Stiles had a long military career, one of the honors conferred on him being the appointment of aide-de-camp on the staff of former Brig. Gen. Wm. A. Pew. The Stiles Military band, as it was first known, was organized in 1896 and the following year was made the official band of the Eighth regiment. When the Spanish-American war broke out Lieut. Stiles went to the front with the musicians.

Mr. Stiles numbered ex-President Roosevelt and Ambassador Curtis Guild, Jr., among his friends and was a leader among the musicians of the state.

THE RAMBLER

The difference in the weather in 1912 and 1913 was never so forcibly noticed as that of Evacuation Day, March 17. Last year it was so warm as to make any superfluous wearing apparel cumbersome, while this year in Boston the mercury was flirting with the high figures on the thermometer and the Elevated had all their open cars in operation. The cold weather of March 17 this year brought ice instead of warm breezes, although the clear skies and sunshine made it admirable for the Evacuation Day celebration in South Boston.

There is hardly a new idea or improvement or time and labor saving scheme sprung on the market that some "cutie" of a joker does not get busy with a riddle or conundrum that can be associated with it. Now the much talked of Parcel Post is having a joke sprung on it which I must admit is a clever one.

You just simply say to an unsuspecting one, "Well, I understand that you cannot send any Parcel Post packages to Washington." Then if you listen intently you will hear the come back, "And why not?" Then you will feel that you have earned the privilege to spring his reply: "Why didn't you know that he has been dead for many years?"

Someone had told her that in Massachusetts lengthy hatpins must be tipped at the point with corks. She was on a train coming from New York. As the train approached the South Station she donned her pre-Easter hat, inserting three long hatpins. Then she reached into a paper bag, drew forth three gum drops, jabbed them on the pin points and departed smilingly. — Exchange.

Some of the county papers have begun their regular springtime comment on the late appearance of the robin. While it is true that what might be termed the spring migration from the southern parts seems to have been somewhat delayed, yet as a matter of fact there are and have been all winter a great many robins hereabouts. Some years writers will announce with great gusto that "robins were seen in town today." There is nothing surprising about that, when as a matter of fact, whole flocks of them may often be found all winter long in the deeper woods around almost every city or town. Some of the local bird-observers have already checked up the arrival of the bluebird, blackbird, bronze grackle, meadow lark, song sparrow and while some were first seen several days ahead of last year, the average time of arrival is remarkably near the same date year after year.

COMING TO THE BOSTON THEATRE

MACLYN ARBUCKLE

IN

"THE ROUND-UP"

SPECIAL PRICES

The attraction at the Boston Theatre beginning Easter Monday, March 24, will be the return of Maclyn Arbuckle in Klaw & Erlanger's massive production, "The Round-Up." The theatrical annals of Boston do not record such a towering success as "The Round-Up." It is the Great American Play of the hour. Every character and scene in the piece breathes the life of the great Southwest. The enthusiastic interest displayed by every audience is the most flattering endorsement this really great production can receive. The battle scene in the third act is a stupendous stage effect, the like of which has never been seen before. The appearance of twenty mounted Indians riding along a ledge of rock far above the stage level is a thrill indeed, but it is far surpassed in the great incident at the end of the third act, when "Slim" Hoover, the sheriff, and a troop of cavalymen are shown in an actual hand-to-hand fight with a band of Apache Indian marauders escaped from their reservation. There have been great thrills presented on the Boston stage in years past, but nothing that touches this in point of realism has ever been seen in any theatre in the world. In the last act a group of cowboys are shown riding bucking broncos. This, too, is a novelty never before seen in what is termed an indoor attraction.

The magnitude of this production is such that it can only be played in a few cities and in the largest theatres. Its performances at the Boston are the only opportunities those living within a reasonable journey of Boston will have of seeing this tremendous dramatic sensation. So great is the demand for seats from those living at a distance from Boston that a special bureau has been established for the expeditious handling of mail orders, which when sent with cash or money order and accompanied by addressed, stamped envelope, receive immediate attention. Regular matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

Special Prices will prevail during "The Round-Up" engagement—25c, 50c, 75c and $1.00. No seat over $1.00. Seat Sale Tuesday, March 18; Mail Orders Now.

WILL SUPPORT BILL

H. C. LODGE AWAITS ACTION ON PENSION MEASURE

There has been considerable interest locally in the fate of the bill to pension the widows of Spanish war veterans. The following letter, written by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge to Arthur F. Salmon of Lowell under date of March 13, explains the situation.

My Dear Sir—I have received your letter of the ninth. The bill granting pensions to widows of Spanish war veterans was favorably reported by the senate committee but, on account of the many other matters pending, no action was taken upon it by the senate. It is not likely that any legislation of that kind will be taken up at the special session, but I shall certainly consider it with care if it comes before us at any time.

Very truly yours,

H. C. LODGE.

ANNIVERSARY WEEK AT B. K. KEITH'S THEATRE.

Exactly nineteen years ago next Monday, March 24th, the doors of B. F. Keith's beautiful theatre were thrown open to the public for the first time. For the week beginning with the anniversary of this epoch-making event in the history of American vaudeville, Mr. Keith has arranged a stupendous all-star bill, one that is thoroughly typical of the tremendous strides made in vaudeville in the past two decades. Henry Woodruff, the popular legitimate actor, and former star of "Brown of Harvard," will make his vaudeville debut in a one-act comedy playlet by John Stokes, entitled, "A Regular Business Man." This is a merry comedy dealing with the mishaps that befall a young millionaire who decides to break into business via his father's office, "just like a regular business man." The youngster succeeds in his purpose. He not only becomes a regular business man but wins the heart and hand of a pretty stenographer in his father's office. The novelty of the week will be Travalla Brothers and their wonderful Diving Seal, "Winks," who performs most startling feats beneath the water in a mammoth glass tank. W. C. Fields, the silent humorist, just returned from Europe, will be another big feature, and Dolly Connolly and Percy Wenrich, the song writer, have a series of new popular song hits. James Leonard and Co. will present "When Ham Lets Her," an amusing travesty on Shakespeare's immortal tragedy.

PROBABLY RIGHT

School children know a great deal more than they used to do. In fact, some of them, in their own opinions, at least, are quite capable of tutoring their tutors.

"Those kiddies I teach are as knowing as an encyclopedia," said a teacher a week or two ago.

"In what way?" asked his friend.

"Well," replied the scholastic person, the other day I set a problem in arithmetic—'A rich man dies and leaves a million pounds. One-fifth is to go to his wife, one-fifth to his son, one-eighth to his brother, and the rest to the hospitals. What does each get?'

"Yes?" queried the friend, not very interested.

"Back came the reply from the smallest boy in the class: 'A lawyer, sir.'"

Enough for One Day. — "O mother," cried a youngster who had been visiting an elder brother in school, "I learned lots to-day." "What was one thing you learned?" asked the parent. "I learned in the 'rithmetic class," was the reply, "that the square of the base and perpendicular of a right-handed triangle is equal to the sum of the hippopotamus." — Chicago Tribune.

DANIEL W. PRESTON

Daniel W. Preston, aged 69, a well known resident of East Wenham, passed away Tuesday morning. His wife discovered the body in the barn, where Mr. Preston had presumably gone to look after his livestock.

Although Mr. Preston lived just over the line in East Wenham, he has always been regarded as a resident of the Farms, his interests being centered here. He was a farmer by occupation and was a Civil war veteran and member of Preston Post, 188, G. A. R. He was also a benefit member of John West colony, Pilgrim Fathers, and had held town offices in Wenham.

Besides his widow, Mr. Preston is survived by four daughters and three sons. He has been in ill health for some time and worry over a land case is believed to have hastened the end.

A funeral service was held at the Farms Baptist Church yesterday afternoon attended by a large gathering of relatives and members of Post 188, G. A. R. Interment was made at the Beverly Farms cemetery.

Arthur Standley has been confined to the house this week with a severe cold.

Miss Alice Crosby of Bangor has been visiting friends at the Farms this week.

John West colony, Pilgrim Fathers, will hold their regular business meeting in Marshall's hall this evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Manley of Stamford, Conn., have been visitors at the Farms the past week.

Ward's lunch and restaurant is proving to be a very popular place. Extra help has been engaged for the busy hours.

Mrs. Lee and Mrs. Marshall, who have spent the winter in California are not expected to return home until about the first of May.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of St. John's Episcopal church was entertained last evening at the home of Mrs. Mary Bartlett, Central square.

Mrs. Mary A. Larcom spent the past week at East Wenham visiting her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Larcom.

Miss Jane M. Watson plans to commence a dancing class for young people of the high school age, next Wednesday and to continue for nine evenings.

Thomas D. Connolly, 2nd, has leased the vacant stable on Oak street, formerly occupied by J. J. Nugent, and will open a public garage there. He has taken the agency of the "Mighty Michigan" car and will have one or more on hand to show and to demonstrate. Besides giving those who desire an excellent place to store their cars, he will carry a line of tires and accessories.

John Larcom Ober, son of building inspector John A. Ober of Beverly Farms, has been chosen a major in the University of Maine battalion, an honor which came in competition against some of the best military tacticians at the Orono school. Young Ober graduated from Beverly high with the class of 1908 and took a post graduate course the following year. From his entry at Orono he has been interested in military affairs, served as private and sergeant and then was successively made lieutenant and captain, his latest promotion coming after an examination in which four captains sought the honor. Ober has been prominent in school affairs, is secretary of the branch of electrical engineers at the university and has been prominent in the college fraternities. Ober graduates this year. — Beverly Times

Alma Parrins of Somersworth, N. H., has been visiting friends here the past week.

Mrs. Catherine Wyatt and son, Harry Wyatt now of Natick, were in town Wednesday.

Walter P. Brewer, proprietor of Brewer's market, will open his place of business about April 1st. This will be Mr. Brewer's 28th year on the North Shore.

The members of the Hook and Ladder Co. of the local Fire Dept. will take the annual "night off" on Saturday evening, March 29th. The party, which will include invited guests and friends will go to Boston for a banquet and then attend the theatre.

Letters remaining unclaimed at the Beverly Farms postoffice for week ending March 20, 1913:— Stephen Foley, Jack McMahon, Patrick McMahon, Mrs. Antemas B. Woods-worth.—William R. Brooks, postmaster.

A whist party and dance under the management of O. W. Holmes Council K. of C., will be given in Marshall's hall Thursday evening, March 27th. The order plans to hold several similar affairs, the proceeds from which will be used in furnishing the new quarters.

Improvements are being made at the Beverly Farms station. Painters are renovating the interior and a new maple floor is being laid.

The public entertainment under the auspices of the Pastor's Hour for Boys has been postponed from tonight to Friday, March 28. It will be given at that time in the chapel of the Baptist church, the Edison Kinetoscope furnishing the entire program.

Miss Barbara Daniels has returned from an extended visit with friends at Bellows Fall, Vt.

At the meeting of the City Council last Monday evening the mayor nominated Prince Ober chief of the Beverly Fire Dept. to succeed Robert H. Grant, the present incumbent. John J. Whittenhagen and John M. Publicover were renominated first and second asst. engineers. The name of Dr. John J. Riordan was suggested as an added member of the city veterinaries. The appointment of M. Jerome Crowley to fill a vacancy on the board of health is of interest to Beverly Farms people.

A base ball team representing the Beverly Farms grammar school has been organized. Thos. McDonnell is manager and Miles Walsh captain.

The assembly and exhibition, "Alice in Wonderland" by the pupils of Miss Jane M. Watson will be given in Town hall, Manchester, Friday night, April 4. The exhibition will be from 8 to 10, with dancing following until midnight.

The flag on the G. A. R. hall has been at half mast in respect to Daniel W. Preston, member of the post. For several years past the Preston post has been running with 19 members, the loss of comrade Preston being the first break in the ranks for many years.

A hearing will be given by the County Commissioners at Beverly City hall Tuesday morning, March 25, at 10 o'clock on the petition for the widening of Hart street and Grapevine road at Preston place.

Miss Eleanor Connolly, a student at Hooksett, N. H., is home for a two weeks' vacation.

Forester Pierce of Beverly Farms, was elected captain of the Boston College High school football team, for the coming season at the election Wednesday.

VETERANS PLAN TO VISIT GETTYSBURG

The proposed exodus of Grand Army veterans of the battle of Gettysburg on the 50th anniversary of that great fight has assumed such proportions that the Pennsylvania state authorities in charge of the event have felt called upon to send some discouraging statements regarding the project.

Originally, the cry was that everybody that could come was to come and to be welcome and to be entertained at the expense of the state of Pennsylvania. There has been such a generous response to this invitation that the "Keystone" state has felt obliged to amend matters somewhat and it is now proposed that the visitors, so far as state entertainment is concerned, will be limited to the veterans of the military organizations that took part in that famous fight.

The next thing in the program as planned at present is a special message to the Mass. legislature, recommending that a definite sum be appropriated for the purpose of allowing these veterans to attend the celebration. Some time ago, 1560 veterans of the fight had enrolled their names as wishing to attend, since which time the additions have been very slow, and it is estimated by the commissioners that there have been more or less of these veterans who have answered the last roll call since their names were sent in last summer and fall, so that in round numbers, the figures of 1500 have not been increased very materially.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE

For the final week at the Boston Opera House, beginning next Monday, March 24, Director Henry Russell has prepared one of the most attractive repertoires of the season. Not only will the most successful of the novelties be repeated for the last time, but also will come a bevy of operatic stars of the first magnitude, —artists who cannot fail to lend brilliancy and eclat to the concluding week of the season of 1912-13.

On Monday Flotow's "Martha" will be given its first subscription performance and for the occasion the entire seating capacity of the balconies has been taken by different local lodges of the Knights of Columbus. Therefore the only seats available to the general public will be those unsubscribed for on the orchestra floor. As announced last week, the opera will be sung in English with Alice Nielsen as Lady Harriet. "Martha" will be repeated at the Saturday matinee, with precisely the same cast.

On Wednesday evening Mme. Lillian Nordica, always a favorite with Boston audiences will make her sole appearance for the season as Isolde, in Wagner's immortal music drama "Tristan und Isolde."

Offenbach's "Tales of Hoffman," which served to so brilliantly open the season, will be sung again on Friday evening with an all-star cast.

On Saturday night the season will be brought to a triumphant finale, when "The Jewels of the Madonna" will be sung. Although the cast will be exactly that which has appeared at subscription performances, popular prices will prevail all over the house. This tuneful, colorful music drama has made the name of Wolf-Ferrari a household word in Boston this spring and it holds the records for the season for receipts as well as for number of performances, the coming one being the seventh. Mr. Zenatello, Mme. Melis, Mme. Gay, Mme. Alciatore and Mr. Blanchart will positively appear at this closing performance.

Pat, who was left-handed, was being sworn in as a witness in the West Side Court of Denver, Col. "Hold up your right hand," said the judge. Up went Pat's left hand. "Hold up your right hand," commanded the judge, sternly. "Sure and I am, yer honor," declared Pat. "Me right hand's on me left-hand side." — Woman's Home Companion.

The man who flatters himself that he leaves little to be desired should remember that a burglar does the same thing.

"MADAME X" AT SALEM

This is the fifth week of the permanent engagement of the Loneragan players at the Empire theatre, Salem, and a most successful engagement it has been. This is as it should be, as Mr. Loneragan has a very capable company and gives productions similar to the high-priced companies, of New York successes, at moderate prices. The play for this week is "Madame X," by Alexandre Bisson, a noted French author, and was for several seasons given in the leading cities for long runs by the Henry W. Savage companies.

The sale of seats for this week is most encouraging to the management. Several large theatre parties have already secured blocks of seats and there is a brisk demand among the regulars that has helped greatly to clean the Empire theatre ticket racks for every afternoon and evening during the week. As long as Mr. Loneragan holds his company to their present speed there will be no lack of attendance at the Empire. Theatre-goers like good plays well acted and are willing to pay for them when the opportunity is offered.

NORTH SHORE BREEZE

Vol. XI

Manchester, Mass., Friday, March 28, 1913

No. 13

SOCIETY NOTES

It will be a welcome item of news to learn that the Payne Whitneys of New York are to return to the North Shore again this season. Two years ago they had the Charles Head house, so-called, at Manchester, on the extreme northerly end of Dana's Beach. Last year they went abroad. This year they will again occupy the Head house.

♦ ♦ ♦

Mrs. John T. Willetts and family, of New York, will return to the North Shore again this season. Last year they had the R. H. Dana house at Manchester. This year they will have Miss Payson's cottage at Manchester Cove. Mr. Willetts died during the winter.

♦ ♦ ♦

An interesting engagement of the week was that announced Tuesday of Dr. Mortimer Phillips Mason of Boston and Miss Gertrud Helene Natorp of Germany. The marriage will take place the coming summer in Germany. Dr. Mason is one of the sons of the late Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer B. Mason, who had a beautiful summer estate at Manchester.

♦ ♦ ♦

Mrs. H. L. Mason of Boston and Beverly Farms, arranged the program for the March meeting in the music and lecture course at the Beverly Farms school house. Mr. Mason delivered his lecture on the construction of the modern pianoforte, and Miss Beatrice Holbrook, a pupil of Gebhard played with rare expression and skill an acceptable program of music for the pianoforte.

♦ ♦ ♦

Another family to return to the North Shore this season will be the Hitts of Washington. Two seasons ago Mrs. Hitt, sr., had the R. C. Hooper house at West Manchester. This season her son R. S. Reynolds Hitt, who has been a minister to one of the South American countries, has leased the Wilkins house, "Pump Cottage," so-called, at Beverly Farms.

SOCIETY NOTES

Mrs. Daniel Ahl and Mr. and Mrs. Leonard D. Ahl, who have had a cottage at Palm Beach during the winter, have returned to the North Shore and are again at their cottage at Hamilton.

♦ ♦ ♦

Tuesday, April 15, has been set as the date of the marriage of Miss Helen Louise Fitch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Fitch, and Julian Fairchild. The marriage will take place at the Fitch home, 246 Beacon street, Boston.

♦ ♦ ♦

Mrs. Chester Guild, Misses Mary C. and Caroline Guild, who spend their summers at The Oceanside, Magnolia, were of the Bostonians sailing Thursday from New York on the Grosser Kurfuerst, for Havana, Jamaica and the Panama canal zone.

♦ ♦ ♦

No definite plans have yet been formulated for providing a headquarters for the Essex County club, whose clubhouse at Manchester was destroyed by fire two weeks ago today. The committee, however, are at work and as soon as the insurance is adjusted they will go ahead.

♦ ♦ ♦

Bayard Warren and his bride-to-be, Miss Lilly Sears, are to have a cottage on the Shore for the summer, near Miss Sears' home at Pride's Crossing, as Mr. Warren has leased the Palfrey house, owned by Mrs. Preble Motley, and occupied last season by Alfred Dabney.

♦ ♦ ♦

More or less interest locally was taken in the marriage Wednesday at Colorado Springs, Col., of Miss Margaret Sturgis to John Wallace Suter, Jr. The bride is the daughter of Prof. and Mrs. Wm. C. Sturgis, the former a son of Mrs. Russell Sturgis of Boston and Manchester. She came East in the winter of 1911 to make her debut, and spend the following summer here, being at Manchester with her grandmother much of the time.

SOCIETY NOTES

Congratulations are being showered upon Mr. and Mrs. William Stuart Spaulding of "Sunset Rock," Pride's Crossing, upon the birth of a daughter at their Boston home, 99 Beacon street.

♦ ♦ ♦

Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Bemis of 128 Beacon street, Boston, are to spend the next three months abroad. They will return the last of June and will spend the summer and autumn at their beautiful estate at Beverly Farms as usual.

♦ ♦ ♦

Washington society is looking forward to the breakfast to be given Saturday, April 5, in honor of Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Marshall and Mrs. Clark, the wives of the President, Vice-President and Speaker of the House, respectively, and to the wives of the cabinet officers. The function is arranged to give the Washington official and unofficial circles an opportunity to meet the new "ladies in court." The guest list has been limited to 350 persons. Mrs. John Hays Hammond of the Freshwater Cove colony is one of the committee.

♦ ♦ ♦

Mrs. Clarence Moore and her mother, Mrs. E. C. Swift were over to Pride's Crossing the first of the week to look over the extensive alterations and improvements being made at their summer home, "Swiftmore."

♦ ♦ ♦

Miss Elizabeth P. Lee of Brookline, was a guest of Mrs. H. P. McKean at Pride's over the last week-end. Miss Marie Lee was one of a party entertained by Miss Elizabeth Bigelow at the Bigelow country estate at Fitzwilliam, N. H., over the week-end.

♦ ♦ ♦

Geo. M. Morgan's fancy dress ball at the Brookline Country club Thursday evening was one of the social events of the week in Boston and Brookline. The party was given for Miss Dorothy Morgan, one of the season's debutantes.

Real Estate and Improvements ... Up and Down the North Shore ...

On Tuesday, papers were passed whereby Henry D. Stillman transfers to Henry P. McKean, Jr., the Dodge farms (so-called), at East Wenham. The estate is one of the most desirable in that section and adds another to those recently purchased in that vicinity by the summer residents for homes. It consists of a fine farm house, a large barn and other buildings with more than 50 acres of land, mostly tillage. For neighbors the new owner will have the F. H. Princes, Wm. Gordon Means and Quincy A. Shaw, 2nd.

It is reported that the Building Trades council, representative of all the unions engaged in the building trades, has voted to put the White job, so-called, at Manchester, on the fair list. The announcement will be made shortly.

OTIS SKINNER IN "KISMET."

Edward Knoblauch's Oriental drama, "Kismet," with Otis Skinner in the role of Hajj the Beggar, and presented by Klaw & Erlanger and Harrison Grey Fiske, is now the attraction at the Hollis Street Theatre, Boston. Owing to the length of the play and the magnitude of the production the curtain will rise at 7.45 o'clock in the evenings and at 1.45 o'clock in the afternoons.

The drama, described as "An Arabian Night," is not, however, a dramatization of any one of Scheherazade's remarkable stories. Rather it is a paraphrase of them all. The plot, the incidents, and the characters, are original with Mr. Knoblauch, yet, so thoroughly did he saturate himself with the wondrous tales that their flavor permeates the play from beginning to end. The intrigue; the humor; the lightning-quick changes of fortune; the splendors and barbarities; the pomp and pageantry; the craft, cunning and wit of Oriental life as revealed in "The Arabian Nights" are all present in "Kismet," and are woven together in a gorgeous dramatic tapestry.

In the maelstrom of incidents that make up the plot of the play, the central figure is Hajj the Beggar, a rascal of much wit and resource who passes his life asking alms at the door of the Carpenters in the ancient city of Baghdad. In his impersonation of the character Mr. Skinner has attained the highest point in his splendid progress — a progression that has been marked by many successes.

MACLYN ARBUCKLE IN "THE ROUND UP" AT THE BOSTON THEATRE

Maclyn Arbuckle in Klaw and Erlanger's noted production of the most thrilling and massively mounted of dramas, "The Round-Up," has created a memorable sensation at the Boston Theatre. From the rush of orders for seats it will doubtlessly duplicate its former popular triumph.

As those who have gone for fresh scenes and adventures to a life in the far West, have been fascinated by the outdoor life of perpetual and hazardous excitement amid wild surroundings, so all Boston was held almost spellbound with a strange fascination at the thrilling scenes of Western life brought to their door, so to speak, in the graphic pictures presented in "The Round-Up." It is the vivid reproduction of scenes in which Indians, cowboys, ranchmen, cavalymen, venturesome Western men and women and dozens of bronchos are concerned, which so many have read about but which so few have actually seen, that have made "The Round-Up" so absorbingly interesting and an object of wonderment in the marvellous presentation of the desert plains and canyons and almost terrifying realism of its famous battle scene.

The dramatic incident of twenty mounted Indians riding along on a cliff in the third act and the marvelously realistic battle scene add an element of realism to the play which has rarely been equalled in the history of the American stage.

Regular matinees Wednesday and Saturday. Special prices will prevail during "The Round-Up" engagement, —25c, 50c, 75c and $1.00. No seat over $1.00.

BEHIND TIME

"What is the matter with this railway?" asked one irate passenger. "This train is three or four hours overdue."

"Think of me," said the stockholder, "and have patience. Its dividends are three or four years overdue."

There's a good streak in every man, but in many of them the assay is so low that it doesn't pay for the cost of mining.

A colored philosopher is reported to have said, "Life, my breddren, am mos'ly made up of prayin' for rain, and then wishin' it would cl'ar off." —Presbyterian.

NATURALLY SO

"All the parts in this play are fat parts."

"They have to be when the play itself is laid in Greece."

Love is the greatest thing in the world, provided the girl is pretty and the old man has money.

New Books

Recently Added to Manchester Public Library.

For many years "Hoyle" has been considered the best authority on indoor games. Among the new books will be found a copy of "Hoyle, An Encyclopedia of Indoor Games" by R. F. Foster, author of "Foster's Whist Manual" and other books on indoor games.

Edmund Hoyle was the inventor of whist. He was an Englishman and lived in London. He was born in 1672. In 1742 he published "A Short Treatise on Whist" for which he is said to have received one thousand pounds. The work was very popular and reached its thirteenth edition in a few years.

A number of enquiries have been made at the library for a cook-book. To supply this demand for a source of information on the culinary art, there has been added to the library "A New Book of Cooking" by Fannie McRitt Farmer of Mrs. Farmer's School of Cooking and author of "The Boston Cooking School Book." The book contains 860 receipts and 225 illustrations. We trust that the interest in good cooking among the patrons of the library may increase for good food, well cooked, is a great aid to good health and adds much to the enjoyment of life.

If you want to get a rational and concise statement of the American Civil War you should read "Lectures on the American Civil War Delivered at Oxford" by James Ford Rhodes the great American historian.

Woods Hutchinson, M. D., — probably the best writer on popular medicine today—has just brought out a book, "Common Diseases." There is much in this volume that is helpful and the humorous style of the author makes its reading a delight. Dyspepsia, catarrh, baldness, worry, sea-sickness, deafness and old age are some of the subjects treated.

"Moths of the Limberlost"—by Gene Stratton Porter, author of "A Girl of the Limberlost," "Freckles" and "The Harvester"—is a beautifully illustrated treatise on moths. A number of people have asked for this book at the library with the idea that it was a sequel to one of her popular novels.

She gives us—in her entertaining way—her experiences with moths. This is a book that will appeal to both old and young alike.

"The Diary of a Free Kindergarten" by Lilien Hardy, is the story of a kindergarten in Edinboro, Scotland. It has an introduction by Kate Douglass Wiggin. All teachers of children will enjoy reading it. The author gives a very attractive picture of the little Scotch lads and lassies who were under her care. "Sunshine Sketches of a Small Town" is a collection of short stories with an unusual preface which by the way, is one of the best things in the book. These stories were written by Stephen Leacock, Professor of Economics and Political Science at McGill University, Montreal, Canada.

The stories are well told, and give a good, though, exaggerated idea of some small towns across the border.

"The Seven Keys of Baldpate" is a novel by Earl Derr Biggers. It is a description of the experiences of a company of men and women at an inn on Baldpate mountain. This story is light and airy but will help you to forget dull care for an hour or so.

The younger children will be pleased with "Folk Tales of East and West." Of the twelve stories in the book with the exception of the two tales from Chaucer, none have ever before been put into a form that would interest children. The collection is an unusually good one. "Motor Boating for Boys" is a very practical hand-book on motor-boating by Charles G. Davis of the editorial staff of "Motor Boat." "The Gasoline—Engine," "How the Engine Works," "Installing the Engine," "Running the Engine" and "Sign-boards and Lamp-posts of the Water," are the headings of some chapters. "More Little Beasts of the Field" by William Everett Cram gives much information about the wood chuck, chipmunk, rats and mice and many others of the well known small animals. The children will enjoy reading it.

"Two and Four Footed Friends" are stories about the horse, dog, cat and other animals, written for children. They should inculcate the spirit of kindness in the treatment of the creatures that cannot speak for themselves.

In "Best Stories to Tell Children" by Sarah Cone Bryant there is brought together a number of unusually good tales. They are put in such a form that the little ones may read them or some older person may entertain the children by reading them. I feel safe in stating that the reader will always have an attentive audience. Lovers of nature always welcome a new book from the pen of Charles G. D. Roberts. "The Feet of the Furtive" consists of some sixteen animal stories written in this author's inimitable manner.

"The Keepers of the Nest" is a beautiful story of how two swan protected their young from the lynx and other predatory creatures. "A Digger of Tubes" is the record of the adventures of sprightly little chipmunk. A number of others might be mentioned but this is not necessary for if you get the book you will read them all.

Everett T. Tomlinson, author of "Mad Anthony Scout," "Marching against the 'Iroquois'" has another book for boys, "The Young Minute-Man of 1812." He tells much about the war of that date and narrates it in such a way that he appeals to better nature of his young readers. "Miss Billy" and "Miss Billy's Decision" have been much in demand at the library. No doubt "Pollyanna" by the same author, Miss Eleanor Porter will be enthusiastically received by the girls. "Pollyanna" was an orphan girl eleven years of age when she was adopted by an elderly maiden lady. Her experiences after her adoption is the story of "Pollyanna."

All girls will welcome another "Patty" story by Carolyn Wells. "Patty's Butterfly Days" is an attractive novel for girls and will enhance her reputation as a writer of fiction for youthful maidens.

"The Children in the Shadow" — by Ernest K. Coulter, formerly Clerk of the Children's Court, New York—should be widely read. The author tells much about the poor children of a great city. The book has an introduction by Jacob A. Riis.

Jeffery Farnol — author of "The Broad Highway"—has brought out another novel, "The Amateur Gentleman." The period of the story is the early nineteenth century. The scene is England. The hero, Barnabas Barty, was born and brought up in the country. He fell heir to a fortune and goes to London to "become a gentleman." The critics consider it a better work of fiction than "The Broad Highway."

"Once Upon a Time Tales" by Mary Stewart, are real fairy tales and will give much pleasure to any child who may read them. Henry Van Dyke has contributed an introduction to this volume called "The Way to Once Upon a Time." A fine edition of Charles Kingsley's "Water Babies"—the reading of which has given so much pleasure to so many children — has just been added to the library. It has six colored plates and seventy half-tone illustrations.

"Nogi, A Man Against the Background of a Great War" by Stanley Washburn, is a small volume that will be read with a great deal of interest. It is a short biography of General Baron Nogi, the great Japanese soldier who took his own life last September shortly after the death of his Imperial Master, the Emperor of Japan. The author met Nogi both at Port Arthur and on the field in Mongolia. His character was rather an unusual combination of the old and the new. "A Downland Corner" is a volume of short stories by Victor L. Whitechurch, author of "The Canon in Residence," "Concerning Himself" and other novels. These stories are studies of the people in a small village on the border of the English downs "where simple nature reigns." Admirers of President Wilson will no doubt enjoy "The New Freedom" which is a concise statement of his political faith. The ideals set forth in this work are high and noble but should be capable of realization.

Lovers of the heroic will welcome "True Tales of Arctic Heroism in the New World" by A. W. Greely, Major-General U. S. A. The author in his preface says, "The 'True Tales' are neither figments of the fancy nor embellished exaggerations of ordinary occurrences. They are exact accounts of unusual episodes of Arctic service, drawn from official relations and other absolutely accurate sources."

"Washington and Lincoln, Leaders of the Nation in the Constitutional Eras of American History" by Robert W. McLaughlin, is a book for the thoughtful reader. This is a comparative study of the two men. The author claims that the two are related. He finds his proof of this relation "not in similar traits of character, but in the work they did in governmental action." Mrs. F. M. Whitehouse has kindly given to the library three important works — 1. "South America Observations and Impressions," by James Bryce, author of "The American Commonwealth." The book contains the 'observations and impressions' of a very shrewd political observer. 2. "Turkey and Its People," by Sir Edmund Pears, an enlightening study of this peculiar people. 3. "The Balkan Crisis" by Grant and Gibbs, gives much information about the present war within a small compass.

"Through South America," by Harry W. Van Dyke, with an introduction by the Hon. John Barrett, is a very fascinating travel story of that vast continent—a good bibliography will be found at the end of the volume. "With the Victorious Bulgarians," by Lieut. Hermenegild Wagner is an up to date description of the Balkan war from the Bulgarian viewpoint. The work has over fifty illustrations and six maps. "Sun Yat Sen and the Awakening of China" is a captivating account of one of the great men of China and his experiences in starting the new Chinese Republic. The book tells us much about this Chinese patriot and the great country he has worked so hard to save. "The Pioneer Mothers of America" is a monumental work in three volumes that reflect great credit on its authors, Henry Clinton Green and Mary Wolcott Green A. B. Volumes upon volumes have been written about the pioneers of America but comparatively little is known about their wives and mothers. They were a sturdy band and helped in the field beside assuming the cares of the home.

No doubt many a pioneer was stimulated to some heroic conquest thinking of mother or wife. Heine says,—"When I read history and am impressed with any great deed, I feel as if I should like to see the woman who is concealed behind it as its secret incentive."

The women of the olden time had much to test their courage and when the testing time came they were not found wanting
"When greater perils men environ,
Then woman shows a front of iron;
And gentle in their manner they Do bold things in a quiet way."

"GUARD AGAINST FOREST FIRES."

THIS IS THE PLEA OF VARIOUS STATE ORGANIZATIONS IN CIRCULAR TO SCHOOL CHILDREN

What one match or cigaret will do toward ravaging our forests and burning up the woodlands of this state is vividly set forth in a circular issued and distributed this week among school children all over Massachusetts by the State Forestry Department in conjunction with the General Federation of Woman's clubs, the Boston Chamber of Commerce and the Mass. Forestry association.

Ways in which the school children can aid the work of preventing fires is explained, the circular being illustrated with cartoons from current publications emphasizing the immense loss wrought by unnecessary fires.

Some interesting figures have been compiled which prove the statements made in the circular. Official returns for the past three years show that forest fires in Massachusetts caused a damage of $823,968. Last summer there were 93 forest fires caused by clearing land and 1,110 were caused by the carelessness of individuals. It cost $42,719 of public money to put these fires out and caused a damage of more than $80,000.

CLIFF GORDON AT KEITH'S

As a character monologist, Cliff Gordon ranks today as the most exponent of this type of entertainment before the American public. His impersonation of "The German Senator" has become a classic, and has served to establish Mr. Gordon in the good graces of the amusement loving public. "The German Senator" provides more laughs to the minute than any other monologist who has ever visited B. F. Keith's theatre. Mr. Gordon comes to Boston after a long absence. Bill Macart of "The Sleeping Beauty and the Beast" fame and Ethalyn Bradford will present their latest and funniest comedy, "The Second Generation," for the first time in Boston. The Four Rianes have a unique acrobatic novelty, the scene of which is laid in a hotel in South Africa. Wilbur Mack and Nella Walker will present their latest

A NOVEL BY MAJOR BUTT

The second installment of "Both Sides of the Shield," by Maj. Archibald W. Butt, military aide and personal advisor to Presidents Taft and Roosevelt, and hero of the Titanic disaster last April, appears in this issue. This is the best of the stories by Major Butt, a splendidly written romance of love and war. He was possessed of no little literary ability and wrote many books before entering military life. No one should fail to read this celebrated story of romantic Southern life and adventure, a generous installment of which will appear weekly in this paper. You don't have to wait a month between each chapter. Get this week's paper at the news stand.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE

With the final presentations of "Martha" followed by "The Secret of Suzanne" at the matinee and in the evening "The Jewels of the Madonna" sung for the first time at popular prices, the fourth season of the Boston Opera Company will be brought to a close on Saturday night. From every standpoint, — artistically as well as financially it has been the most successful in the history of the organization.

While it is too early to announce definitely the novelties contemplated for the season of 1913-14. Director Russell is reasonably certain that Moussorgsky's "Boris Godunoff," Fevrier's "Monna Vanna," Massenet's "Le Jongleur de Notre Dame," Wagner's "Die Walkure" and Verdi's "The Masked Ball," will be the principal additions to the repertory. Among revivals will be possibly "La Sonnambula" and "The Elixir of Love."

Among the artists who are expected are Mme. Melba, Mme. Lipkowska and Mr. Baklanoff, favorites of former seasons who will return.

The same exchange arrangement will be in force between the Metropolitan and Boston companies and all the great stars of the New York organization including Mr. Caruso, will appear.

The advance sale for next season is now in full swing. On Tuesday last the annual drawing by stockholders of the company took place with the result that more than half of the entire seating capacity of the orchestra floor is taken for the Monday night and Saturday matinee performances.

From now on the subscription office at the Opera House will be open each day from 10 to 3 and diagrams may be consulted and arrangements made by subscribers. Until Monday, April 7, the sale will be confined to the $5, $4 and $3 seats; beginning on that date the $2, $1.50 and $1 tickets will be offered.

Navigation on the Osage.

One of the very crookedest streams anywhere is the Osage river in Missouri. In that region they tell of a farmer living on the banks of that river who had a small flatboat which one day he loaded with produce and floated down to market, six miles away. He exchanged the produce for goods at one of the stores and loaded his goods in the flatboat.

"How are you going to get your stuff home, Bill?" asked a friend. "Got a steamboat to tow you back?"

"I am going to float back," was the response.

"How are you going to do that? I don't understand."

"I guess you don't know much about this river. It doubles on itself just below here and runs back to within less than a quarter of a mile of my place. I've got a landing on both banks and a team of horses than can drag the boat over from one landing to the other."—Kansas City Journal.

Balkan Ballads.

In the Balkan countries the ballad makers have certainly been at least as important as the makers of laws. Serbia's national ballads, commemorating the glories of the Servian Emperor Dushan, the fatal battle of Kossovo and the legendary exploits of the hero Marko the boyevich and his horse Sharats, are of Homeric proportions and, sung to the accompaniment of a guitar with cords of horsehair tails, have kept national feeling warm for centuries. In recent years the Servian government published a popular edition. In Macedonia Sir Charles Elliot heard a schoolboy recite a Bulgarian poem which took an hour and a quarter, with a simple but significant plot. The pasha of Sofia summons a Bulgarian hero who is his friend and tells him he has orders to execute him. The Bulgarian asks why. The pasha says he does not know, but he must do it, and he does.—London Chronicle.

Floral Death Legends.

By the Mexicans marigolds are known as death flowers from an exceedingly appropriate legend that they sprang up on the ground stained by the life blood of those who fell victims to the love of gold and cruelty of the early Spanish settlers. Among the Virginian tribes, too, red clover was supposed to have sprung from and to be colored by the blood of the red man slain in battle with the white invaders. In a similar manner the red poppies which followed the plowing of the field of Waterloo were said to have sprung from the blood of the killed and wounded in that famous battle. According to tradition the Danish invasion is the cause of the daneweed, a coarse, asteraceous plant common in England, as it sprang from the blood of Danes slain in battle, and if cut on a certain day in the year it bleeds. The dwarf elder, for the same reason, is called danewort and dane-blood.—Suburban Life.

When Swinburne Was Ready.

A diverting picture of Swinburne, his frock coat bulging with manuscript, waiting to be asked to read aloud his latest poem, is given in Edmund Gosse's "Portraits and Sketches."

After floating about the room and greeting his host and hostess with many little becks of the head and affectionate smiles and light wavings of the fingers, he would settle at last upright on a chair, or by preference on a sofa, and sit there in a state of rigid immobility, the toes of one foot pressed against the heel of the other. Then he would say in an airy, detached way, as though speaking of some absent person, "I have brought with me my 'Thalassius' or my 'Wasted Garden' (or whatever it might happen to be), which I have just finished." Then he would be folded again in silence, looking at nothing. We then were to say, "Oh, do please read it to us! Will you?"

Pairing Off For Dinner.

The custom of walking to the dining room arm in arm, "taking a lady in to dinner," strange though it may seem, is comparatively modern, as prior to the middle of the eighteenth century it was the custom for the hostess to go in to dinner first, the ladies following in order of rank and the gentlemen after, all in single file, also in the order of rank, the host being last. This, however, gave rise to so many duels on questions of precedence both among the ladies and the gentlemen that the custom of "pairing off" was begun in order that no dispute might arise, it being one of the customs of society that no duel challenge could be given in the presence of the lady concerning whom the dispute had arisen.—New York American.

Medical Fees In Bygone Days.

At the beginning of the eighteenth century the usual fees to physicians and surgeons in England were "to a graduate in physick, his due is about 10 shillings, though he commonly expects or demands 20 shillings. Those that are only licensed physicians, their due is no more than 6s. 8d., though they commonly demand 10 shillings."

"A surgeon's fee is 12 pence a mile, be his journey near or far, 10 groats to set a bone broke or out of joint and for letting blood a shilling; the cutting or amputation of any limb is £5, but there is no settled fee for the cure." The system of regulating the fee according to the pocket of the patient is almost as old as history.—Westminster Gazette.

The Old Bedlam.

Bethlehem (pronounced Bedlam), the London lunatic asylum, was originally founded in 1247 as a priory, but is spoken of as a hospital for lunatics in 1472, and when the church was despoiled it was granted to the city of London as such an asylum. At one time the wretched inmates were exhibited to the public like so many wild beasts, as Pepys notes in his diary and Hogarth shows in one of his sketches. Patients that were harmless or half cured were given badges and released to beg on the streets. Edgar in "King Lear" impersonates one of these wandering Tom-o'-Bedlams.

Man's Dual Nature.

The professorial mind for all its acuteness is liable to occasional lapses, like less highly trained intellects. One amusing case in point is reported in the Philadelphia Public Ledger:

A certain professor was struggling to make the point that both parents have an equal influence upon a child.

"For," he continued gravely, "a man is as much the son of his father as he is the daughter of his mother."

Way to Apply For a Job.

Having lost three jobs for which he had applied, after he seemed in a fair way to get any one of them, a certain young man has figured out where he made his mistake.

"I referred to wages and hours before the interview was three minutes old," he explained.

Ordinarily the business world recognizes the right of the applicant to know how much money he is going to make each week and how long each day he will be expected to work and how many days a week. This is collective recognition.

The thorough business men will not close an interview until he has brought up the subject of pay and working hours. He wants it understood, of course, before he employs any one, but when the applicant makes the first mention of it a bad impression is created.—Chicago Tribune.

Reasonable Objection.

Conan Doyle was once asked why he didn't establish a detective agency and employ Sherlock Holmes' tactics in conducting the business. "For the very good reason," he replied, "that all the knots Sherlock Holmes untied were of my own tying. I should fail if I undertook to unravel other people's entanglements. I believe that on one occasion I could have done so, though. I was in a tailor shop when a, rather unattractive man was selecting a pair of trousers. He flatly objected to striped goods, and I got the idea that he was an ex-convict. To satisfy myself I visited one or two prisons and, sure enough, found the man's picture in the rogues' gallery. He had had enough of striped clothes."—Detroit Free Press.

His Aerial Flights.

"Henry," said Mrs. Hornbeak anxiously, "I ain't one of those people who worries very much, but I don't like the idea of our son Arthur becoming one of those bird men."

"Who said he was going to be an aviator?" asked Mr. Hornbeak.

"Well, here's Cousin Bill writing that we'd better put a curb on Arthur: says he's flying awful high for a young fellow."—London Express.

SYNOPSIS

Palmer, a Boston newspaper man, is sent to Georgia to report social and industrial conditions in a series of letters to his paper. Colonel Turpin, a southerner, thinks Palmer is a lawyer and has come to foreclose the Turpin plantation's mortgage.

He did not even say good morning. Indeed, he seemed to have dismissed me from his mind. With an indifferent bow I retired, wondering why managing editors think it a part of their official duties to be ill mannered. I was sorry that I had not asked him exactly what he wanted, but on this point I felt reasonably certain, however, for there was to be a presidential election the following year, and the more I thought of it the more certain I became that my letters were to be used to arouse sentiment in New England against the opposing party and thereby make certain the electoral vote of that section. My work would not only make certain the New England vote, but possibly save the vote of some of the middle western states. My father had been an abolitionist and his father before him. They had been called doctrinaires by their neighbors, but they had lived to see those principles become the nation's shibboleth. My father lived to modify many of his ideas, but I refused persistently to modify my views as they had been inculcated into me by my rugged old grandfather.

As I read the order of my assignment over again it seemed to me to be a command to charge the enemy. The old abolition blood was in my veins and was running at high tide. With feverish haste I made ready for my departure. Packing up a few things and putting my writing materials in my grip where I could the more easily get at them, I started for what I still looked upon as the enemy's country.

As I sped south the possibilities of a brilliant future arose before me. When I reached Baltimore I looked down from the window of the car and recalled the scenes enacted there, when my father was one of those stoned while on their way to the defense of their country. The day grew rapidly on, and as the train pulled into Washington the lofty dome of the capitol, bathed in the fresh light of an April morning, dispelled my resentful thoughts and led them back to the beautiful scenes which were always uppermost in my father's memory whenever he talked of the south and of the friends he had made there after the bitter days of the campaign were over. After leaving Washington every station became of interest, and there was no detail from which I did not draw some moral. I had determined to pierce the border states and seek for the information I desired from the land where the palmetto, the pine and the live oak live side by side. The windows of the car had been raised and through them came the bracing winds from the Blue Ridge, and I could catch occasionally the strange minor notes of the negroes at work in the fields. I was alive to every impression, and I took out my notebook to chain in my memory some of the passing scenes.

That evening I finished my first letter and mailed it from the train.

When I reached Atlanta I made inquiry as to the best means of reaching some of the outlying counties, where I could study the social and educational conditions of this people out of the beaten tracks and away from the thriving centers through which I had passed, and which, according to my preconceived opinions, were the result of northern capital or New England energy. I remained in the vicinity of this city for several days, making journeys into the country and taking notes of the field hands and making inquiry as to the wages paid and the amount of labor performed by the average hand. My zeal was unabated, and I was on the point of putting all my figures into a letter when my enthusiasm received a check that came near causing me to throw up my assignment, which I would have done without hesitation had I not feared it would mean a summary dismissal from the paper as well. On coming in from the factory district one afternoon I found a letter from the managing editor. It said:

We want facts. Your letter mailed on the train found useless and has been thrown in the wastebasket. If true, it was a very good editorial, but we do not want editorials from you. If you still have my order read it over and you will find in it nothing about the racial question or political problems. Study the white people, especially the families of the old regime, and bear in mind always that whatever you write will be copied there. Your letters, therefore, should be just and truthful, whatever else there may be. If you were an artist with the brush I should say paint a picture of some old colonial homesteads and antebellum plantations. Since you can't paint, write of them as they are. Bring the scenes in Georgia vividly before the people of Boston. They can draw their own conclusions. Let your pictures be of people and places only as you see them.

That was all, but it was sufficient to shatter my hopes and discourage all further attempts to make sure of the electoral vote of New England. Disconsolate and with a vague sense of my own ignorance, I boarded a train that night bound somewhere in a southerly direction—I did not know and I did not care where.

When I awoke the next morning the odor which filled every crevice of the car told me that I had entered the pine belt of Georgia during my sleep. I threw up my window and inhaled great drafts of fresh air. I felt invigorated and ready to carry out my assignment, no matter where it led me, the farther into the pine forests and out of the reach of managing editors, I thought, the better. Later in the day I left the main road and took the narrow gauge line which I was told followed the bed of the Savannah river and passed through several of the most historic counties of the state, rich in memories of the past and peopled mostly by remnants of the old colonial and antebellum families, who had in the past made them the most influential centers of the state.

The railroad wended its way through a beautiful rolling country studded with pines and cedars. The wild flowers grew up to the very tracks, and the earth seemed carpeted with soft, velvety moss. Through the pines I caught glimpses occasionally of state-ly old residences, with their gardens unkempt and the weeds growing in wild profusion. Where the fences had fallen they had been left to decay, but the fields were plowed and showed signs of cultivation at a cost of great labor.

We stopped at several stations, and around each there was an air of happy indolence that lent a charm to the dilapidated wooden sheds which stood for depots, and in front of these there was always to be seen some antiquated wagon or carryall. These latter were invariably filled with half grown boys and girls laughing and chattering like a lot of magpies as the train pulled up. They were there presumably to get the mail, but as I thought more likely to exchange bits of gossip and to find out what was "going on" down the road. I gave myself up to listening to their chatter, and I found myself wondering as the train would start again on its slow journey how many of these bright and innocent faces there would be at the next station to greet us. It would indeed take some time, I thought, to get a proper estimate of these people, whose clothes would indicate that they belonged to the farming and laboring classes, but whose conversation, accent and grammatical phrasing would lead one to be-

Have they represented a class better educated and with more culture than one is likely to discover in such out of the way counties as those through which we were now passing.

By degrees the few passengers who had taken this train got off, and toward the end of the journey there was no one in the coach but a venerable looking old gentleman and myself. He wore a long frock coat and an old fashioned silk hat. He represented a type I had begun to know and recognize. He seemed well known along the road. It was "Howdy, Colonel Turpin?" at every station now, and some one always asked, "How's Ellen?" His clean shaven face would wreath itself in a smile as invariably he would make answer:

"Ellen's well, but between the cooking and the music she has little time left to frolic with you young people."

"It's her own fault," said some one at one of the stations, "for all she has got to do is to choose which farm she prefers, that of Squire Hawkins or Jim Wadley's Hollyhurst." At this there was a burst of merriment from the young people in the wagons.

"Don't be putting such notions in my Ellen's head just now," he would laugh back. "Ellen and Bud have their old father and mother to look after for awhile yet, to say nothing of the Pines."

"Bud can do that by himself," called out one youth. Then he suddenly turned red and hung his head as he saw the girls casting their eyes from one to the other and laughing.

"I dare say there are others of us who have used that argument to Ellen before this and many a time," added another boy scarce out of his teens, "so you need not bother to repeat it, colonel."

By the time our train had started again I had determined to introduce myself to the colonel, for I saw material in him for a letter. By way of opening operations I asked him the distance to Oglethorpe station, where I had expected to leave the train.

"About five miles, sir," he said, and, with a courteous, old fashioned bow across the aisle, he added, "May I ask if you are bound there?"

I told him that was my destination. He then continued:

"If it be not too impertinent, may I ask you what takes you to such an out of the way place? You are not a lawyer from Atlanta, are you, sir?"

There seemed to me to be a note of alarm in the question, and he appeared greatly relieved and his face brightened visibly when I told him that I was not a lawyer and was visiting Georgia for the first time. I soon learned the cause of his anxiety as to the matter of my profession, for in a confidential whisper, which could have been heard throughout the car had there been others in it, he said:

"When smart looking young men like you come up this road they bring trouble with them usually and as often leave more behind, sir."

"How is that?" determined to burrow as deep as possible in this antebellum soil, which I believed to be rich from the wild and uncultivated growth of experience. "Don't smart looking men often come up this road?"

"Hardly ever but to foreclose some poor devil's mortgage." Here he began to laugh immoderately, and when his risibles had subsided sufficiently to explain, for I was somewhat surprised at his sudden burst of merriment, he said:

"I'll bet you a pine knot all sawed up against a bushel of potatoes that at a half dozen stations bets are being made right now that you have come up to foreclose the mortgage on the Pines. That's my place, you know. I'll have a good laugh at their expense when I go down the road again."

Red Tape In Germany.

The following is an illustration of the beauties of bureaucratic administration in Germany:

partment at Berlin, if a clerk wishes a new lead pencil, he must turn in to the proper authority the stump of the one that has become too short for further use. In one case a clerk received his new pencil without returning the end of the old one, and before this error was discovered this clerk had been transferred to another office. Shortly after the assumption of his duties at his new post this clerk received an official intimation that he had neglected to turn in his pencil end. By this time, however, the end had disappeared. In order to avoid official reprimand, the resourceful clerk purchased a new pencil, cut off a piece about the length of the missing end and dispatched it to the stationery department. Everybody was accordingly satisfied. — Harper's Weekly

NEW ENGLAND WOULD LOSE

"When we lose the business of Massachusetts as the result of tariff revision we may never get it back again," said Senator Weeks recently, and the warning is indeed a timely one. Should incompetent legislation put the bars down on our cottons, woolens and shoes, practically the entire industry of this section would be reduced to a minimum.

These three industries are the biggest asset of New England. We can lose them very easily, for competition in other parts of the country in the manufacture of these products is reaching a white heat. St. Louis is a shoe center of no little prestige and even in the far West New England finds a strong competitor in the boot and shoe trade. The South, with its fuel and raw materials close at hand, is building cotton factories.

Industry to herself, but radical changes in the tariff may work disaster in this business.

Our competitors have everything in their favor. They are nearer the base of supplies and they need not worry about finding competent labor, for if New England's industries should dwindle labor would emigrate from this section in the same ratio as we lost our industries. The cotton operatives would not stay here; they would go to the mills elsewhere. It would be the same with the shoe workers. A good indication of such an emigration was instanced 25 years ago when the New England farmers moved into the West to till the lands there.

We have lost our merchant marine, and if there is radical tariff revision we will lose about everything that is worth while.

THE MIDNIGHT TRAINS

With a report on the first month's business of the three new midnight trains from Boston it is doubtful if they will be continued beyond the test period of three months ordered by the Railroad Commissioners. During the remainder of this month and April it is up to the public to demonstrate by their patronage of these trains whether they are necessary or not. There is no doubt but what they are a great convenience for many, but if the business does not improve they may have to be dropped.

The experiment of the midnight trains is not a little interesting, however. On a report covering 22 mornings a total of 7,482 passengers were carried from the North and South terminals. The heaviest patronage of the three was on the New Haven train leaving for Quincy, Brockton and way stations. This train carried 2,974 passengers on the 22 mornings, an average of 134 each trip.

The B. & M. Portland division train for Haverhill and way stations carried an average of 102 per trip. The average revenue was $22.04 per trip.

The Southern division train for Lowell carried an average of 104.

Saturday nights and February 22, a holiday, showed the biggest patronage, and it is possible, that although the trains may not be continued regularly after April 30, they may be run on Saturdays and holidays.

TO HELP THE "JAILBIRD"

The idea that the "jailbird" has no place in society is costing the government many thousands yearly, and Governor Foss' plea for a better parole system should encourage such a reform. The present system is not a success, as paroles are generally granted on the say-so of one man; also, too many parole men are obliged to go back to prison because they have been made worse possibilities for society than when they were first committed.

The problem of starting the parole prisoner in life after he leaves jail is a great one. It is for the best interests of society, however, that this be attempted in some methodical manner, for it costs money to keep prisoners in confinement and more to send them back.

Many of the prisoners would never return to jail were it not for the prison stigma hanging over their heads. Others are inoculated with that depravity which bids them spend their lives behind four walls. But those who would support themselves honestly should have some chance of helping themselves before they come from jail.

As the Governor states, every man should have work found for him before he leaves prison. This will cost money, but if we are going to spend thousands of dollars for police, courts and prisons; we might spend something for the restoration of those who have been imprisoned.

When a million people evince a serious interest in the "farming specials" that have been sent out for the last few years all over the country by the state universities and agricultural colleges it is evident that this means of diffusing knowledge has its merits and must go a long way toward aiding the tiller of the soil. It is bringing the university to the people, and this year it is hoped that two million persons will have an opportunity of witnessing the exhibits of these trains, hearing the lecturers and making use of the varied printed matter that is distributed. Last year the trains toured over 31 states from Maine to Texas and proved to be one of the most promising agencies of rural betterment.

The "public opinion bill" that has just gone through the House would seem to give the voters the best and most sensible method of indicating to their representatives their wishes in regard to special matters of legislation. The measure provides that upon petition of 1200 voters in any senatorial district or 200 in any representative district, asking for the submission to the voters of that district any question of instructions the Secretary of the Commonwealth shall determine if such question is one of public policy, and if so, shall draft it in such simple, unequivocal and adequate form as he shall deem best suited for presentation on the ballot at the next election.

There has long been a question as to how far the people of a district should be able to advise their senators and representatives, and this "public opinion" bill seems to be the proper thing, chiefly because it is less radical than the so-called "initiative." It is a safe, practical way for the public to voice its opinions, and does not admit of factional exploits or their advancement.

"The pedestrian's right is supreme," says Mayor Harrison of Chicago in speaking of reckless automobile chauffeurs. ## Town Affairs

WITH THE MANCHESTER BOARD
OF SELECTMEN AND OTHER
TOWN OFFICIALS

The selectmen made no appointments at their meeting Tuesday evening. The three positions to be filled are: Chief of Police, Moth Supt. and Caretaker of Tuck's Point. For the first named office there are seven or eight applications. In all probability these offices will be filled at the meeting next Tuesday evening.

The board voted to accept the offer of Mrs. Walter D. Harris of a small piece of land at the junction of Proctor and Masconomo streets. Her property at that point, on the southerly corner, comes to a point. Mrs. Harris proposed to round the corner, thus giving the town a very small strip. The work of improving Proctor street has been started.

It is of interest to note that 15 years ago this month Manchester voted for license by a vote of 163 to 126. The town had gone no-license before that for 14 years, and it has gone no-license ever since. Fifteen years ago the town spent $10,000 for care of streets, against $25,000 now and $1,900 for street lights, against $8,000 now.

The committee on new almshouse met Monday evening at the Selectmen's room and organized with Roland C. Lincoln as chairman and H. T. Bingham, secy. These two with F. J. Merrill and Alfred C. Hooper and the board of overseers of the poor constitute the committee. Definite plans will be formulated and will be presented to the town at a special meeting.

The adjourned town meeting will be held Monday evening, April 7, at 7.30 o'clock.

Supt. of Streets Crombie has had a large force of men at work this week, when weather permitted, cleaning up the streets all over town.

Children's Day at the Manchester Woman's club will be observed Tuesday, April 1st. The entertainment is "Golden Hair and the Three Bears." Ice cream and cake will be served to the children. Mrs. Wm. Hooper is hostess.

PRETTY HOME WEDDING

A pretty home wedding was solemnized Thursday at noon, when Miss Marion Gertrude Scott, the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Scott, of Norwood avenue, Manchester, was united in marriage to Paul B. Webber of Bedford. Owing to the recent serious illness of the bride the wedding was a quiet affair and was attended by only the immediate families of the young couple.

The officiating clergyman was Rev. David C. Torrey of Bedford. The double ring ceremony was used. There were no attendants.

The bride was very handsome in a gown of white satin, with trimmings of old silk chantilly lace. She wore a veil, which was caught up with a little pin of pearl. She carried lilies-of-the-valley.

The Lohengrin wedding march was played by G. Allyn Brown, organist of the Baptist church.

The groom's gift to the bride was a very pretty coral ornament, attached to a gold chain, for the neck. The room was attractively decorated with palms, ferns, smilax, roses and carnations.

Mr. and Mrs. Webber rode away in an automobile and after a short stay in Natick will take up their residence in their new home in Bedford. They have the best wishes of a large circle of friends in Manchester.

BASEBALL ASSOCIATION MEETING

A meeting of the Manchester baseball association will be held next Tuesday evening in Lee's hall, when the plans for the summer will be further talked over. Dr. Tyler, the manager, met about fourteen candidates for the team last Tuesday evening and talked over some of the A. B. C.'s of the game. It is hoped a large number will attend the meeting next Tuesday evening.

MARBLEHEAD DANCE HALL

George H. Fanning, architect, has completed plans for the alteration of the Ferncroft cabin, Fort Sewall, Marblehead, into a dance hall. The roof will be trussed, the posts removed, 3000 feet of maple floor laid, and an addition built. The cabin has always been considered the most unique dining resort on the North Shore.

MANCHESTER

Mrs. George Fisher (Dora Chaffin) of Plainfield, N. J., who has been visiting her aunt, Mrs. F. P. Knight, entertained last Saturday evening the members of her class (1898) of the Story High school, and of the classes of 1897 and 1899, together with the husbands and wives. It also served as the 15th anniversary of the graduation and the first reunion. It was in 1897 that the course at the high school was changed from three to four years. Of the seven members of 1898, four were present last Saturday night — Mrs. Fisher, Miss Grace M. Prest, Frank A. Rowe and J. A. Lodge. The other three members are: Mrs. Rebecca (Andrews) Hodges of Indianapolis; Henry O. Allen, who is vice-president of a large printing corporation in New York city, and Roscoe Bohaker of Swampscott, who is connected with the Boston & Maine, in Boston. The members of 1897 present were: Mrs. Eliza (Watson) Joyce of Gloucester; Mrs. Rita (Crombie) Mitchell, and Mrs. Edith (Wheaton) Williams. Mrs. Helen (Catheron) Bullock, the only member of 1899, was also there. Others present were: Mrs. Rowe, Mrs. Lodge, Mr. Bullock and Mr. Williams. Mr. and Mrs. Leon W. Carter (the former was of 1898 but did not graduate) completed the party. A letter was read from Mrs. Hodges, filled with reminiscences. The party proved a most enjoyable occasion. Mrs. Fisher has now gone to Buckfield, Me., to visit her mother.

DR. SOUTHAND OF WELLESLEY LECTURES BEFORE ARBELLA CLUB

The semi-monthly meeting of the Arbella club of Manchester was held Tuesday afternoon in the chapel and was, as usual, well attended. Dr. Southand of Wellesley gave the third of her series of talks on "Personal Hygiene." The president, Miss Mildred Peart presided. Miss Annie L. Lane rendered two selections on the piano.

Miss Ruth Blaisdell was hostess of the afternoon. Cocoa, sandwiches and cakes were served.

The next meeting will be held on Monday afternoon, April 7, in the chapel, when Dean Arnold of Simmons College will be the speaker.

At the probate court in Salem Tuesday the will of the late Harriet P. Allen was proved, Hattie L. Harris, executrix.

On the evening of Saturday, April 5, from 7.30 to 10.30, Dr. and Mrs. Blaisdell will be at home to all who may wish to call, it being the thirtieth (30th) anniversary of their marriage. The affair will be informal.

Harry T. Swett and Ernest H. Wilcox of the local postoffice were under examination last week by C. H. Collins, chief clerk of the railroad postoffice division, and each passed with a marking of 100 per cent. efficiency. The items covered by the examination are: 10 cases used for assorting; No. pieces handled 874, correct 874, time consumed 33 minutes, per cent. correct, 100.

PARENT-TEACHER ASSOCIATION TO MEET

The several Parent-Teacher associations of Gloucester are to hold a union meeting at Gloucester City hall, Wednesday afternoon, April 2, at 2.30 o'clock, when Mr. George C. Frolick, a very able and enthusiastic speaker, will present the subject of "Home Hygiene."

All members and friends of the Manchester association are cordially invited to be present at this meeting.

MASTER BUILDERS' MEET

A meeting of the North Shore Master builders' association was held Tuesday evening at the Board of Trade rooms in Beverly. Routine business was transacted. The association has voted to establish permanent headquarters at Salem, but the committee appointed to look up quarters did not report at the meeting. It is understood that an offer has been made in connection with the Salem Board of Trade rooms which would provide a central place of meeting and every convenience for the members of the association.

"Fundamental Facts in Child Life" Subject of Talk of Miss Alexander

The meeting of the Parent-Teacher association in Manchester on Wednesday evening of last week ought to result in much good to the community, if the talk by Miss Agnes Alexander is heeded. Miss Alexander is a Gloucester young woman engaged in the work of the Boston Children's Friend society. Her talk was clear and to the point, only as one intimately acquainted with the work could give. She said in part:

"Our society was founded in 1837 and is the oldest society in Massachusetts that cares for both boys and girls. It was formed by a group of Protestant people, so that they might help the children of the tenement districts. After a struggle we began to go forward, soon erecting two large buildings, one on Rutland street, Boston, for girls, and the other in Dedham for boys.

"But institutional life is not the life for children. We now place children in homes that seem to fit the case of the child. Some times we make a misfit, but not often. The children are in charge of supervisors, there being some sixty children under my charge alone, their ages averaging from two years to 22. When I have a child of five years of age, I can see what kind of training it has had in its own home. A child at the age of five years should be able to button its own shoes, dress itself and know what absolute obedience is. We have some children in families for adoption, but not often. This reminds me of a case of adoption I had recently. A lady came to the home and said she wanted to adopt a boy child. I asked her if she would take a fine little child of Swedish parents. She put her hands up in horror and said, 'Oh! no. I could not do such a thing!' I asked her to explain why she could not have a Swedish child and this is what she said: 'Because when he grew up, I could not be able to understand his language.' This only goes to show how inadequate some people are to bringing up a child in the correct manner.

"One must be clean physically and spiritually in order to bring up a child rightly. The child can do far better work in school if given a fair chance at home. Often there are weak-minded children in the school with good bright scholars and it causes trouble. There is a good school for the feeble-minded children at Waverly and the children do far better work together than they would separated in various schools. They get a better show and really do far better work.

"The mothers of girls make grave mistakes in not explaining the things a girl should know. Girls should not be obliged to find out all these sacred things concerning nature on the street. They should be told at home in a quiet way. The boy should be taught the same way. When he begins to find the mysteries of life the father should take him and tell him the right and wrong of life. He should not say as one father said to me, 'Let him find out for himself as I found out.' The child should be so instructed that were the parents taken from him he would be able to go on in life as he was started in the home. If the parent would study the child, the work of our teachers in the schools would be far more easy.

"The teacher needs to know the training the child has received in the home. The teacher should know the conditions under which the child lives. They should know each others' point of view. If the mother will make her child the best child possible, there will be but little doubt but what the child will succeed in her school work. You should all teach your children so that were your life taken from them, they would grow up, meet their responsibilities and win.

"These meetings of the parents and teachers result in much good. You really ought to understand each other: get the 'other point of view.'"

The High school orchestra furnished the music of the evening, playing "Messidor," by Fulton, and "Dance of the Frowsey Heads" by Story.

Previous to Miss Alexander's talk Mrs. D. T. Beaton, who is a vice-president of the Massachusetts branch of the Congress of Mothers, spoke of the convention of the National Congress to be held in Boston May 15—20. Plans are being made for 1500 delegates, she said. There are 10 committees, each numbering from 12 to 50 members. There will be many fine speakers from home and abroad.

President Fred Smith of the Manchester Athletic association—recently formed, but not yet in working order, told of the plans. "You have your Girls' club, your Men's club and your Women's club, but you have left your young men and boys to run around the streets and be a nuisance to everyone in town," said Mr. Smith by way of introduction. "We have now 40 members, and we meet as often as our funds permit, in the Town hall, at $5.00 a meeting. We hope to get a smaller hall soon and meet twice a week. We are trying to get along with a make-shift through the summer, but we hope to get a building ready by fall." He then outlined the plans of the association, which we previously printed in the Breeze. In short, it is hoped to get a building that would provide a reading room and gymnasium, with classes for the younger boys and for the older boys and men, and to hold basket ball games, athletic exhibitions and the like.

The meeting was well attended and was enjoyed by everyone present. Mrs. John Baker, the president, presided. The evening was brought to a close by a social hour, during which light refreshments were served.

POLITICS IN THE SCHOOLS

School teachers throughout the state should be interested in a bill now pending in the Legislature, introduced by former Senator Roger Sherman Hoar. This bill, Senate 207, is intended to prevent the political manipulation of school teachers by school committees. Several of the school committees of the state have passed so-called gag-rules, prohibiting political activity by teachers. These gag-rules are enforced against teachers whose political activity is not in accord with the views of the committee, and are suspended to permit activity which the committee desires. The bill in question aims to put a stop to this.

This bill was unanimously reported by the Legislative Committee on Education and has passed the House of Representatives with only a handful of votes in opposition. It is now pending in the Senate. It has received the endorsement and active support of the Massachusetts Teachers' Federation, the Boston Transcript, Boston Post, Boston Globe, Boston Traveler-Herald and Boston Journal. The teachers of this community should acquaint themselves with the matter and send in their views at once to the local Senator.

AN EASTER WEDDING

Miss Mary A. Leary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Leary of Manchester and James E. Slattery of Salem, were united in marriage at the parochial residence of the Sacred Heart church Sunday, March 23rd, at 2.30 o'clock by Rev. Mark J. Sullivan. The bride was attended by her sister Miss Margaret E. Leary and the best man was Edward F. Gerrity of Salem. The bride was becomingly attired in embroidered white voile, the wedding veil being caught up with orange blossoms. The bride carried white ivory prayer book and rosary, her corsage bouquet was white pinks. The groom is a Salem young man employed by the Cobb, Bates & Yerxa Co. Among the numerous gifts to the couple was a buffet from his fellow employes. Many valuable and useful presents of cut glass and silver were received from their many relatives and friends. Following the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents on Tappan street at which there were guests from Boston, Somerville, Lynn, Salem, Peabody, Beverly and Manchester numbering 75. After the reception, the couple departed on a wedding trip and on their return will reside in Salem.

A PROGRESSIVE NEWSPAPER Springfield Republican

MASSACHUSETTS

HONESTLY DEVOTED TO THE SERVICE OF THE PEOPLE

Independent of Selfish Political, Personal or Financial Influences

COURAGEOUS, ENTERPRISING. INTERESTING

ESTABLISHED IN 1824 BY SAMUEL BOWLES.

DAILY (morning) $8; SUNDAY $2; WEEKLY $1 a Year.

The Springfield Republican stands for political progress and social justice. It has stood for these causes consistently and strongly during the 88 years of its career. It stands also for honesty in all of the relations of life, personal, political, commercial, industrial, national and inter-national. It considers that honesty is an essential basis of real political progress and social justice. It refuses to follow popular leaders who lack this fundamental virtue, however captivating and eloquent.

The Republican has a profound faith in democratic institutions, but it recognizes clearly that the safeguard of a progressive democracy is universal education, developing an enlightened electorate, which may deal justly with the difficult problems that modern civilization presents. It looks forward, through the agency of such an electorate, to an increasing restraint of the aggrandizing activities of powerful individuals and groups, to the end that there may be a juster distribution of the fruits of labor and a fuller realization of the ideal of the commonwealth.

The Republican seeks to embody its principles in its own service to the people as a newspaper. It strives ever to deal with its public honesty in its presentation of the news of the day. It tells no tales to promote its sales. It aims to educate, to enlighten and uplift its readers; and yet to interest and entertain them by honest methods. Its editorial page is one of the strongest, keenest, broadest, in the country. It deals with all the subjects that concern humanity in the spirit of helpfulness, of healthier, happier living.

The Republican gives a news service that is real, not flashy. It commands the best agencies for its general news, often supplemented by special correspondence. It covers its home territory with remarkable thoroughness, and it liberal treatment to literature and to the arts, sciences and industries. The Sunday Republican is especially rich in delightful literary and other diverting features and departments.

THE WEEKLY REPUBLICAN

Presents in 16 broad pages the best editorial, literary and special features of the seven daily issues, with carefully edited and rewritten summaries of the important news of the week. It is an excellent home journal for intelligent people who wish to keep abreast of the best thought of the times, as well as of the news of the day, and it costs only ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

PLANS FOR GREAT PAGEANT IN JUNE AT SALEM

Preparations are being made in Salem for the presentation of a mammoth pageant which will show the history of the city from the time of the arrival of Roger Conant and his followers in 1626, to the present day. The presentation of the pageant will begin June 13 and will continue through the next three days.

More than 3000 actors will participate in the tableaux, which will be staged on the Kernwood estate.

Among the episodes to be represented will be: The coming of John Endicott and his company in 1628 in the ship Abigail; the early Puritan life with the forming of the first church; the persecution of the Quakers; the "Witchcraft Period;" the coming of Gen. Gage to hold court in Salem; the great ball given in his honor; the forming of the first Provincial congress; the dramatic episode of the beginning of the Revolution, known, as "Leslie's Retreat," in which a regiment of British soldiers were driven back by the townspeople in an attempt to capture guns owned by individuals; two episodes from the commercial life at Salem after the Revolution when the ships of Salem bore the American flag into almost every large foreign port in the world, and the return of the ships bringing treasure from many lands.

EASTER AT THE MANCHESTER CHURCHES

Easter was observed at the Manchester churches last Sunday with appropriate exercises. At both the Congregational and Baptist churches the preachers delivered Easter sermons in the morning, and the evening service was given over to Easter concerts by the children. At the Sacred Heart church, too, special music was rendered by the choir, which, with the assistance of the new organ rendered the singing this year more effective than ever.

Through the kindness of one of the summer residents a plant was presented to every member of the Congregational S. S.

The following program was given at the Congregational church Sunday evening at 7 o'clock:

S. OF V. ANNIVERSARY

"The spirit of graft and anarchy which is prevalent today is more to be feared than war," said Past Div. Patriotic Instructor Cook in a speech Tuesday evening at the anniversary of Col. H. P. Woodbury camp, S. of V., at Manchester. "The spirit of fair-ism is even more dangerous than all else. In Illinois there is a movement gaining headway for the standardization of women's wages." Mr. Cook claimed that the heads of the large business firms were at the front in such movements and that out of the controversies the business men hoped to reap the benefits to the detriment of the workers under them.

"In politics you find bad men just as you find them in church," said Mr. Cook. "We must meet these conditions just as our fathers met them; not in battle, but in peace. Fight, yet with the spirit of our fathers. Then some measure of right will reign."

A general good time was enjoyed by the large number present. Music and refreshments helped to round out the evening's festivities.

MANCHESTER WOMAN'S CLUB ENTERTAINMENT

The concert program given in the Manchester Town hall Wednesday evening under the auspices of the Manchester Woman's club was one of extreme merit, the artists acquitting themselves admirably. The program was varied, embracing light snatches such as Pinsuti's "Spring song" and music of the heavier type as instanced in selection from Lucia di Lammermoor.

Mrs. Maud Huntington Benjamin established herself as a reader of no little merit in her offerings. Her work, "cmf cmf mamohamohamoco transition from Tennyson's difficult poems which delighted her auditors later on the program made her work among the most delightful of the whole evening.

Faith will move mountains, but it takes industry to pay a debt.

"The Great Teacher" will be the subject of the morning sermon at the Village church on Sunday. A special program of sacred instrumental music has been arranged for the evening service.

"The Value of Knowledge" will be the topic for the Christian Endeavor meeting this evening at the Village church.

The Ladies' Aid society met with Mrs. Fred Dunbar on Thursday afternoon.

A little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Swanson met with a very painful accident the first of the week. While playing with matches her clothes caught on fire badly burning her lower limbs. She is resting as comfortably as can be expected.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Walter Scott are receiving congratulations on the arrival of a little daughter in their home on Englewood road, March 22.

James Chane of Boston was the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Chane the first of the week.

We are pleased to report that Charles Wilkinson is now able to be out of doors after his recent illness.

All were greatly pleased with the new bell which was installed at the Village church last week and was rung for the first time on Easter Sunday.

Mrs. Frank Abbott and daughter, Bessie and Laura are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Roy French at Everett, this week.

The many friends of Allen MacDuff are pleased to hear that he has returned to Magnolia for the summer.

The old fashioned baked bean supper and green party held at the Men's club on Monday evening under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid society was a grand success. A large number of guests were present from Boston, Manchester and Gloucester. Supper was served from 6 to 8 o'clock followed by dancing from 8 to 11.45 o'clock. Music was furnished by Chane's orchestra. The assembly hall was very prettily decorated with streamers of green and white, making a very beautiful scene as the young ladies and their escorts danced merrily to and fro. Mrs. Lafayette Hunt

NEW HAVEN'S DOUBLE TASK.

A double task has been imposed upon the management of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company. Besides the work of maintaining efficiency and improving facilities, the attention of the officials has been diverted by the added responsibility of answering and refuting the recent attacks upon the company. Their efforts to meet the arguments of the critics and to allay the possibility of public distrust are inspired both by a desire to overcome the demoralizing influence upon the employees of the company that these attacks have had and also by the natural inclination to protect their own interests, for no man relishes the thought of having a bomb thrown at his business.

Whatever may be the motives behind the attacks, the New Haven management makes no denial that they have seriously affected the efficiency of the road, besides resulting in incalculable injury to the interests of industrial New England. Both President Charles S. Mellen of the New Haven and Mr. Lucius Tuttle, formerly president of the Boston and Maine railroad, attribute the origin of the opposition to the New Haven to the purchase by that Company of Boston & Maine stock. President Mellen aptly traces back also these attacks to Louis D. Brandeis, who, he claims, for ulterior purposes, has "assailed by underground campaigns and publicly by irresponsible mouth-pieces, the integrity of the management."

The attack on Mr. Mellen are really attacks on his well defined policy in providing an efficient railroad system for New England.

It was because he was attacked so viciously and indiscriminately for carrying out his policies that President Mellen departed from his custom of devoting his whole time to the business of the New England railroad system and recently wrote the letter to the Boston American. In this letter he explained in detail his policy regarding the New England transportation system. In addition to this many other efforts have been made to restore public confidence, for the success of his policies and the continued prosperity and development of industrial New England are inter-dependent upon the ability of the New Haven to command credit and to keep its financial skirts clear.

He is a true friend who will listen to our troubles without telling us how much worse off he has been.

Miss Helen Keller the Blind and Deaf Girl is in Boston Lecturing.

The accompanying picture of Miss Helen Keller and her companion, (Mrs. Macy), was printed in the Breeze several years ago at the time the summer salesroom, "The Handicraft Shop for the Blind" was opened in Manchester. Standing on the little green in the square, in front of the shop, Miss Keller delivered a brief speech to the large number of townspeople and summer residents present. Since then the shop has been torn down and the salesroom is now located on Bridge street.

This is of interest at the present time because Miss Keller and her companion are in Boston and during the past few days have propounded the doctrines of Socialism to thousands of people in that city from the platform of Tremont Temple. As she stated in her lecture in that auditorium Monday night she is not of "the parlor type of Socialists." To quote her, she is "a sure-enough one."

Miss Keller is also a suffragist, because, as she says, "I love justice and fair dealing. Socialism won't destroy incentive—incentive is merely a desire for food, clothes, happiness. It won't make people lazy, but I think it's time the workers had a chance to be lazy. Really, the lazy ones will not get the cake under Socialism as they do now."

COULDN'T ESCAPE

He was one of those timid, tiny-toned chaps who become enamored by mistake, and live in perpetual fear of a pending engagement ring. He himself had become enamored of a sweet and soulful maiden, whose languishing expression tore him between delight and fear.

At the conclusion of his first "call" she asked:

"When are you coming again, dear?"

He seized the wrong hat from the rack in his confusion.

"Er — what about some time next week?" he hazarded.

A look of disappointment came into the fair one's eyes.

"Next week?" she said. "Yes, that will do lovely! Come round tomorrow night, dear, and we'll decide definitely upon the day." — Answers

It is Just as Natural for a Woman to Want

NEW RUGS at this season of the year as it for the trees to bud in the spring. And as the trees in the richest soil bring forth the prettiest buds, so do rugs which come from the best mills show forth the prettiest colors and designs. So when you go rug hunting, as you doubtless will do, just find out who makes the rugs looked at. If from some small mill no one ever heard about just pass them by and come here and look at the "known" kind. We've patterns by the score this spring for selecting, all goods for any use one wants to put them and we've prices to sell them that will keep them going out just as soon as the weather starts you looking. We've what we believe is THE BEST AMERICAN MADE RUG that we will sell you this spring for

$42.00

We've the best line of medium rugs and the patterns are so pretty. They'll look so, too, for many years of hard wear.

PERSONAL.

We have the pleasure of announcing that our sales force has been most efficiently augmented by Edgar C. Graves of Waltham, who has associated himself with us as a salesman. Mr. Graves comes to Salem with many years of practical experience in and knowledge of the business of furnishing homes. For 31 years he was connected with the large house-furnishing house of P. H. Graves & Son of Waltham. Later he was a salesman in the furniture departments of Jordan, Marsh & Co. and Henry Siegel & Co., thus giving to him a comprehensive and valuable knowledge, not only of the furniture profession, but also of the prices at which furniture is sold in the city of Boston. For the past thirteen summers he has been a resident at Juniper Point, where he has made many acquaintances and friends. We know that the competent and reliable service which A. C. TITUS & CO. have always given to their widely extended patronage, will be strengthened by the addition to it of Mr. Graves.

A Practical-Suit Case Umbrella

The spring rains are here, and the time of summer traveling is fast approaching. Have you a good Umbrella—one which need not be left at home when you go on a trip?

This Suit-case Umbrella is the most convenient and practical umbrella made. It may be folded as shown in the picture and readily carried in a suit-case or trunk. When folded it measures just 26 inches. The handle and tip are so arranged that they screw firmly in place when the umbrella is desired for use, the change taking but a moment to make. The umbrella is covered with finest quality silk. The handle is mission wood with Sterling Silver cap.
